This was a petition by C. H. C. Plowden, praying a declaration that an indenture of the 7th of December, 1813, did not, as to the hereditaments therein comprised, operate as a revocation of the will of a testator under the circumstances in the petition thereafter stated; and that it might be declared that the legal estate in the same hereditaments descended upon the death of the said testator to his heir-at-law as a trustee for the devisee then named, and that it might be declared that the hereditaments comprised in a deed of the 9th of November 1811, [illegible] vised by the will of the [illegible] testator [illegible] that if the Court should be of opinion that the devise of the last-mentioned hereditaments was revoked by the said conveyance of the 9th of November 1811, then that it might be declared that the heir was bound to elect between the said last-mentioned hereditaments and the moneys to which he would otherwise become entitled under the same will by virtue of the bequest to his father, J. C. Plowden; and that the heir might be ordered to join in certain conveyances to a Mr. G. M. W. Peacocke, a purchaser. The facts of the case as they appeared upon the petition, and which were not, in fact, disputed, appeared to be as follows. In the year 1809, Henry Chichely Plowden mortgaged in fee certain hereditaments in the parish of Boldre, forming the greater part of an estate called the Newton Park Estate. He afterwards paid off that mortgage. By indentures of the 22nd and 23rd April, 1811, these hereditaments were conveyed to uses to bar dower "to the use of such person or persons, and for such estate or estates, and in such parts, shares, or proportions, manner or form, and either with or without power of revocation and new appointment, as he the said Henry Chichely Plowden shall by deed or will direct, limit, or appoint; and in default of such direction, limitation, or appointment, or until any such shall be made and take effect, and as to such estate or interest as shall not be directed, limited, or appointed to the use of the said Henry Chichely Plowden and his assigns for and during the term of his natural life, without impeachment of waste; and after the determination of that estate by any means in his lifetime, to the use of John Dynley, his executors, administrators, and assigns, during the life of the said Henry Chichely Plowden upon trust, nevertheless, for the only benefit of the said Henry Chichely Plowden and his assigns, to the intent that any wife of the said Henry Chichely Plowden may be excluded from all dower or thirds, or right and title to dower or thirds of and in the said premises; and from and immediately after the determination of the said estate hereby limited to the said John Dynley, his executors, administrators, and assigns, to the use of the said Henry Chichely Plowden, his heirs and assigns for ever.' Henry Chichely Plowden shortly after this borrowed of Wm. Newton a sum of 3,000*l.* secured on mortgage of this estate, and thereupon by indentures of lease and release, dated the 30th April and 1st May, 1811, after reciting the indentures of lease and release of the 22nd and 23rd April, 1811, the said Henry Chichely Plowden, in consideration of the sum of 3,000*l.* so advanced by said Wm. Newton, appointed and conveyed the estate to Newton in fee, subject to a proviso for redemption, by which it was declared and agreed that if the said Henry Chichely Plowden, his heirs, appointees, administrators, or assigns should pay or cause to be paid unto the said Wm. Newton, his executors, administrators, and assigns, the sum of 3,000*l.* with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, on the 1st November then next ensuing, then the said Wm. Newton, his heirs and assigns, and all and every other person and persons claiming under him or them, should and would, upon the request, and at the proper costs and charges of the said Henry Chichely Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, reconvey and reassure the hereditaments and premises unto the said Henry Chichely Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, or to such person or persons as he or they should direct, free from incumbrances. In the year 1809, certain lands called Hornscroft, at South Baddeley, in the county of Southampton, were put to sale by auction, and H. Chichely Plowden became the purchaser of lot 1, for the sum of 1,800*l.* This lot comprised the freehold land and hereditaments after mentioned, and also certain leaseholds. No written contract for the purchase was produced on the hearing, nor was any evidence given of the exact time of the contract. On the 15th May, 1811, H. C. Plowden executed his will, whereby he devised to John Dynley, his heirs and assigns, "all and every my messuages, land, tenements, and hereditaments, and all other my real estate whatsoever, or which I have contracted to purchase, situate in or near the parishes of Boldre and South Baddeley, in the county of Southampton, or elsewhere in England, or to which I, or any person or persons in trust for me, am, is, or are seised or entitled for any estate of freehold and inheritance, or of freehold only, in possession, reversion, or expectancy, or which I have power to dispose of or appoint by this my will, with their rights, members, and appurtenances, to hold to the said John Dynley and his heirs, to the use of the testator's wife, during so long as she should continue his widow, and other the determination of that estate to certain trustees, upon trust to sell and divide the produce into fifteen parts, and pay the same to the parties therein named. By this will it was provided that James Chichely Plowden was to receive four fifteen parts of the produce.

By an indenture dated the 9th November, 1811 (with the usual indenture of lease), after reciting that the freeholds and leaseholds forming the estate of Hornscroft had been put up to sale, and that Henry Chichely Plowden had been declared the highest bidder for and purchaser thereof, at the price of 1,800*l.* and that it had been agreed that the hereditaments intended to be thereby conveyed, and forming the freehold part thereof, were of the value of 10 l. and that it had been agreed that the said sum of 100*l.* should be the apportioned part of the said sum of 1,800*l.* to be paid in respect of and as the purchase and consideration money for the pieces of land and hereditaments thereinafter mentioned and expressed to be thereby conveyed; it was witnessed that in pursuance of the said agreement, and in consideration of 100*l.* paid as therein mentioned, certain persons therein mentioned conveyed unto the said H. C. Plowden, his heirs and assigns, the said hereditaments called Hornscroft, to hold unto the said H. Chichely Plowden, his heirs and assigns, to such uses as the said H. Chichely Plowden should appoint, and in default of, and until and subject to any such appointment to the use of the said Henry Chichely Plowden and his assigns for his life, and after the determination of that estate by any means in his lifetime to the use of the said John Dynley, his executors, administrators, and assigns, during the life of the said H. C. Plowden, upon trust for the benefit of the said H. C. Plowden, and to the intent that any wife of the said H. C. Plowden might be excluded from dower, and other the determination of the estate so limited to the said John Dynley to the use of the said Henry Chichely Plowden, his heirs and assigns, with remainder to the use of the said John Dynley, his executors, administrators, and assigns, during the life of the said Henry Chichely Plowden and his assigns, in trust for the said H. Chichely Plowden, with remainder to the said H. C. Plowden, his heirs and assigns for ever." This mortgage of 3,000*l.* to Newton had been paid off, and by indentures of lease and release of the 6th and 7th of December, 1813, made between the said W. Newton, of the first part, said H. Chichely Plowden, of the second part, and said John Dynley, of the third part, after reciting the said indentures of the 30th of April and 1st of May, 1811, it was witnessed that in consideration of the sum of 3,000*l.* to the said W. Newton, paid by the said H. Chichely Plowden, in full for the said mortgage money and interest, he the said W. Newton did bargain, sell, and release unto the said H. Chichely Plowden, his heirs and assigns, all and every the hereditaments comprised in the said indenture of the 1st of May, 1811, to hold the same unto the said H. Chichely Plowden, his heirs and assigns, for ever, subject nevertheless to the use of such person or persons, and for such estate or estates, and in such parts, shares, or proportions, manner or form, and either with or without power of revocation and new appointment as the said H. C. Plowden shall, by deed or will, direct, limit, or appoint; and in default of such direction, limitation, or appointment, or until any such shall be made and take effect, and as to such estate or interest as shall not be directed, limited, or appointed to the use of the said H. C. Plowden and his assigns for and during the term of his natural life without impeachment of waste, &c." to the ultimate use of the said H. C. Plowden, his heirs and assigns for ever. The testator died in the year 1821, leaving a wife and his brother James C. Plowden surviving him. After his death his widow entered into possession of the testator's real estates, including those comprised in the above-mentioned indentures as tenant for life under his will, and continued in possession up to the time of her own death in 1845. James Chichely Plowden was found a lunatic by inquisition in 1834, and that he had been so since the year 1813. He died in 1848 intestate so far as related to any interest he might have had as the heir-at-law of his father, the aforesaid Henry Chichely Plowden. He left James Chichely Plowden his heir-at-law. A suit was subsequently instituted for the purpose of having the trusts of the will of Henry Chichely Plowden carried into effect, and for the administration of his estate. It was in this suit that the petition had been presented by the present petitioner, one of the parties claiming an interest in the produce of the real estates, directed to be sold, and raising the question whether the devises contained in the will of the testator above set out were or were not valid. Under an order of the Court the estates had been ordered to be sold, and a Mr. G. M. W. Peacocke had been confirmed the purchaser of the greater part of them, particularly those comprised in the indentures hereinbefore mentioned and set forth. The petition had been rendered necessary by the heir-at-law, representing as such the original testator, Henry Chichely Plowden, having refused to join in the necessary conveyances to the purchaser.

Willcock and Jessell, in support of the petition, contended that the reconveyance did not operate as a revocation of the testator's will. That it was merely a modification of the testator's estate, which, in effect, remained in him as it was before the execution of the mortgage. What the testator had done was not a resettlement of the estate. They commented also upon there being no contract in writing by the testator as the purchaser of the estates bought by him at the auction, and urged that the recitals in the d[illegible] that effect were not of sufficient force to establ[illegible] contract. That by the reconveyance he only took [illegible] modification of the fee with a particular intenti[illegible] expressed by his will, which a Court of Equity [illegible] o effect. That although the testator took the [illegible]nveyance in the form he did, yet he [illegible] intention of attesting his interest in the estate. Th[illegible] equity of redemption would be to the old u[illegible]ated of the estate, and was an equity of redempt[illegible] n ated to uses to bar dower, and that the intent[illegible] t the reconveyance was to preserve those uses.

Malins and F[illegible] appeared for the parties in the same int[illegible]st, and supported the arguments in favour of the pr[illegible]er of the petition.

The following were some of the cases relied on in support of the petition:—Harwood v. Oglander, 6 Ves. 222; Br[illegible]ges v. Chandos, 2 Ves. 417; Vaudr v. Jones, 14 Sim. 163; 1 Jarm. on Wills, 135; Thellusson v. Woodford, 13 Ves. 209; Wilby v. Wilby, 2 Ves. & B. 187; Ward v. Moore, 4 Mad. 368; Brain v. Brain, 6 Mad. 221; Bullin Fletcher, 2 My. & Cr. 432; Poole v. Cooles, 2 Dru & War. 197, and other cases.

Jas. Russell and Lewin, for the heir-at-law, contended that there was a clear distinction between the legal intention of the testator and that which was now put forward in argument as being the conjectured one. The legal intention was alone that on which the Court would and ought to act. Here was clearly an alteration of the estate which the testator formerly had, and that the intention to revoke was manifest. Rawlins v. Burgis, 2 Ves. & B. 382, was a direct decision on the point. As to the after-purchased property, the testator had expressed no intention to put the heir-at-law to his election. It must be assumed that at the time of executing his will the testator was quite aware that he could only devise the interest which he had in the hereditaments at that time. In addition to the case above cited they relied on Ward v. Moore, 4 Mad. 368; Locke v. Foote, 5 Sim. 618; Anson v. Lee, 4 Sim. 364; Back v. Lett, Jac. Rep. 534; Tennant v. Tennant, Lloyd & G. 516; Johnson v. Telford, 1 Russ. & M. 244.

Wood, Hetherington, Daniel, and Stevens, for other parties.

JUDGMENT.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said—Two questions are raised in this case; first, whether certain acts done by the testator after making his will, with respect to certain real estates of which he was the owner in equity at the date of his will, and which, but for those acts, would have passed by his will, have had the effect of revoking the devise of those estates; and, secondly, if such revoking has resulted from those acts, whether the testator's heir claiming those estates by descent ought to be put to his election. These questions arise with respect to two different portions of the real estates of the testator, under somewhat different circumstances. With respect to the first portion, which for convenience I will call the mortgaged property, the question as to this mortgaged property is, whether by reason of the conveyance of the 7th December, 1813, the will was revoked so far as it operated to devise that property? With respect to the second portion of the testator's real estates now in question, which for convenience I will call the purchased property; the question as to this purchased property is, whether by reason of the conveyance of the 9th of November, 1811, the will was revoked, so far as it operated to devise that property? With respect to this question of revocation, as applicable both to the mortgaged and the purchased property, several cases have been cited in the arguments, and many others are to be found in the books. In some of these cases the testator, at the date of his will, had the legal estate in the lands, and in others he had only an equitable estate or interest. In the case now before me, the estate or interest which, at the date of his will, the testator had in each of the two portions of the property in question, was an equitable estate or interest; and therefore it is to the cases comprised in the latter class, that more especial reference must be had in order to deduce the established doctrine on the subject as applicable to the case now under consideration. The general rule of law to be deduced from this class of cases may be thus stated—that if, after the date of the will, the land is so conveyed to the testator that the legal estate therein which becomes vested in him by the conveyance is the same in quality as the equitable estate which he had at the date of the will, the conveyance does not revoke the devise; and so, in the case where the testator's interest in the land, at the date of the will, consists of a contract which he had entered into for the purchase of the land, if the land is afterwards conveyed to him by the vendor, in accordance with the terms of the contract between them, the conveyance does not revoke the devise; but, on the other hand, if the legal estate which the testator acquires by the conveyance differs in quality from the equitable estate which he had at the date of the will, the conveyance revokes the devise; and so, in the case of the contract for the purchase, if the legal estate which the testator acquires by the conveyance differs from that which, by the terms of the contract, the vendor agreed to convey to him, the conveyance revokes the devise; and this revocation equally takes place, even though the testator, after the conveyance, has as absolute a power of disposing of the property as he had before; and the revocation takes place without regard to the testator's intention, and even in direct contravention of his intention. Eminent judges have heretofore expressed, in strong terms, their disapprobation of the principle of this rule of revocation, and their regret that it should have been established, or at least that it should have been carried so far; but they have felt themselves constrained to follow it. While I fully participate in that disapprobation and that regret, I am equally obliged to recognise it as the well-established rule of the Courts, and if the occasion requires, to act upon it. Now with respect to the mortgaged property, if we are to inquire what estate the testator had in the equity of redemption at the date of his will, I think it would be very difficult to say that he had any other than an estate in fee-simple; and if I were compelled to confine myself to this view of the matter, it would follow that a subsequent conveyance of the legal estate to the testator in any other form than in fee would be a revocation of the devise. But the devisee has a right to refer to the particular terms of the proviso for redemption in the mortgage deed, as shewing an agreement between the mortgagors and mortgagees, that upon repayment of the mortgage money the premises should be reconveyed not simply for the mortgagor in fee, but in some other special form and if the legal estate was, in fact, reconveyed in the form in which by the terms of that proviso it was agreed to be conveyed, the reconveyance does not operate as a revocation of the devise. What, then, are the terms of the proviso for redemption of premises on payment of the mortgage money. They are to be reconveyed "unto the said Henry Chichely Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns, or to such person or persons, to such uses and in such manner as he or they shall direct." A question here arises, whether the words "unto the said Henry Chichely Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns," are to be construed as designating the person or persons to whom the premises were to be reconveyed, or the form in which the reconveyance was to be made. The language of the proviso throughout seems to favour the former construction, for it imports that the appointees of Plowden (as well as Plowden himself or his heirs or assigns) may pay off the mortgage debt; that the reconveyance is to be made upon the request and at the cost and charges of Plowden or of his heirs, or of his appointees or assigns; and that not only Plowden himself, his heirs or assigns, but his appointees also, should have the right to direct to what persons and to what uses, and in what manner the estate should be reconveyeyed; the word "appointees," which is used several times in the proviso, seeming in every instance to be used to designate some person or persons to whom Plowden might appoint the estate previously to its being reconveyed. If this is the construction which ought to be put upon the words "unto the said Henry Chichely Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns,"—that is, if the parties agreed by this proviso that the premises were to be reconveyed to Plowden or to his assigns, or to his appointees in the alternative, that could only mean to one or other of those persons in fee; and then it is clear upon the authorities, that the reconveyance which was made to Plowden, not in fee, but to the common uses to bar dower, would be a revocation of the devise; and the addition of the words, "or to such person or persons, &c. as he or they may direct," would not have any effect to prevent the revocation. But let us now take the other supposition, and assume that the words "unto the said Henry Chickley Plowden, his heirs, appointees, or assigns," are to be construed as designating the form in which the premises were to be reconveyed to Plowden, which is the view most favourable to the devisee. Upon that assumption, I think that the word "appointees" would be sufficient to justify the introduction into the reconveyance of a power of appointment, and that if the reconveyance had been made to the use of such persons and for such estates as Plowden should by deed or will appoint, and in default of appointment, to the use of Plowden his heirs and assigns, such reconveyance would have been in conformity with the proviso and would not have worked a revocation. If so, the question is reduced to this,—do the other words, "unto the said Henry Chichely Plowden, his heirs and assigns," justify the reconveyance to the use of Plowden for life, and after the determination of that estate, by any means in his lifetime to the use of a trustee during his life, with the remainder to the use of Plowden in fee; or (to put the question in another form), if by the proviso for redemption, it had merely been agreed that on repayment of the money, the estate should be reconveyed to Plowden, his heirs, or assigns, and the reconveyance had been made to the use of Plowden for his life, and then to the use of a trustee during his life, and then to Plowden, his heirs, and assigns, would this have been a reconveyance in conformity with the terms of the proviso, so that the devise would have remained unrevoked? It appears to me that if I were so to decide, I should be acting in direct opposition to the principle of all the decided cases. An estate to a man for his life, with an estate in fee simple by way of remainder, the union of the two estates being prevented by an intermediate limitation to a trustee during his life, is a very different estate from an estate in fee simple in possession. If the testator's estate, previously to the conveyance, had been an equitable estate in fee, his taking a conveyance of the legal estate for his life, with a legal fee, by way of remainder, the two estates being kept from uniting by the interposition of a limitation to a trustee, is not (in the language used in some of the cases) simply taking the estate home, but it is creating a new and different limitation of it. And, according to all the authorities, if the effect of the reconveyance is to create a new limitation of the estate different from the equitable estate which the testator had at the date of his will, or different from that which would be created by pursuing strictly the terms of the contract for the reconveyance, the effect is a revocation of the devise. It has indeed been argued before me, that the words "unto A. B. his heirs, appointees, or assigns," constitute an apt and appropriate formula for expressing briefly all the limitations ordinarily contained in a conveyance to the common uses to bar dower, including not only the general power of appointment, but also the limitation for life to the party in whose favour the conveyance is made, and the remainder to him in fee, with the intermediate limitation to the trustee to prevent the union of the life estate and the remainder in fee; and it was contended that the formula in question is often used for that purpose, as in the present case, because the indenture of mortgage to Newton recites the indenture of April 1811, by which the estate had been conveyed to the testator to the common uses of bar dower, and that, therefore, in effect the proviso for redemption ought to be road as if it had stipulated that, on payment of the mortgage-money, the premises should be reconveyed to the same uses to which they had been limited by the indenture of April 1811. I should have been well pleased if I could have acceded to this argument, but I look in vain to the language of the proviso for redemption to find any reference to the indenture of 1811; in fact, it does not contain the slightest trace of any such reference. If it had been intended that, upon the repayment of the mortgage-money the premises should be reconveyed to the same uses to which they had stood limited by the indenture of April 1811, it would have been easy to have worded the proviso for redemption so as to have expressed that intention. The recital of that indenture in the mortgage-deed cannot, in my opinion, be considered as introduced for the purpose of shewing that the parties intended a reconveyance to be made to the same uses as were expressed in that indenture; in fact, such recital was introduced for another purpose, viz. that as the conveyance to the mortgagee must be by an exercise of the power of appointment as well as by lease or release, it was necessary to recite the indenture creating the power; and that recital would have been equally introduced whatever might have been the intention of the parties as to the form of the reconveyance by the mortgage when the mortgage-debt should be paid off. And with regard to the suggestion that the words "unto A. B. his heirs, appointees, or assigns," are often used as a formula for expressing all the limitations ordinarily contained in a conveyance to the common uses to bar dower, I answer, that they are so used only in loose parlance, and not in the formal and appropriate language of a deed, and that such use of them is inapt and inaccurate; for, granting that those words sufficiently indicate a power of appointment, and that they would constitute an apt and appropriate formula for expressing a limitation to the use of such persons and for such estates as A. shall appoint, and in default of appointment to the use of A. in fee, how do they indicate the dividing and parcelling out the fee into a life estate, and the remainder in fee, with an intermediate limitation to the use of a trustee during the life of the tenant for life? I cannot decide that a contract to convey to A. his heirs, appointees, or assigns, does ex vi terminorum import that the conveyance is to be made in the especial form of limitations, to the use of such persons and for such estates as A. shall appoint, and in default of appointment to the use of A. for life; and after the determination of that estate in his lifetime to the use of a trustee during his life, and after the determination of the estate so limited, to the trustee to the use of A. his heirs and assigns. I may refer to the judgment of Lord Langdale, Master of the Rolls, in Bullin v. Fletcher, 1 Keen, 369, as a clear and (as I think) unimpeachable authority on this part of the case. I am, therefore, constrained to conclude, with respect to the mortgaged property, that by the reconveyance from Newton to the testator of the 17th December, 1813, the devise of that property was revoked. With respect to the purchased property the case is even still more clear; indeed, the only argument that could be offered as a ground for holding that the conveyance from the vendors by the indenture of the 9th November, 1811, did not revoke the devise, was this, that as the indenture expressed that the conveyance was made in pursuance of the agreement for the purchase, it is to be inferred that there was a special contract between the testator and the vendors that the purchased lands should be conveyed to the testator, not in fee, but to the common uses to bar dower. Even if the fact were, as assumed by this argument, that conveyance was expressed to be made in pursuance of the agreement for the purchase, I could not have concurred in the conclusion. The purchaser of a fee-simple estate has a right to have the estate conveyed to any uses or in any manner he may please to direct, and to whatever uses or in whatever manner the estate may be conveyed by the purchaser's direction; the conveyance might, with equal propriety, be expressed to be made in pursuance of the agreement for the purchase, although there was no special provision in the contract as to the particular uses to which the estate was to be conveyed by the vendors. But further, the very foundation of the argument fails, for upon examination of the language of the indenture of the 9th November, 1811, it will be found that the conveyance is not expressed to be made in pursuance of the agreement for the purchase. It will be remembered that lot one, for which the testator had bid 1,800*l*. at the sale, comprised the freehold in question, and certain leaseholds. The indenture of the 9th November, 1811, which only conveys the freeholds, recites that Plowden was allowed and declared to be the highest bidder for and purchaser of the premises comprised in lot one at the price of 1,800*l*. and that it had been ascertained that the hereditaments intended to be thereby conveyed, which formed the freehold part of the said lot one, were of the value of 400*l*. and that it had been agreed that the said 400*l*. should be apportioned part of the said sum of 1,800*l*. to be paid in respect of and as the purchase and consideration money for the hereditaments thereinafter expressed, to be thereby conveyed; and the indenture witnesseth that in pursuance of the said agreement, and in consideration of 100*l*. paid to the vendors by Plowden, the vendors convey the freehold hereditaments in question to Plowden to uses to bar dower. So that the words, "in pursuance of the said agreement," refer not to an agreement for the purchase of the land, for no such agreement is specified, but to the agreement which is specially mentioned as to the 400*l*. being the apportioned part of the whole purchase-money which was to be paid in respect of the freeholds. With respect, then, to the purchased property, I am of opinion that by the conveyance of the 9th November, 1811, the devise of the property is revoked. The only question which remains for consideration is this, whether the testator's heir claiming these lands by descent, and claiming also certain benefits under the will, ought to be put to his election as regards either the mortgaged or the purchased property. It is to be observed, that the mortgaged property is not specially mentioned in the will, but the will does specially mention, amongst the real estates devised, the lands which the testator had contracted to purchase, situate in or near the parishes of Boldre and South Baddeley, in the county of Southampton. I will assume in favour of the devisee (although the fact is not clearly ascertained), that the purchased property now in controversy is part of the hereditaments thus specially mentioned and devised by the will; and in considering the proposition that the heir ought to be put to his election, I will have regard more particularly to the lands thus specially mentioned and devised, because, if the proposition cannot be maintained as to those lands (as in my opinion it cannot) à fortiori, it cannot be maintained as to those lands which are not specially mentioned and devised. The argument on behalf of the devisee is this: that the effect of the testator acquiring by the subsequent conveyance a different estate from that which he had at the date of his will, is not, properly, speaking, revocation, but ademption; and that the estate or interest which he had when he made his will, is indeed gone from him, and therefore the devise cannot operate upon it; but that the words of the devisee are not expunged from the will; they are still capable of expressing, and do express the testator's intention to devise the lands there specially mentioned. So that at the testator's death, when the will comes into operation, the devise of the particular lands still stands part of the will, and the testator died seised of those very lands; and although by the rule of law, the devise cannot actually pass the estate which the testator acquired by the subsequent conveyance, yet as the heir, by asserting his right to take the estate by descent, would defeat or disturb the express disposition of that estate by the will, he ought, according to the plain principle of election, to give up his right to take the estate by descent, or abandon the benefits intended for him by the will. Now, it may be admitted, that if the heir, by asserting his right to take the estate by descent would defeat or disturb an express disposition made by the will of that estate which he thus claims by descent, he ought to be put to his election, according to the decisions in Thellusson v. Woodford, 13 Ves. 209, and Churchman v. Ireland, 1 Russ. & M. 250. And therefore the only question is, whether the testator by his will, made an express disposition of that estate which the heir claims by descent. What is the estate the heir claims by descent? It is that estate in fee simple in remainder (expectant on the determination of the estate limited to the trustee during the testator's life) which became vested in the testator by the conveyance made to him after the date of his will. Has then the testator by his will made an express disposition of the estate which became vested in him by that subsequent conveyance? The devise of the will is of "all and every my messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and all other my real estate whatsoever, or which I have contracted to purchase, situate in or near the parishes of Boldre and South Baddeley, in the said county of Southampton, or elsewhere in England, of or to which I, or any person or persons in trust for me, am, is, or are seised or entitled, for any estate of freehold and inheritance, or of freehold only, in possession, reversion, remainder, or expectancy, or which I have power to dispose of or appoint by this my will." In this language there is nothing that points to any estate or interest which the testator might have at a future time; on the contrary, the terms of the devise refer exclusively to such estate and interest as he then had. At the time when he penned that devise he had an estate or interest to which the language was properly applicable, and which, but for the subsequent conveyance, would have passed by the devise. What is there which indicates the slightest intention to devise another estate and interest which was not then vested in him, but which he might thereafter acquire? It is a rule which ought to be strictly adhered to, that to put the heir to his election, the testator's intention to devise or dispose of such estate or interest as he might thereafter acquire, must be expressly and unequivocally manifested by the will; and in this will there not the slightest trace of any such intention. To shew that the language here used by the testator must be held to refer exclusively to the estate or interest which he had at the date of his will, I may refer to the cases of Birdstone v. Anderson, 2 Ves. sen. 419, and Hone v. Medcroft, 1 Bro. C.C. 263, and the judgment of Lord Eldon in James v. Dean, 11 Ves. 390. It is true that those were cases of leaseholds; but that is immaterial with respect to the question whether the words of the devise to be construed as pointing only to the testator's present estate or interest, or to such estate or interest as he might thereafter acquire. Being, then, of opinion that the testator has expressed his intention to devise only the estate or interest which he had in the lands at the date of his will, and not such other estate or interest as he might thereafter acquire, I am brought to the conclusion that the heir does not, by claiming these lands by descent, defeat or disturb any disposition made or intended to be made by the will, of that estate which has descended upon him, and that therefore he ought not to be put to his election. In truth, the disposition which the testator had made by his will with regard to these lands has been defeated in his lifetime by his own act, in taking such a conveyance as put an end to the estate or interest which he then had, and which was alone intended to be disposed of by his will, and vested in him a new and different estate, which the will does not manifest any intention to dispose of. Upon the whole of the case, I am of opinion that the devise in the testator's will, so far as relates to the lands comprised in the indentures of the 7th of December, 1813, and the 9th of November, 1811, respectively, was revoked by those respective conveyances, and that those lands did not pass by the will, but descended on the testator's heir-at-law, and that the heir ought not to be put to his election. I must therefore dismiss the petition.

Petition dismissed, but without costs.

COGGAN v. WARWICKER.

Use and occupation—Liability.

A. and B. agreed that A. should occupy B.'s warehouse for five years, at 75l. a-year, and as much more as half the profits made by A., and that an agreement in writing should be drawn up. A. was let into possession without any agreement, and with a view to the intended agreement, but when the written agreement was drawn up he refused to sign it:

Held, that A. was liable to B. in an action for use and occupation for the time during which he had been in possession.

The action was in debt for use and occupation of a warehouse, with the use of an hydraulic press and implements for packing, from November 10, 1851, to January 17, 1852.

The evidence of the plaintiff was as follows:—I am a packer; the defendant is a packer; I entered into a written agreement with the defendant; it was drawn by Mr. Potter, who had previously been his attorney; it was an agreement for service by him to me as a packer and clerk, and he was to receive one-fourth of the profits. He afterwards suggested that as he knew the merchants and shippers, which I did not, the business would be carried on better in his name; and he proposed to carry on the business in his own name in my warehouse in Huggin-lane, and he proposed to pay me half the profits, or be put upon a rent. He proposed to give 75*l*. a-year, and if that did not cover half the profits, he would give more, or I might receive a rent weekly. I told him I did not require it weekly; I told him he might go into possession, and we went together to Mr. Potter, and gave him instructions to draw a written agreement. The defendant took possession of the warehouse in Huggin-lane on the 10th of November, 1851; I afterwards applied to him to execute the agreement, and he said he would take time to consider. I gave him possession in consideration of his signing the agreement that Mr. Potter was to draw up. He complained that Mr. Potter had drawn up the agreement for a term of seven years, which, he said, was too long; I said it might be for five years, and he agreed to that, and we went to Mr. Potter to give him instructions so to draw it up. Afterwards the defendant said he would not sign it, and on the Wednesday or Thursday before the 17th of January, 1852, I told him he could no longer remain, as he would not complete his engagement. He said he would give up possession in a week or ten days. I said I would have possession either immediately, or on the following Saturday." The plaintiff further stated that he went to the warehouse at about noon on Saturday, the 17th of January, and found everything removed, and a boy left in possession, but that he did not turn the boy out, or tell him to go out of the warehouse.

Carrington, for the defendant, contended that the defendant was in possession as a tenant for a year at least, or as a partner with the plaintiff, and that if the defendant was a tenant, no rent was due till the end of a year, and that on the 17th of January, 1852, the plaintiff had disentitled himself to any rent by having evicted the defendant.

For the defendant, a boy named William Smith was called. He stated that he was left in possession of the warehouse on the 17th of January, 1852, and that the plaintiff came there, and having bolted the back door, and put up the shutters, he told the witness to go out, which he did, and went to the defendant's house, leaving the plaintiff in possession of the warehouse.

Erle, J.—It appears that there was a treaty going on between these parties, and an agreement in writing proposed, and that the defendant was let into possession with a view to his entering into the agreement. Until the agreement was entered into, and while he was in possession on the faith of the intended agreement, he was a tenant at will, and was liable to pay the plaintiff a fair compensation for the property for the time he occupied it.

Petersdorff, for the plaintiff, asked that it should be left to the jury to say whether the defendant was let into possession by the plaintiff in this way.

Erle, J. (to the jury).—Was the defendant let into possession without any agreement whatsoever, and was he let into possession provisionally and with a view to the proposed agreement?

The foreman of the jury.—We are of opinion that the defendant was let into possession without any agreement, and provisionally with a view to an intended agreement.

Erle, J.—Then you find for the plaintiff.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

Petersdorff for the plaintiff.

COURT OF COMMON BENCH.

SECOND SITTINGS AT WESTMINSTER IN HILARY TERM.

(Before Talfourd, J.)

Thursday, January 22.

Wadsworth v. Collins.

Apothecary—License—London—Pleading—General issue.

Semble.—An extra-urban license to an apothecary, that he is qualified to practice except in the city of London and ten miles round it, is sufficient to support an action by such apothecary for services rendered within such ten miles.

The license is put in issue by a plea as to part payment into Court, and as to the residue non assumpsit.

Assumpsit for work and labour and for goods supplied as an apothecary.

Plea as to part money paid into Court; as to residue, non assumpsit.

At the close of the plaintiff's case,

Byles, Serjt. for the defendant, objected that there was no evidence of the plaintiff being a licentiate of the Apothecaries' Company pursuant to the Apothecaries' Act 6 Geo. 4, c. 133.

E. James, for the plaintiff, submitted that under the pleading such evidence was not necessary. The form of plea in this case was not tantamount to the general issue, which alone would put the fact of the license being given in issue.

Talfourd, J. held that proof of the plaintiff's license must be given. The license accordingly was put in and read. It was an extra-urban license, certifying that the plaintiff was qualified to practice everywhere except in the city of London, and ten miles around. It was in evidence that the plaintiff's services, from which the action arose, had been rendered in Westminster.

Byles, Serjt. hereupon submitted that the evidence was insufficient. The plaintiff had not produced such a license as the Act required as evidence of competency; at least not one which the Court would receive, when the cause of action arose within ten miles of the city of London.

E. James contrà.—All the Act requires was evidence of competent skill. Now if the plaintiff was competent out of London, he must be so likewise within it. The distinction between urban and extra-urban licenses was simply a financial one, a higher fee being paid to the Apothecary's Company for the one than the other, and was not in the least relevant to this case.

Talfourd, J. expressed a strong opinion that the objection was untenable, but ultimately reserved the point, and upon that understanding the case proceeded. Verdict for the plaintiff.

E. James and Remmett for the plaintiff.

Byles, Serjt. and M. Lloyd for the defendant.

BANKRUPTCY.

LEEDS DISTRICT COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

August 24 and 27.

(Before Mr. Commissioner Ayrton.)

Re Roberts.

Petitioning creditor's debt—Solicitor—Time for disputing adjudication—Notice—Act of Bankruptcy.

A solicitor's bill is a good petitioning creditor's debt before taxation.

A bankrupt may dispute the adjudication within the fourteen days mentioned in s. 104, although he does not give notice within the seven days.

What is sufficient notice of his intention to dispute within rule 13.

A trader, being insolvent, goes from home to collect money to pay off a distress for rent, leaving instructions with his book-keeper to call a meeting of his creditors for a particular day, and promising to attend it, his non-attendance is an act of bankruptcy.

A petition for adjudication of bankruptcy was filed on the 14th of August, and opened on the same day. The adjudication was also renewed on the 14th. The bankrupt took no step until the 24th, and in the meantime the meeting had been fixed, and the advertisement sent to the Gazette.

Ferns, on his behalf, applied to the commissioner to fix a day for hearing him dispute the adjudication, on the grounds that there was no valid petitioning creditor's debt, and that he had not committed an act of bankruptcy. He cited Ex parte Castelli, 18 Law T. Rep. 202.

Bond, for the petitioning creditors.—The bankrupt is too late. The seven days given by s. 104 having expired cannot now be "extended." In Ex parte Castelli the notice was given within the seven days, and while the matter was in fieri. Here no notice has been given, and the advertisement is gone to the Gazette. He referred to Ex parte Cantees, 18 Law T. Rep. 162.

Mr. Commissioner Ayrton thought he might still hear the bankrupt, and fixed the 27th inst. for that purpose.

Saturday, August 27.—The case coming on this morning,

Bond objected that by rule 13, two days' notice ought to have been served on the petitioning creditors, and also on the registrar.

Ferns.—Verbal notice is sufficient. Both the petitioning creditor and the registrar were in court on the 24th, and had notice that the case was to come on to-day. Rule 13 is no longer in force.

Bond.—The words "secured on" must refer to a written notice. Ex parte Delany, 12 Law T. 26; and in re Wood, Mr. Commissioner West refused to hear a bankrupt who had given notice to the petitioning creditor, but had omitted to secure the registrar. These cases are in point. Rule 13 is revived by the rule of 12th of October, 1849.

Mr. Commissioner Ayrton.—"Secured upon" must apply to a notice in writing, and I think rule 13 is made to apply by the rule of 12th of October, 1849. But in this case the registrar and petitioning creditor had notice, because the petitioning creditor was in court. As he has had notice, though not in writing, I hold that rule 13 does not apply to this case.

The petitioning creditor was then examined. He proved that he had acted as the bankrupt's attorney, and that there was due to him a balance of 110*l.* but his bill had not been delivered a month. The bankrupt called a meeting of his creditors on the 4th of August, which he attended. A composition was proposed, but rejected by the creditors. They asked for an assignment, which the bankrupt refused to make. On the 11th of August the bankrupt's book-keeper gave notice of another meeting for the 13th. The bankrupt failed to attend that meeting, but the book-keeper attended. He resumed the proposal for a composition, but nothing was done. The bankrupt's book-keeper proved that he called the latter meeting by the instructions of the bankrupt. The bankrupt went to London on the 11th to get some money for the purpose of paying off a distress for rent, and promised to return in time to attend the meeting on the 13th, but he failed to do so.

Another witness was called who proved that he lent the bankrupt 8*l.* to pay his expenses to London. The bankrupt deposited with him a horse and cart as security for the 8*l.* and also for 12*l.* previously owing to him.

Ferns contended that, although the bankrupt's non-attendance at the meeting might, unexplained, be an act of bankruptcy, yet that he was detained in London by illness. He had gone there for a proper and legitimate purpose, and when he found he could not attend, he wrote to his wife to send the book keeper to represent him. The transaction with Smith was not a preference.

The bankrupt declared that when he went to London he intended returning in time to attend the meeting on the 13th, but he was taken ill in London, and that he sent a letter stating the reason of his non-attendance. The letter, however, bore the London post-mark of the 14th, and instead of explaining the cause of his absence, it simply requested his wife to join him in London; and he admitted, on cross-examination, that he was not taken ill until the 13th, and that he was able to ride about London and attend to business there. He stated, further, that he had received 47*l.* in London, of which he and his wife had expended 39*l.*

Mr. Commissioner Ayrton, without hearing Bond in reply, confirmed the adjudication, observing that the petitioning creditor's debt was ample, and that if ever there was an act of bankruptcy committed by absenting himself from a meeting, there was one proved in this case.

PREROGATIVE COURT.

Reported by Dr. Waddilove, of Doctors' Commons.

In the Goods of W. F. Stevenson.

Executor according to the tenor—Practice—Justifying sureties.

"I request J. M. L. to assist my daughter in the execution of my will:"

Held not to be an appointment of J. M. L. as executor according to the tenor. The daughter sole executrix and residuary legatee, being incapable of acting, administration decreed to J. M. L. for her use and benefit on consent of all persons interested. Justification of sureties not required.

W. F. Stephenson, by his will, appointed his daughter, H. Stevenson sole executrix and residuary legatee. Subsequently he made a codicil in the words following:—"I request J. M. L. to assist my daughter in the execution of my will, and I trust he will be able to effect an arrangement with the societies interested in the residue of my personal estate, and in which I am sure he will receive their aid, for the management of my property so as to prevent the necessity of a suit in Chancery, which I much deprecate, and as a compensation for his services I direct him to be paid the sum of one hundred and fifty guineas out of my personal estate. I hereby declare this to be a codicil to my will, as witness," &c.

The death of the testator was very sudden, and had such an effect upon the health of the daughter that she was unable to prove the will. The sons of the deceased, who were the sole next of kin of the daughter, and legatees to a considerable amount under the will, consented to the motion made by Harding for probate of the will and codicils (there were two, but the second had no bearing on the motion) to J. M. L. as executor according to the tenor of the recited codicil, a power being received for making a grant to the daughter.

Sir J. Dodson.—I do not think the words of this codicil can be carried beyond a mere request that J. M. L. should assist the executrix as her adviser. I must reject the motion.

Tuesday, March 16.—Sir J. D. Harding, Q.A. moved the Court to decree administration with the will and codicils annexed to J. M. L. for the use and benefit of the daughter during her incapacity, on consent of all persons interested, and on an affidavit of the daughter's state of mind being brought in. The property of the deceased was about 70,000*l.* and according to the practice of the Court where a grant is made for the uses and benefit and during the incapacity of the person primarily entitled thereto, the sureties in the bond are required to justify in double the amount of the property, but looking at the confidence placed by the testator in J. M. L. and that seeing that the consent of all interested has been obtained, he asked the Court to dispense with the justification of the sureties.

Sir J. Dodson.—Looking to the special circumstances of this case and that you have obtained the consent of all interested parties, or can do so, I will grant the motion without requiring the sureties to justify.

Nicholls and Wife v. Brookes.

Evidence—Admissibility of wife as a witness.

Semble.—In an action by husband and wife, where the wife is the meritorious cause of action, she is a competent witness.

This was an action on the case for negligent driving, whereby the plaintiff's wife was injured.

The plaintiff was returning with his wife in a gig from Kidderminster to Stourbridge, when they met a carriage drawn by the defendant's horses, and under the guidance of his postilion. The carriage came in collision with the plaintiff's gig, overturned it, throwing out the plaintiff and his wife, and breaking the arm of the latter. The husband was examined as a witness, and the wife was called into the witness-box, when the defendant, objected to the admissibility of her evidence. There was undoubtedly a distinction between this and an ordinary action, but although the wife is the meritorious cause of action, he contended that she is not admissible, being still a witness on behalf of her husband.

Keating, Q.C. (with whom was Huddleston) for

WILLIAMS, J. without hearing Allen, Serjt. who (with Phipson) appeared for the plaintiff, said he should receive the evidence, but take a note of the objection.

The wife was then examined. After hearing evidence on both sides, the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, damages 50*l*.

This was an action of trover brought to try the right of the sheriff to sell certain goods and chattels claimed by the plaintiffs as assignees of Francis Tandy, a bankrupt, but sold by the sheriff of Worcestershire under an execution at the suit of Frederick Langman.

Alexander, Q.C. and Gray, for the plaintiffs.

Keating, Q.C. and Whitmore, for the defendant.

Alexander, Q.C. in stating the case, said the plaintiffs claimed, as assignees of Tandy, a bankrupt, to recover the value of the stock in trade and effects of the bankrupt, seized by the sheriff under an execution at the suit of a Mr. Langman. The plaintiffs alleged, that he had notice of an act of bankruptcy by Tandy before the sale, and, therefore, under the Bankrupt Act was not entitled to retain the goods as against the assignees. It was also contended by the plaintiffs that the bill of sale by the sheriff to Langman was not complete until executed by him, which was not done for two days after its execution and delivery by the sheriff.

On the part of the plaintiffs, Francis Tandy, the bankrupt, was examined. He stated that he was an ironmonger at Stourbridge, and on Friday, the 19th of December, 1851, his furniture and stock in trade were seized by an officer of the sheriff, under an execution at the suit of Frederick Langman, a wholesale druggist at Wolverhampton, and a creditor. On the following day, Saturday, the 20th, an inventory was made by an appraiser. About three o'clock on the afternoon of that day the witness executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors (this was the act of bankruptcy); and between five and six o'clock the same day, the witness went with John Mills, clerk to Mr. Corser, the solicitor for the assignees, to the residence of Mr. Langman, at Wolverhampton, and left a notice of the act of bankruptcy at his house. On Monday, the 22nd, Price, an appraiser, and Mantell, clerk to the defendant's attorney, came to the witness's house, Prosser, the sheriff's officer, was also ther . [The conversion by Prosser, as an officer of the sheriff, of the goods mentioned in the inventory and bill of sale, was admitted.] On cross-examination, the bankrupt stated that in August 1851 he was served by Langman with notice of bankruptcy, and that in consequence, and to avoid it, he agreed to pay Mr. Langman by instalments, and executed a cognovit. He paid two of those instalments, but they subsequently fell into arrear, and the execution in question issued. When the witness went with Mills, on the 20th, to serve the notice, Mr. Langman, he believed, was not at home, but in the town. Witness believed there was a party at his house.

On re-examination the witness said that he executed the cognovit in the office of Mr. Smith, the attorney for Langman.

John Mills, clerk to Mr. Corser, the attorney for the assignees, stated that he was the attesting witness to the deed of assignment of the 20th of December, and that it was executed by the bankrupt at three o'clock in the afternoon of that day. He served a written notice of that act of bankruptcy on Mrs. Langman, at Mr. Langman's residence, at forty minutes past five in the afternoon, and also at Mr. Smith's residence, the attorney for Mr. Langman, at five minutes before six the same evening.

Cross-examined.—Witness did not see Mr. Smith; he served the notice on his sister, and requested her to deliver it to her brother, who, she said, was out.

Mr. Gillam, the under-sheriff, deposed to having executed the bill of sale from the sheriff to Langman between eight and nine o'clock on Saturday evening, the 20th of December. It was the ordinary form of bill of sale, containing an indemnity to the sheriff by the execution creditor. It was not executed by Langman at that time.

On cross-examination, Mr. Gillam said, that when he executed the bill of sale, he delivered it as the deed of the sheriff, not conditionally, or as an escrow, but unconditionally. After the execution, he gave it to the sheriff's officer for the execution of Mr. Langman, and for the goods to be delivered to him under it. If Mr. Langman's solicitor or his clerk had been present, it would have been delivered to him as Langman's agent, he having given instructions for the deed; but the clerk who had given the instructions, was in haste to return, and directed the bill of sale to be sent after him. In case of any loss of the goods in the mean time, neither the sheriff, nor Prosser, the officer, but the witness would have sustained the loss.

Prosser, the sheriff's officer, stated that he saw Mr. Langman execute the bill of sale from the sheriff about three o'clock on the afternoon of Monday, the 22nd of December, and he delivered the goods to him immediately afterwards, by delivering the fire-irons in the name of the whole, according to the ventory.

A copy of the cognovit executed by the bankrupt to Mr. Langman, filed of record, and of the affidavit of its execution, and of the judgment entered up thereon, were put in, as part of the plaintiff's case, for the purpose of raising the point that the affidavit must be by the party attesting the cognovit, which was not the case here.

WILLIAMS, J. thereupon observed, that the point raised would go to upsetting the judgment, but not to affect the proceedings now in issue between the parties.

Gray.—The statute 3 Geo. 4, c. 39,(a) says that the proceedings shall be null and void if its provisions are not complied with. That statute requires an affidavit of the time of execution to be filed, and it is submitted that affidavit can only be made by the party attesting it, under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110.

WILLIAMS, J. said he would take a note of the objection.

The proceedings in the District Court of Bankruptcy having been admitted, the plaintiff's case closed.

Keating, Q.C. submitted that the plaintiffs had failed in making out any primâ facie case. By the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 133, "all contracts, dealings, and transactions by and with any bankrupt, really and bonâ fide made and entered into before the date of the fiat or filing of such petition, and all executions and attachments against the lands and tenements of any bankrupt bonâ fide executed by seizure, and all executions and attachments against the goods and chattels of any bankrupt bonâ fide executed and levied by seizure and sale before the date of the fiat or the filing of such petition, shall be deemed to be valid, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed, provided the person so dealing with, or paying to, or being paid by such bankrupt, or at whose suit, or on whose account such execution or attachment shall have issued, had not at the time of such payment, &c. or at the time of so executing or levying such execution or attachment, or at the time of making any sale thereunder, notice of any prior act of bankruptcy by him com- [illegible] Unless, therefore, proof was given of notice of an act of bankruptcy, there is no case to invalidate the execution. All that is shewn is a delivery at the house of the execution creditor, and at his attorney's house, of a written notice left with a person at each house, and information given at the same time, that the execution creditor and the attorney were not at home. In the case of Pike v. Stevens, 12 Q.B. Rep. 465,(a) which was tried at Gloucester, and afterwards argued in the Q. B. it was held that a notice to the attorney's clerk not having the management of the cause was insufficient.

WILLIAMS, J.—There is evidence for the jury, I think. They may assume, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the notice reached Langman and his attorney.

Keating then addressed the jury, observing that the dates in this case were extremely close. Mr. Langman, the real defendant, having signed judgment, and issued execution on Tandy's cognovit, the goods were levied at Stourbridge on the 19th of December. On the 20th the sale by the sheriff to Langman was effected. It was contended for the plaintiffs that the bill of sale was not complete on the 20th. He, on the part of the defendant, contended that the deed was delivered, not as an escrow, but absolutely, and consequently that it was completed between eight and nine o'clock on Saturday evening, the 20th, when executed by the under-sheriff. The deed of assignment by Tandy, conveying all his property for the benefit of his creditors, which was an act of bankruptcy, was executed at three o'clock the same day. Langman, and Smith, his attorney, lived at Wolverhampton, Tandy at Stourbridge, and the under-sheriff at Worcester. The question was, whether Mr. Langman or his attorney had personal notice of the act of bankruptcy before eight or nine on Saturday, the 20th. A written notice, if delivered into Mr. Langman's hands, would be sufficient, but it would be proved that he was out at the time the notice was left, and did not reach home until eleven at night. On the other hand, Mr. Smith did not return home or receive notice until long after eight or nine o'clock that evening.

Frederick Langman, the execution-creditor and real defendant, was then called. He said he did not receive the notice until Sunday morning, the 21st of December. He was out all day on Saturday. He went in the morning to Stafford, as he generally did every Saturday. He returned from Stafford about five or six o'clock, and went into his office adjoining his house, and left the cash he had received during the day. He then went into the town of Wolverhampton, without going into his house, and met with a person named Griffiths, with whom he remained till after eleven o'clock. He returned home with him, and on the following morning his wife gave him the notice in question, which he had no expectation of receiving.

Mr. Griffiths and Mrs. Langman corroborated the evidence of Mr. Langman.

Mr. Smith, his solicitor, stated that he left his office between five and six o'clock on Saturday evening, the 20th of December, and did not reach his private residence until ten at night, and that the notice was handed to him the following morning by his sister, who was also called as a witness to confirm Mr. Smith's statement. He declared that he did not stay out to avoid notice of an act of bankruptcy by Tandy.

Alexander, Q.C. in reply, repeated the objection as to whether the bill of sale was perfected until the indemnity to the sheriff was completed by its execution by Langman. He also submitted to the jury, subject to the correction of the learned judge, that if Mr. Langman, or his attorney, remained out on purpose to avoid notice of the act of bankruptcy, the service at the house would be sufficient, and he believed that there was a case decided to that effect. (b) He proceeded to contend that the evidence justified the supposition that there was an attempt to avoid service.

WILLIAMS, J. to the jury, said the question between the parties turned on the validity of the sale by the sheriff to Langman. About three o'clock Tandy committed an act of bankruptcy by executing an assignment for the benefit of creditors. That had no effect on the subsequent sale at eight or nine o'clock, unless Mr. Langman, or his attorney, had notice of the act of bankruptcy previously to that time. The question, therefore, was whether notice to that effect had been received by either of them before that hour. It was a question of fact for the jury, but unless they were prepared to impute perjury to the witnesses for the defendants, not only had the plaintiff failed to prove notice, but the contrary was shewn. All the plaintiff proved was a notice left at the house of Langman forty minutes past five; and on the other hand it was proved that Langman was from home, and did not receive the notice until the next morning. It was said by the plaintiff's counsel, that if the jury were of opinion that Langman wilfully abstained from receiving notice, it was effectual without absolute service. That might be so, but the question is, whether there is any evidence of such a wilful abstaining.

The jury returned a verdict for the defendant.

Alexander, Q.C. requested to have his lordship's opinion on the point relative to the non-execution by Langman of the bill of sale.

WILLIAMS, J.—My impression is, that there is nothing in the objection, but you shall have leave to move on it. With respect to the question raised by Mr. Gray as to the affidavit, I have a note of it, but I shall not give leave to move on that point.

STAFFORD SUMMER ASSIZES.

Friday, July 23.

(Before CRESSWELL, J.)

ATTWOOD v. HILL and OTHERS.

Trespass—Right of a boat-building club to seize boat allotted to a defaulter—Pleading—Not possessed.

The rules of a society established for the purpose of providing the shareholders with canal-boats, provided that as soon as a certain sum was raised, a boat should be ordered by and for a particular number, selected by lot, to whom, on the dissolution of the society, the boat should belong, the holder in the meantime paying to the society for the use of it 5l. per cent. on the sum expended by the society in its completion, "as such boat shall not be the property of the member to whom the same shall be allotted, until the society shall be discontinued, but belong to the committee for the time being in trust for the society;" and further stipulated that, until the dissolution of the society, every boat should be kept in good repair "by the member to whom the same shall be allotted; and at such dissolution the boats shall become the absolute property of the respective persons to whom they shall have been allotted." The rules also provided that if any member, "after he shall have obtained a boat by allotment, shall make default in paying the remainder of his subscription money, forfeits, and interest, in respect of every share he may hold in this society, when due, it shall be lawful for the committee, without any notice whatever, to seize every such boat so allotted to such defaulter, and to let out the same for hire, for the benefit of all the members of the society, and the defaulter shall not be entitled to resume the possession of, or use such boat, until the expiration of three calendar months after he shall have fully paid all subscriptions, forfeits, and interest due from him."

W. a member of the society, became the allottee of a boat, and subsequently sold it to A. his landlord, for a certain sum credited to W. in his rent, A. at the time not having notice of the nature of the title of W. who subsequently became a defaulter to the society, who thereupon seized the boat:

Held, that the society was entitled to the boat as against W. and Semble, that the special facts might be given in evidence under a plea of not possessed to a declaration in trespass by A.

Trespass, for taking a boat of the plaintiff.

Plea, not guilty, and that the plaintiff was not possessed of the boat as alleged.

Whateley, Q.C. and Phipson, for the plaintiff; Keating, Q.C. and Whitmore, for the defendants.

The case on the part of the plaintiff alleged that a person named Woodall being his tenant, and his rent in arrear, agreed with the plaintiff, that the latter should take a canal-boat of the value of 80*l.* in part payment of the rent. At the time of this sale the boat was in the possession of Lord Ward, having been let to him by Woodall, at a weekly rent of six shillings. Notice was given to Lord Ward's agent of the transfer, and Lord Ward continued to use the boat at the same rent, payable to the plaintiff, until it was seized by the defendants, who claimed it under the rules of a boat club, as subsequently mentioned.

Mr. George Attwood, the plaintiff, a banker, of Birmingham, and proprietor of Lodge Ford and other iron works in Staffordshire, stated that Benjamin Woodall, his tenant, being in arrear of his rent, to the amount of between 200*l.* and 300*l.* an agreement was effected in March 1851, by which the witness agreed to take the rent partly in goods and partly in a canal-boat. He did not see Woodall personally on the subject, the arrangement being effected through the witness's clerk, Eglington. He did not receive any notice before the arrangement, from any party, that the boat was not Woodall's own property.

James Eglington, the plaintiff's clerk, proved the verbal agreement between the plaintiff and Woodall. The boat was to be taken in part payment of the rent, and it was to be valued by a person named Turner, on the part of Woodall, and by Daukes, on Mr. Attwood's behalf. They valued it at 80*l.* The witness took a stamped receipt for the amount from Woodall, and credited him with the same amount of rent. Understanding that the boat was in Lord Ward's employment, a communication was made to Mr. Smith, Lord Ward's agent, that the boat was transferred, and the witness received the rent for it from Lord Ward's agent down to Michaelmas 1851. Witness subsequently gave directions to Dance to bring the boat to Mr. Attwood's collieries. It did not reach there, but in February 1852 Dance brought witness a paper he had received. On cross-examination, the witness said he never heard from Woodall, or any other person, previously to February, that the boat belonged to the Tipton Iron Boat Society, No. 2.

Daukes proved that he saw the boat on the canal, when he valued it at 80*l.* Early in the present year, in consequence of orders from Eglington, he ordered a man to bring the boat to witness's premises. While it was there he received the notice produced, dated January 7, 1852, and signed by John Hill and the other defendants, being an authority by them, severally and jointly, as partners of the Tipton Iron Boat Society, No. 2, directed to Mr. Thomas Woodall (not the plaintiff's tenant), authorising and empowering him to seize and have again the boat No. 11, of Benjamin Woodall, who had become a defaulter of the said society. Thomas Woodall, after delivering a copy of the authority to the witness, took the boat away with him.

Cross-examined.—When the witness went to value the boat, he did not see an iron plate on the boat with the letters "T. I. B. S. No. 2—No. 11;" he saw that plate on it when it was brought to his premises in consequence of Eglington's orders.

Isaac Mullet stated that he hired the boat from Benjamin Woodall, in 1850, for Lord Ward's use, and it was used by his lordship's men for two years.

This was the plaintiff's case.

Keating, Q.C. opened the following case for the defendants:—In 1846, a society was formed at Tipton, called the "Tipton Iron Boat Society, No. 2." It consisted of fifteen members, and its object was to supply canal-boats to the members who could not individually obtain them on account of the expense, each boat costing 125*l.* Each member subscribed until the sum of 60*l.* was accumulated; a boat was then ordered by the managers of the society and allotted to one of the members, but the boat remained the property of the society until all the instalments were paid by the allottee to make up the difference between 60*l.* and the cost of the boat; and the society were empowered, in case of default in payment of the instalments, to take possession of the boat. When fifteen boats were built (corresponding with the number of members), and the money paid, the society would be dissolved, having attained its ends. Benjamin Woodall, one of the members, had a boat allotted to him, and for some time paid the instalments, but, becoming involved in pecuniary difficulties, the instalments fell into arrear, and the defendants, who were the committee, were bound to interfere. They accordingly signed the authority which had been put in evidence, and the boat was seized. The defendants alleged that Benjamin Woodall gave the plaintiff notice of the circumstances under which he was in possession of the boat, but whether that was material would be a question for the learned judge. He apprehended that his lordship would tell the jury that Attwood could not become the owner of the boat with a better title than Woodall himself.

CRESSWELL, J.—There is a question whether you ought not to have specially pleaded the limited right of Woodall.

Keating.—That question was under the consideration of the pleader. The plaintiff complained of the seizure; the defendants say they had a right to the boat at that time, and that the plaintiff had no interest in it. A special plea was considered unnecessary. It should be stated that the society offered the boat to the plaintiff provided he would pay the arrears due.

The rules of the society were produced and admitted. They were headed—

Articles of agreement of the Tipton Iron Boat Society, No. 2. Held at Mr. J. Whitehouse's, Swan Inn, Tipton, in the county of Stafford. Dated the 22nd day of July, 1846."

The following are the material parts of the rules:—

"Articles of agreement made and concluded the 22nd day of July, 1846, between the several persons whose names and seals are hereunto subscribed and affixed as members of the society, hereinafter constituted, of the first part, and Thomas Woodall, of Netherton, in the parish of Dudley, boiler maker and iron-boat builder, of the second part.

"1. Whereas the several parties hereunto of the first part agreed to establish a society, with a view of raising by subscriptions a fund, in shares of 125*l.* each, for the purpose of obtaining as many wrought-iron canal-boats as shall be equivalent to the number of shares subscribed for, to the intent that such boats may be allotted and disposed of in the manner hereinafter provided."

"2. Now these presents witness, that the several parties hereto of the first part, in order to carry the said agreement into effect, and accomplish their object, mutually covenant, promise, and agree to and with each other, his executors and administrators, by these presents, that the said several persons will henceforth become a society, under the designation of 'The Tipton Iron Boat Society, No. 2,' for raising by subscription a fund, to be divided into shares of 125*l.* each, and to be applied in obtaining wrought-iron canal-boats of the value of 125*l.* each (subject as hereinafter mentioned), equivalent to the number of shares subscribed for, under the regulations, conditions, and agreements hereinafter contained for the governance of the undertaking; and each person on being admitted a member shall execute these presents, and set forth the number of shares he intends to hold."

3. Provides for the monthly meetings of the members, and states that each member shall, at every such monthly meeting, for every share he may hold, pay to the treasurer of the society for the time being, to be added to the amounts already subscribed, the sum of one pound in aid of the fund, and sixpence to be spent by the members present; and in addition to the above monthly payments, and in augmentation of the fund, pay at every third or quarterly meeting, a further sum of one pound per share; and if any member make default in paying the above contributions when due, or within four weeks afterwards, he shall forfeit one shilling per share; for eight weeks, 2s. 6d.; for twelve weeks, 5s.; for sixteen weeks, 10s.; and in case of default in payment, with such forfeit for four calendar months (seven days' notice in writing having been previously given to or left with the defaulter by the clerk of the society, demanding payment), the committee of the society for the time being shall have full power to sell the share of the defaulter by public auction, and out of the moneys arising therefrom defray the expenses of such sale, and pay to the treasurer all arrears and forfeits then due from such defaulter, his executors, administrators, or assigns; and the receipt of the auctioneer or of the treasurer shall be an absolute discharge for the purchase-money, and effectually vest the property of the share of the purchaser; and if the moneys so to arise shall be insufficient to pay the expenses of such sale, and the arrears due from the defaulter, the deficiency shall be paid and made good by such defaulter to the treasurer on demand.

The 6th article provides for the appointment of a committee of seven, of whom three are empowered to act.

"12. As soon as the sum of 60*l.* (or a sufficient sum, to be regulated by the price of iron as hereinafter mentioned) shall be in the hands of the treasurer, the members on some club-night shall cast lots in order to determine to whom the first boat shall (on the dissolution of the society) belong, by making out as many tickets as there are shares belonging to such of the members who shall then have fully paid up their subscription-money and forfeits; and each such member shall have his name on as many tickets as he shall have shares in the society, &c. and the member whose name shall be written on the ticket so drawn shall be the person to whom (on the dissolution of the society) the boat shall belong, and so from time to time as often as there shall be 60*l.* &c.; and as each boat shall be allotted, the member to whose lot the same falls, shall contract for building it with the said Thomas Woodall," &c.

"14. Every person obtaining a boat by allotment, as aforesaid, shall pay to the society for the use of it the sum of 5*l.* per cent. per annum on the sum to be expended by the society in its completion, as such boat shall not be the property of the member to whom the same shall be allotted, until the society shall be discontinued, but belong to the committee for the time being, in trust for the society, and the letters T. I. B. S. No. 2, made of cast iron, and a number corresponding with the number of each share, according to the order of allotment, shall be affixed thereon, and rivetted to the boat: until the dissolution of the society, every boat shall be kept in good repair by the member to whom the same shall be allotted, and at such dissolution the boats shall become the absolute property of the respective persons to whom they shall have been allotted."

"15. If any member, after he shall have obtained a boat by allotment, shall make default in paying the remainder of his subscription money, forfeits, and interest, in respect of every share he may hold in this society, when due, it shall be lawful for the committee, without any notice whatever, to seize every such boat so allotted to such defaulter, and to let out the same for hire, for the benefit of all the members of the society; and the defaulter shall not be entitled to resume the possession of or use such boat, until the expiration of three calendar months after he shall have fully paid all subscriptions, forfeits, and interest due from him."

The 16th article declares "that no member shall transfer his share in the society to any person."

Turner, who valued the boat with Daukes, stated that the society's mark, "T. I. B. S. No. 2," was on the boat at that time, and that the witness pointed it out to Daukes.

Mr. Whitehead, the secretary of the society, proved that Benjamin Woodall was the allottee of the boat No. 11, and paid in the whole 97*l*. He became in arrear to the amount of 4*l*. or 5*l*. whereupon the boat was seized by the society. On cross-examination the witness said the society was aware that Woodall had let the boat out, and also, before the seizure, that it was sold to Mr. Attwood. The club met every twenty-eight days, and the seizure of the boat was ordered at the first meeting after the sale was known. Benjamin Woodall was not in arrear at the time of the sale to the plaintiff in March 1851. The arrears began in October 1851. The authority for the seizure was given in January, 1852, and acted on in February.

Thomas Woodall, boat-builder and a member of the club, stated that he paid the instalments on the boat, on Benjamin Woodall's behalf, for some time, in consideration of the latter supplying the witness with some iron. When that failed he left off paying the instalments. Witness knew the boat was let to Lord Ward; and the fact of the sale to the plaintiff was told him by Turner, the valuer, and witness's foreman, after Benjamin Woodall became a defaulter. A meeting of the society was called on purpose, and then witness said that the boat was turned over to the plaintiff.

CRESSWELL, J.—Even if the society had notice that the boat was turned over to Mr. Attwood, so long as the instalments were paid there would not be any interference. I think the boat was not the property of the plaintiff, and shall direct the jury accordingly.

Verdict for the defendants on the second issue, for the plaintiff on the first, with leave to move to enter a verdict for him on the second issue.

Equity Courts.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Feb. 21, 22, 26, 27, 1851; Feb. 26, 1852.

BLUNDELL v. GLADSTONE.

Devise to Roman Catholic priest—Latent ambiguity—Admission of evidence—Lapse.

A testator having two farms, A. and B. in C. both in the occupation of the same tenant, D. by his will made a general devise of all his real estates (except the hereditaments thereinafter particularly devised), including all estates vested in him upon trust, or by way of mortgage, to trustees, their heirs and assigns, nevertheless as to such trust and mortgage estates, subject to the subsisting trusts and equity, or right of redemption thereof. In a subsequent part of the will, the said testator devised his farm with the appurtenances in C. in the possession of D. unto the Rev. T. R. in fee. Evidence was admitted which shewed that both by the testator's ancestor and himself it was considered that B. one of the farms in C. was held upon trust for the Roman Catholic priest for the time being at L.

Held, reversing the decision of the Court below, that as the testator considered he held the estate B. upon the trusts before-mentioned, he must be taken to have intended to devise estate B. to the trustees as a trust estate, and that it was immaterial whether the trusts were valid or invalid, and that estate A. (as being excepted from the former devise) was intended to be devised to the Rev. T. R who, having died in the testator's lifetime, it lapsed for the benefit of the testator's heirs-at-law.

This was an appeal from a decree of the late Vice-Chancellor of England by Lord Camoys and Sir Charles Robert Tempest, bart. who, as co-heirs of the testator, Charles Robert Blundell, claimed to be entitled to a farm in Aughton, in the county of Lancaster, called Molyneux, as having been devised by the will of the testator to the Rev. Thomas Robinson, who died in the testator's lifetime. The question to be decided was whether it could be ascertained with sufficient legal certainty that that farm was intended to be devised, or another farm which the testator had in the same parish, and was let to the same tenant who occupied the farm called Molyneux.

The will of the testator, which was dated the 28th of November, 1834, contained the following residuary devise:—"And all and singular my real estate whatsoever and wheresoever (except the hereditaments hereinafter particularly devised), of or to which I or any person or persons in trust for me, am, is, or are seised or entitled for any estate of freehold or inheritance in possession, reversion, remainder, or expectancy, in or of which I have any power of disposition or appointment (including all estates vested in me upon trust or by way of mortgage), and their respective rights, members, and appurtenances, and including any copyhold estates, and all rents and franchise whatsoever relating to any of the said manors, lands, and hereditaments, to hold the same, &c. unto and to the use of my said trustees and executors, their heirs and assigns, for ever; nevertheless, as to such trust and mortgage estates, subject to the subsisting trusts, and equity or right of redemption thereof, and so that all moneys coming to me thereon may form part of my personal estate." In a subsequent part of the will, the testator made the devise to which the present appeal relates, and it is in these words:—"I give, devise, limit, and appoint my farm, with the appurtenances, in Aughton, in the possession of Thomas Haskeyne, and my farm, with the appurtenances, in Lydiate, called Shacklady's, in the possession of — Shacklady, or all my estate and interests therein respectively, unto the Rev. Thomas Robinson, to hold the same unto and to the use of him, his heirs, and assigns for ever."

The testator died on the 30th October, 1837; and a suit having been instituted in relation to the will, and certain proceedings having taken place therein, the cause came on for further directions before the late Vice-Chancellor of England in March, 1841, when his Honour directed a reference to the Master, to inquire what farms and lands the testator had in Aughton.

The Master found that the farms and lands which the testator had in Aughton consisted (amongst other things not in question) of a farm called Shepherd's, containing about thirteen acres of land, Cheshire measure, let to Thomas Haskayne, at the yearly rent of 50*l*. and a farm called Molyneux, containing about thirty acres, Cheshire measure, on lease to the said Thomas Haskeyne, at the yearly rent of 120*l*.; and the Master's report was confirmed by an order dated the 20th of January, 1844.

Lord Camoys and Elizabeth Tempest (under whom the appellant, Charles Robert Tempest, claimed) thereupon presented a petition praying to be let into possession of the farm called Molyneux. The late Vice-Chancellor of England, on the 30th of March, 1844, ordered that the petition should be dismissed, his Honour being of opinion that the facts relied on were inconclusive of the testator's intention; and that, as it had not been shewn with certainty which of the two farms the testator meant to except out of the general devise, his will, so far as those farms were concerned, must be considered as containing no exception at all, and consequently that they passed by the general devise to his trustees. (See 11 Sim. 83.)

A petition of appeal was thereupon presented by the heirs against that order to Lord Lyndhurst, who, by an order dated the 20th of December, 1845, directed that the said order of the 20th of January, 1844, confirming the Master's report, should be discharged, and that the order of the 30th of March, 1844, should be reversed, and that it should be referred back to the Master to inquire what farms and lands the testator had in Aughton, and whether such farms or lands, or any and which of them were or was held by him upon any and what trust.

In pursuance of this order the Master, by his report of the 21st of March, 1849, found to the effect that the farm called Shepherd's was purchased in 1705 by Dame Margaret Anderton of Thomas and Richard Molyneux, who conveyed and covenanted to levy a fine to the use and behoof of Nicholas Starkie and Henry Tyrer, as trustees for Dame Margaret Anderton. That lady, by her will in 1720, devised all her lands in Aughton and certain other places to the use of Nicholas Starkie, his heirs and assigns for ever. That at the time of making her will, and at her death, she was seised of the farms called Molyneux and Shepherds, and other farms and lands at Aughton. The Master then stated two marriage settlements, one dated the 20th of February, 1728, the other the 30th of March, 1761, whereby all the lands in Aughton and certain other places, which had belonged to Dame Margaret Anderton, were put in settlement, except Shepherd's farm, which was expressly excepted in each settlement.

The Master then made the following statement:—"It hath been alleged before me that the messuage or tenement, with its appurtenances, in Aughton, excepted as aforesaid by the two last-mentioned indentures, was by some instrument, or in some other manner, directed by the said Dame Margaret Anderton to be held in trust to or for the benefit of the priest of the Roman Catholic Church, who should for the time being officiate in Lydiate aforesaid, and that the rents and profits of the said messuage or tenement should from time to time be paid to him accordingly, and that a deed or instrument in writing was executed by the said Dame Margaret Anderton for that purpose, but which cannot be found; but such allegation hath not in any manner been proved before me, and hath not been admitted by the solicitor for the plaintiff, yet I conceive that from the terms of the recitals in and effect of the deed next hereinafter stated, that it may be presumed that such trust was created, and in some manner declared, although such declaration or any evidence that the same existed cannot now be found."

The Master then stated that Henry Blundell, who, according to the Master's report, was the son of Robert Blundell, the heir-at-law of Sir Francis Anderton, and was one of two parties in the last of the two settlements before mentioned, executed a declaration of trust, bearing date the 11th of May, 1793, and that in such indenture it was recited, among other things, that the said Henry Blundell was then in the occupation and in the receipt of the rents and profits of a certain estate, situate in Aughton, in the county of Lancaster, commonly called Shepherd's tenement, consisting of a messuage or dwelling-house, and out-buildings, and about seventeen acres of land, then in the occupation of Richard Molyneux, as farmer thereof; that he, the said Henry Blundell, had also the custody of all the deeds, evidences, and writings relating to the title of the said estates; that the said estate was purchased in the year 1705 by the Honourable Dame Margaret Anderton, then late of Loslock, in the said county of Lancaster, widow, deceased, and by her designed and ordered for the benefit and advantage of such priest of the Roman Catholic religion who should officiate in the township of Lydiate, in the said county of Lancaster; that the said Henry Blundell was desirous that the clear rents, issues, and produce of the said estate in Aughton, should from time to time be paid to and be received by the priest of the Roman Catholic religion officiating in Lydiate aforesaid, according to the intention of the said Dame Margaret Anderton; and it is then by the said deed witnessed, that in consideration of the premises, and with a view towards permanently securing the benefit of such priest as aforesaid, and in consideration of five shillings, the said Henry Blundell did thereby testify and declare that he had not any right, title, interest, property, claim, or demand of, into, or out of the said estate, or any part thereof, for his own private use, advantage, benefit, or behoof, but all and every the right, title, and interest therein, which in any manner was vested in him, he had and held the same in trust as to the said estate at Aughton, and the deeds and writings thereto belonging, for the benefit and advantage of the officiating Roman Catholic priest in Lydiate aforesaid for the time being, and to and for no other use, intent, or purpose whatsoever; and the said Henry Blundell thereby covenanted for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, with the said testator Charles Robert Blundell and Thomas Stanley Massey, their heirs and assigns, that he, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, would from time to time, and at all times thereafter, for ever pay to the Roman Catholic priest for the time being officiating in Lydiate aforesaid, the yearly rents, issues, and profits of the said estate in Aughton aforesaid, as the same should arise and come to his or their hands after deducting the expenses of all needful and necessary repairs, taxes, assessments, and other outgoings for the use of such priest; and that he, his heirs, executors, and administrators, would, to the utmost of his and their power, promote and assist the said priest for the time being in the receipt of the said clear rents and issues and profits of the said premises, and not in any manner retard, hinder, or prevent their full enjoyment thereof.

And the Master found that Henry Blundell died in the year 1810, leaving one son only, Charles Robert Blundell, the testator. And the testator having suffered a recovery, became seised in fee of the hereditaments comprised in the last settlement.

And the Master further found that in the rent-books of the said Henry Blundell, subsequent to the year 1793, and also in the rent-books of the testator, the rent of Shepherd's farm for a long period had some special note or description attached to it, and amongst others such expressions as the following,—"The priest of Lydiate," "As trustee for Shepherd's," "As trustee for the priest's estate," "Shepherd's, the priest at Lydiate," "Shepherd's, in trust for the priest at Lydiate Hall," or similar words denoting the existence of some trust.

And the Master further stated, that from the year 1822 to the year 1832 inclusive, with the exception only of the year 1828, there were contained in the rent-books of the testator for that period entries for rents received in respect of waste land belonging to "Shepherd's Farm" or "the priest's estate," and sometimes in the words, "waste land in Cleeves Hill belonging to priest's estate." At other times, "Waste land belonging to the priest's estate;" at other times, "Waste land belonging to Shepherd's;" at other times, "Waste land in trust." And the Master found that it was also stated in the cash-book of James Fletcher, the steward or agent of the said Henry Blundell, containing the rent account as settled between and by the said James Fletcher and the said Henry Blundell, and signed, as allowed by them, the following items as payments out of the rents:—

Creditor—that is to say, "1808, June 29th, by cash paid the Rev. Mr. Johnson the sum due of Aughton Estate, after deducting his share of property tax, 3*l*. 18s.; 1809, February 9th, by ditto, the Rev. Mr. Johnson, for half a year's rent of Shepherd's, in Aughton, 25*l*.; July 4th, by ditto, the Rev. Mr. Johnson, half a year's rent, deducting property-tax, 22*l*. 8s. 10d." And that in the account of the said James Fletcher, subsequently to the death of the said Henry Blundell, as the steward and agent of the executors of the said Henry Blundell, and signed and allowed by two of them, there are contained the items:—"1810, February 13th, by cash paid the Rev. Mr. Johnson, Lydiate, half a year's rent of Shepherd's, deducting property tax, 2*l*. 12s. 2d., 22*l*. 11s. 10d.; June 10th, the Rev. Mr. Johnson, half a year's rent, 25*l*."

And the Master stated that a Mr. Tate, who was a Roman Catholic priest of Lydiate, from the year 1823 to the time of the death of the testator, delivered to the executors an account setting forth divers sums of money as rent received by the testator as trustee for the incumbent of Lydiate.(a)

And the Master further stated, that by the affidavit of Mary Fletcher, daughter of James Fletcher, it is stated that in the cash-book of James Fletcher there is an entry in the following words:—"By cash, paid the Rev. Mr. Johnson first half year's rent of Shepherd's, in Aughton." And each half year, from November, 1811, to the 6th of May, 1818, similar entries are made, and that such books of account were regularly examined and signed by the testator, Charles Robert Blundell, up to the month of March, 1834, when her father finally settled his accounts with Mr. Blundell.

The Master stated and found that the Rev. Robert Johnson, who is mentioned in that account, was the officiating minister of the Roman Catholic church of Lydiate for many years previous to the date when Mr. Tate became such minister, and continued to be up to a short time before his death, in 1823.

The Master also found that Ann Sephton, a person of the age of sixty-six years, well remembered the parish of Aughton for sixty years past, and that a farm at Aughton, which appeared to be Shepherd's Farm, was called, and was long known in the parish by the name of the priest's land, and that she had often heard her mother and others say that the farm was considered to belong to the Roman Catholic priest for the time being of Lydiate. The Master further found that the testator, up to the time of making his will had, in Aughton, a farm called Molyneux, containing about thirty acres of land, Cheshire measure, and that he was beneficially seised of or entitled thereto, and that he was in receipt of the rents and profits of Shepherd's tenement and seventeen acres of land, Cheshire measure, in Aughton, and certain waste land, and that the testator held the same in trust for the Roman Catholic priest for the time being of Lydiate, such trust having been created by Dame Margaret Anderton, and afterwards by Henry Blundell, the father of the testator, by the indenture of the 11th of May, 1793.

On the 25th of May, 1849, the appellants presented a petition praying that this report might be confirmed; and on the previous day the plaintiff, T. Weld Blundell, presented a petition praying that the report might not be confirmed, and that his petition might be considered as, or in the nature of, exceptions thereto, and that it might be declared that the farms and lands which the testator had in Aughton were not held by him on any trust or otherwise; that it might be referred back to the Master to review his report for the following reasons:—

1st. That there did not exist any evidence of any deed or instrument in writing ever having been made or signed by Dame Margaret Anderton, who mentioned the farm called Shepherd's, in the year 1705, and made her will in 1720, and died soon afterwards, whereby she declared any trust in the said farm called Shepherd's, or the rents and profits thereof to or for the benefit of the Roman Catholic priest for the time being officiating at Lydiate aforesaid; and that any declaration of trust by her must, according to the provision of the Statute of Frauds, be manifested, or proved by some writing, signed by her, or by her will, or else the same would be utterly void, or of no effect.

2ndly. That no such declaration of trust in writing could or ought to be presumed, inasmuch as there was no fact in evidence on which to ground such presumption, and inasmuch as having regard to the state of the law at that time touching Roman Catholic priests professing the Roman Catholic religion, such declaration would have been for a superstitious and unlawful use.

3rdly. That the indenture of the 11th of May, 1793, in the report mentioned to have been executed by the said Henry Blundell, the father of the testator, raised an inference against any declaration of trust in writing having been signed by the said Dame Margaret Anderton, inasmuch as if there had been any such declaration in writing by her, no further declaration in writing by the said Henry Blundell or any other party would have been necessary, or would have been of any avail.

4thly. That the indenture of the 11th of May, 1793, was not effectual for the purpose of declaring any trust of the said farm called Shepherd's, for the benefit of a Roman Catholic priest for the time being of Lydiate, inasmuch as such indenture was not enrolled in her Majesty's High Court of Chancery within six calendar months next after the execution thereof, according to the provision of the Act of the 9 Geo. 2, for restraining the disposition of land, whereby the same became inalienable, and was therefore null and void.

5thly. That such indenture did not state any declaration of trust in writing to have been made or signed by the said Dame Margaret Anderton, nor furnish any evidence or presumption in favour of any such declaration of trust in writing by her.

6thly. That such indenture could not operate to confirm any trust in favour of the Roman Catholic priest for the time being at Lydiate, created or supposed to have been created by the said Dame Margaret Anderton, inasmuch as any trust created or supposed to have been created by her would have been null and void.

These two petitions came on to be heard before the late Vice-Chancellor of England on the 29th of June, 1849; and by an order of that date, his Honour declared that the farm called Molyneux passed under the general devise contained in the will to the trustees and executors therein named, and that the petition of the 25th of May, presented by the appellants for the confirmation of the Master's report, should be dismissed.

From this decision of the Vice-Chancellor the heirs-at-law now appealed to the Lord Chancellor.

J. Parker, Malins, and Fleming for the appellants, contended that it must have been the intention of the testator to except Molyneux farm from the general devise to trustees, and to give it and not Shepherd's farm to the Rev. Mr. Robinson, for although an ambiguity was created by both farms being in Aughton and both in the occupation of the same tenant, yet as Shepherd's was subject to a trust for the benefit of a Roman Catholic priest, it clearly shewed that such last-mentioned farm was not intended to be devised to Mr. Robinson. That three objections had substance been raised to the appellant's claim. First, it was said that according to the Statutes of Frauds a trust of lands could not be declared by parol. That might as a general rule be so, but there was a well known exception in those cases where land was either devised or left to descend, upon the faith that the heir or devisee would do certain acts in favour of certain persons (Strickland v. Aldridge, 9 Ves 516; Paine v. Hall, 18 Ves. 175; Podmore v. Gunning, 5 Sim. 185.) The second objection was that in and before 1793, when the alleged trust for the Roman Catholic priest was enacted, it was illegal and void. That may have been so, but it was rendered good by 2 & 3 Wm. 4, c 115. (Bradshaw v. Tasker, 2 My. & K. 221; West v. Shuttleworth, 2 My. & K. 684.) The third objection was that the deed of gift from Lady Anderton was not properly rolled. In answer to this it must be observed that the Statute of Mortmain, 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, did not pass until after her death, and therefore the trust was not affected by it. The trust is admitted by the trustee, and under such circumstances as these the Court ought not to dispute it. (Attorney-General v. Ward, 6 Hare, 477.) The question is not whether there was a valid trust as to Shepherd's, but whether the testator considered such trust to be in existence. As to the admissibility of evidence. (Wig. on Extrinsic Evidence, prop. v. Blundell v. Gladstone 1 Phil. 279. They also cited Broome v. Monk, 10 V 97, 605; Napier v. Napier, 1 Sim. 28; Denn v. Rooke, 5 B. & C. 720.)

Bethell, Bacon, Campbell, and Witham in support of the decision of the Court below, contended that the parol trust was void by the Statute of Frauds, or even if it were not so it was void under the laws which formerly affected Roman Catholics; as to which subject they referred to the following statutes and cases: 23 Hen. 8, c. 10; 1 Eliz. c. 1; 5 Eliz. c. 1; 27 Eliz. c. 2, ss. 3 & 4; 11 & 12 Wm. 3, c. 4, s. 4; 18 Geo. 3, c. 60; 13 Geo. 3, c. 32; The Attorney-General v. Gayner Jones, 1 Cro. Eliz. 288; Journals of the House of Lords, vol. xiv. 560, 20th Nov. 1690; Printed Cases in House of Lords, Linc. Inn Library, vol. i. 175; Martindale v. Martin, 1 Rep, 16, a, b; Porter's case, Moore's Rep. 781; Croft v. Evetts, 1 Salk, 162; The King v. Portington, 3 Salk. 334; Carey v. Abbot, 7 Ves. 190; Da Costa v. De Pas, 1 Amb. 228; Jenner v. Harper, 1 P. Wms. 247; Addlington v. Cann, 3 Atk. 141; The Attorney-General v. Ward, 6 Hare, 477. That the enrolment necessary under 6 Geo. 2, c. 36, could not be preserved. As to presumption, they cited Williams v. The East-India Company, 3 East, 192; Rex v. The Inhabitants of Twining, 2 B. & Ald. 386.

J. Parker, in reply, said that Rex v. Twining was not to be any longer considered an authority, and cited Lapsley v. Grierson, 1 H. & Ca. 498. He also referred to The Attorney-General v. Todd, 1 Keen, 803.

The LORD CHANCELLOR, (a) after stating the facts before given, said, the onus or burthen of producing the evidence by which the farm intended to pass by the devise was to be ascertained rests upon the respondents, and I have examined the evidence produced on their behalf, by which they contend that it is established with sufficient legal certainty, that Molyneux's farm was the farm intended to pass by that devise. It appears that the ground on which the Vice-Chancellor, by the order of the 30th of March, 1844, dismissed the appeal of Lord Camoys and Elizabeth Tempest, praying that they might be let into possession of Molyneux Farm, was, that there was nothing in the will to shew that the trusts meant any thing else but the subsisting trusts,—that there was no evidence that there were any subsisting trusts, or that the testator meant to devise one farm rather than the other; that, therefore, there was nothing to shew with certainty what the exception was, and, consequently, as to the farms in Aughton there was no exception, and such being the case, they passed under the general devise to the trustees and executors in the same manner as if there had been no exception in words. It also appears that the Vice-Chancellor made the order which is the subject of appeal, on the same ground, and notwithstanding the Master's report, he still remained of opinion that there was no valid trust of either of the farms in Aughton. In the beginning of his judgment he says, "The mere question, as I understand it, is this, whether such farms and lands, or any or which of them were or was held by the testator on any and what trust,—that is the real question." And in another part, after reviewing the Master's report, he says, "I think the fact remains as it did before, namely, that Mr. Blundell, at the time of his death, was not bound by any subsisting trust,—any valid trust which could have been enforced as against him by the Roman Catholic priest." And this view of the question to be tried seems to me to be in accordance with the language which, from the same notes, appears to have been used by Lord Lyndhurst, and with the terms of the order of reference made by him, when he referred it back to the Master to inquire as to the existence of any trust, for his lordship is reported to have said in that judgment, "Upon the case as it stood, I think the Vice-Chancellor's decree was right: but if it should appear that Shepherd's was held by the testator on any valid trust, it seems that the will may be so construed as to include it in the general first devise, and if so, the subsequent devise of the farm in Aughton may perhaps be construed to refer to the farm in Aughton not before devised, and this was Moylyneux. The proper course will therefore be to refer it back to the Master to inquire whether the estate or interest of the testator in the farms in question, or either of them, was subject to any and what trust, with liberty to the Master to state special circumstances." The terms of the order made by Lord Lyndhurst were in accordance with this judgment. The question being which farm the testator intended to give to Mr. Robinson, and the devise importing a beneficial devise, it would seem that if Shepherd's farm was held by the testator on a valid trust, and Molyneux farm was not, Shepherd's may be regarded as included in the general devise to the trustees and executors, and Molyneux farm may be considered to be the farm meant to pass in the subsequent devise. But I do not think that in the absence of proof Shepherd's was held on a valid trust, that it would then be necessarily uncertain which of the two estates was meant to pass by the substituted devise, nor did Lord Lyndhurst appear, either directly or indirectly, to assert this. The expressions used by Lord Lynhurst are quite consistent with his having considered it, if not certain, yet highly probable, that the Master would find, as he did in fact find, that there was a valid trust, and that he (Lord Lyndhurst) should have been satisfied with the Master's conclusion upon that point. He may, therefore, not have thought it necessary to make the terms of the inquiry more extensive by directing the Master to inquire whether the farms, or any of them, were or was held by the testator, or treated by him as if held, on any and what trusts, therefore I do not conceive the observations I am about to make are necessarily at variance with Lord Lyndhurst's view of the question. But even supposing this to be otherwise, I must, although with the greatest deference, express my opinion, that the only question which is absolutely necessary to be decided is this, not whether the testator really held these estates, or one of them, on any valid trusts, but rather what he considered and understood to be the trust. Whether he supposed he held them, or one of them, on any and what trust, or intended to treat them and have them treated, either them or one of them, as if held on trust. If he supposed that he held one on trust, or treated one of them as if held on trust. and intended it should be continued as if held on trust, and if it does not appear that he held or supposed that he held the other on any trust, I repeat that it seems to me that the one which he supposed he held in trust, and treated as if he held it in trust, and intended to be treated as held on trust, cannot be regarded as having been intended by him to be the subject of devise to Mr Robinson, and consequently, that the other estate may be deemed to be the one referred to in the devise. The point to be determined is, whether the case furnishes the means of ascertaining, with sufficient legal certainty, which of the two farms in Aughton the testator intended to give by the devise. The devise is expressed in general terms, unaccompanied by any words restrictive of their effect, and he must, therefore, be taken to be giving the subject-matter of devise beneficially to the devisee. The estate is not described as trust estate, neither is it given with a view that any trust shall be admitted respecting it. The inference from the terms of the devise that the subject-matter of it was not given upon trust, nor intended to be treated as subject to any trust, strengthened by the difference in the structure and language of the two devises to which I have referred. And if it can be proved, or may be assumed, that the devise is to be construed to be beneficial, or in other words, if the subject of it was given for the personal advantage of the devisee, it will, as I before stated, as it seems to me, follow that, if it can also be ascertained that one of the farms at Aughton was subject to a trust, or that the testator desired or intended that it should be applied to purposes other than those which would be beneficial to the devisee, it ought to be inferred that the farm could not be intended to pass under a devise the terms of which indicate it was to be beneficially enjoyed by the devisee. I will state the facts, which I think are sufficient in themselves. The two houses were purchased by Lady Anderton, that the property devised from Lady Anderton became the subject of two settlements, and that Shepherd's farm was expressly excepted out of those two settlements, but for what reason does not distinctly appear. However, from the statement in the declaration of trust, and the deed of covenant executed by Henry Blundell, from whom the testator devised his estate, and that deed in 1793, it is certainly highly probable, though it may not be established with legal certainty, that it was in fact subject to a trust, or at all events esteemed to be so, which precluded it from being at the disposal of those who could beneficially dispose of the remainder of Lady Anderton's property. The testator, as I have stated, devised the property in Aughton from Henry Blundell, and is therefore affected by Henry Blundell's acts and declaration while in possession of those estates, regarding the nature of his interest in them. Henry Blundell, as before stated, in 1793, executed a formal declaration of trust under his hand and seal, by which he declared that Shepherd's farm had been ordered and directed by Lady Anderton, the former owner, to be held in trust for the Roman Catholic priest officiating in Lydiate, and that he, Henry Blundell, held it upon trust also for the same purpose, and covenanted to apply the proceeds accordingly. It is further proved that, in the rent-books of Henry Blundell, Shepherd's farm was always inserted, accompanied with words importing that it was trust property. The expressions are various, as appears by the Master's report, but all to the same substantial end. Further, the steward's account, in which the steward is charged with the receipt of the rent of Shepherd's farm, contains as a credit a charge as having paid the amount of the rent credited to the Roman Catholic priest officiating in Lydiate. The same course was also pursued in the testator's time, that is, treating Shepherd's farm as held, or at all events as applied as a trust to the Roman Catholic priest officiating in Lydiate. I consider the evidence which I have detailed, therefore, to establish that throughout the lives of the testator's father, from whom he derived the estate, and of himself, that the proceeds of Shepherd's farm were always paid and applied to the use and benefit of the Roman Catholic priest officiating in Lydiate. The evidence does not apply to each year during their lives, but to a sufficient number of years to furnish satisfactory evidence, notwithstanding occasional omissions, that the same course was pursued throughout their lives. It is not altogether immaterial that Shepherd's farm had acquired by reputation the name of the priest's land. I am of opinion that the evidence I have stated established with sufficient legal certainty that Shepherd's farm came to the testator's, at all events, as property subject to a trust that he accepted, voluntarily or otherwise, and adopted such trust, and applied the proceeds in conformity with the real or supposed trust, and that he understood and intended to comprise it in the general devise of his trust estates, and that he did not intend the devise to John Robinson, of "his farm in Aughton" to comprise or include Shepherd's Farm, and that as he had no other farm in Aughton than Shepherd's Farm or Molyneux's Farm, it follows that Molyneux's farm was intended to pass by that devise. The decision of the Vice-Chancellor must be reversed, with a declaration that Molyneux's farm was intended to be devised to the said Rev. Thomas Robinson, and that the estate lapsed in favour of the coheirs of the testator. Costs to be paid out of the estate of the testator.

(a) The Lord Chancellor said, although this statement was made by the Master, it was not evidence, and he did not, therefore, rely upon it in the opinion he had formed.

(a) Lord Truro.

IN LUNACY.

LEAF v. COLES, re COLES.

March 13 and May 5.

Lunacy—Recovery of a lunatic—Mode of proceeding in such cases—Re-transfer of his estate from his committee—8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, considered.

In a case where the dissolution of a partnership had been decreed in consequence of the lunacy of one of the partners, and large sums had been paid into court to the separate account of the lunatic in respect of his share of the capital and profits of the business: the Lord Chancellor, on being subsequently satisfied of the complete recovery of the lunatic, ordered the fund to be paid out to him.

On the 10th December, 1851, a decree was made in this cause and matter by Lord Truro, L. C. (1 De Gex, M. & G. 171) for the dissolution from that date of the partnership which then existed between the plaintiffs and the defendant, James Coles, on the ground of the insanity of the defendant, upon the terms of the plaintiff paying into court, to the credit of the cause and matter, to an account to be entitled "The separate account of James Coles, a person of unsound mind;—capital account," the sum of 66,474*l.* 5s. 1d. as the amount of the capital of the defendant in the business on the 31st December, 1850, including his share of the profits therein up to the same day; and also of paying into court, to an account to be entitled "The separate account of James Coles, a person of unsound mind—income account," the sum of 6,726*l.* 8s. 5d. in respect of his share of the profits of the business from the 31st December, 1850, to the dissolution, and interest on the said sum of 66,474*l.* 5s. 1d. at 5 per cent. from the 31st December, 1850, to the 12th January, 1852, after deducting the amount of certain sums drawn out on account of the defendant, and interest thereon. The payments were accordingly made by the plaintiffs. Shortly afterwards the defendant, James Coles, became restored to health and soundness of mind; and on the 10th February, 1852, was, under the 72nd section of the Act 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, discharged from the care of Dr. Stilwell, with whom he had been placed.

The defendant then presented a petition to the Lord Chancellor, which, after stating the proceedings in the suit and above facts, and that he had gradually completely recovered his health, and was then of sound mind, and sufficient for the government of himself and of his estate, and was willing to submit himself to the examination of such medical men as his lordship should direct, and that he entirely approved of the arrangement made with respect to the co-partnership and his interests therein, prayed that the before-mentioned two several sums might be respectively paid to him, and that George Coles, the brother of the petitioner, and who had be appointed the guardian of his person, and the receiver of his estate, might be discharged from those offices.

The petition was supported by the affidavits of Doctors Conolly and Stilwell.

Bethell and Chapman Barber appeared for the petitioner.

Bacon and Stevens for the guardian and receiver, the heir-at-law, and all the next of kin who consented.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—I should be sorry, by any delay in making the order which is asked, to throw the slightest imputation of a doubt on my belief of Mr. Coles's recovery; but his recovery is very recent, and the Act of Parliament has manifestly pointed out that there shall, in these cases, be a discretion in the holder of the Great Seal during a particular portion of time. What I propose to do, having some experience in matters of this kind, is, to make an order for the payment to the petitioner of such a sum of money as he may have immediate occasion for; if for instance, he requires the 6,726*l.* 8s. 5d. he may, on these affidavits, receive it. If this was a case of real estate I feel that I could have no hesitation in making the order at once; but the sum in court is a very large one to be put into the possession of any man, and looking, therefore, to the safety and comfort of Mr. Coles, looking also at the Providence which is over us all, and which has so visited him, I think it will be more prudent to delay the order for the payment of the whole of the fund. I repeat that in prudence I think it better to make now an order for the payment only of such sum as he may require for his immediate wants, and I propose on this day month to request one of the Masters to see Mr. Coles, and after that, when I have had the pleasure of conversing with Mr. Coles for a quarter of an hour in my private room, I will make the order for the payment of the whole of the funds in court.

Bethell, on being asked by his lordship what sum would be now required, stated that nothing would be wanted at present; the main object of the petition being to obtain the investment of the 66,474*l.* 5s. 1d. which was in court and unproductive.

The LORD CHANCELLOR, stating that he wished it to be understood that he did not entertain the least doubt of Mr. Coles's recovery, then made an order that the sum of 66,474*l.* 5s. 1d. should be invested in Consols, and that Mr. Coles should attend one of the Masters in Lunacy on the 13th of April next, in order that the Master might personally examine him as to his state of mind.

On that day, Mr. Coles attended the Master, in pursuance of the foregoing order, and the Master having made his report, dated the 16th of April, 1852, the petition was again put in the paper of the Lord Chancellor.

The LORD CHANCELLOR, on coming into court, said that he had just had an interview with Mr. Coles in his private room, and that the result was that he had much pleasure in making the order asked by the petition.

The order stated that upon hearing the petition and report of the Master, and Mr. Coles having attended and been personally examined by the Lord Chancellor, and appearing to be in a sound state of mind, his lordship ordered that the proceedings in the matter should be superseded and determined, and that George Coles should be discharged from the several offices of guardian and receiver, and from the care of the person and receipt of the estate of James Coles, and that James Coles should be restored to the government of himself and his estate; and his lordship further ordered that the stock purchased with the said sum of 66,474*l.* 5s. 1d. in pursuance of the order of the 13th March, 1852, should be transferred into the name of James Coles, and that the said sum of 6,726*l.* 8s. 5d. cash, should be paid to James Coles.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL v. MAYOR OF EXETER, re THE HOSPITAL OF ST. JOHN.

Municipal Corporation Act—Construction of the 71st section—Charitable trustees.

The corporation of the city of Exeter, with their recorder, were, before the passing of the Municipal Corporation Act, trustees of the hospital of St. John, the recorder, though not a member of the corporation of the city, was elected by that body:

Held, that this was a corporation, as charitable trustees, within the meaning of the 71st section of the Act 5 & 6 Wm. 4, c. 76.

The mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of the city of Exeter were, together with their recorder, who was not a member of the corporation, before the passing of the Municipal Corporation Reform Act, trustees of the charity of St. John's Hospital.

Lord Cottenham, by an order made in 1851, on a petition presented to his lordship for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of the Court as to whether the corporation were charitable trustees of the hospital under the 71st section of the Municipal Corporations Act or not, decided that the purposes for which the hospital was designed were charitable, and that as such it could not be vested in them otherwise than as contemplated by 5 & 6 Wm. 4, c. 76; and that such properties were by that Act withdrawn from corporations and transferred to other trustees. (3 Mac. & Gor. 235.)

An appointment of a schoolmaster having become vacant, and the corporation considering the above order erroneous, again desired the opinion of the Court on the construction of the Act. The question turned on the 71st section, which, as far as it was material, was as follows:—"Whereas divers bodies corporate now stand seised or possessed of sundry hereditaments and estates in trust, in whole or in part, for certain charitable trusts, and it is expedient that the administration thereof be kept distinct from that of the public stock and borough fund; be it enacted, that in every borough in which the body corporate, or any one or more of the members of such body corporate, in his or their corporate capacity, now stands or stand solely or together with any person or persons elected solely by such body corporate, or solely by any particular number, class, or description of members of such body corporate, seised or possessed for any estate or interest whatsoever, of any hereditaments, or any sums of money, chattels, securities for money, or any other personal estate whatsoever, in whole or in part, in trust or for the benefit of any charitable uses or trusts whatsoever, all the estate, right, interest, and title, and all the powers of such body corporate, or of such member or members of such body corporate, in respect of the said uses and trusts, shall continue in the persons who, at the time of the passing of this Act, are such trustees as aforesaid, notwithstanding that they may have ceased to hold any office by virtue of which, before the passing of this Act, they were such trustees until the 1st day of August, 1836, or until Parliament shall otherwise order, and shall immediately thereupon utterly cease and determine."

Fooks, in the absence of Rolt, opened the case, and contended that the Hospital of St. John was not a charitable trust within the meaning of the Act, it was a corporation distinct from that of the city; the duties of the one corporation were inconsistent with those of the other, and its offices could not be satisfactorily and disinterestedly discharged were its management confided to the same body. Some of the trustees of the hospital were incapable of becoming members of the city corporation. The recorder, though not a member of the one, was yet a trustee of the other. They were distinct bodies, had distinct officers, and a distinct seal.

Follett, for the trustees, contended that the language of the 71st section was conclusive. The recorder, though not a member of the corporation, was elected by that body; the Act applied as well to the members of, as to those elected by, the corporation, and would in either event apply. The word "trustees" in the interpretation clause was not only meant to include trustees in the ordinary sense of the word, but to mean any person charged with the execution of a trust, and had no reference to the manner in which, or to the persons by whom such persons might be appointed.

Rolt in reply.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—The corporation of the city of Exeter consisted of its mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty; and at the time of the passing of the Municipal Corporation Act, the corporation of that city, with their recorder, were incorporated for a certain charitable purpose. The first question, therefore, was, whether that purpose was of such a character as to be within the operation of the 71st section of the 5 & 6 Wm. 4, c. 76. Of that there was no doubt; but were those persons who had been so incorporated a distinct body? Could they be so distinguished from the city corporation as to be considered for the purposes of the charity a separate and distinct corporation? There might be and were several instances of a corporation of mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, constituting separate corporations, and distinct as respected several purposes. The city of London was one of them, and Bristol another. The corporations of each of those cities were trustees for distinct purposes. Looking at the nature of this corporation, and the manner in which it was constituted, his lordship very much doubted whether, as the law at present stood, it existed at all, as a separate and distinct corporation. That, though, was not the question which he had to decide, but without its members were substantially, not nominally, different for the corporation of the city, if its objects were not of a totally different character, he must consider it as within the Act. The members of both corporations were the same, with the exception of the recorder, who was an officer elected by themselves, and the objects of the hospital were undeniably of a charitable nature. They had the management of the funds and the appointment of the officers. Now the object of the Legislature in passing the 5 & 6 Wm. 4, c. 74, was to prevent corporations from blending together the funds of different charities which were confided to them. It was anxious lest the funds belonging to charities should be confounded with those of other institutions. It was probable that such might happen; and to guard against that probability it was considered advisable to have distinct trustees. His lordship considered that these were not distinct corporations; he considered that the one was so allied with the other, and was so essentially the same, that he could not see how they could be excluded from the provisions of the Act. The 71st section, he was of opinion, was applicable to such a corporation, and in that opinion he was confirmed by the 73rd section and the interpretation clause. Petition dismissed; but without costs.

IN LUNACY.

Re WILSON.

Refusal of the carriage of a commission to the son-in-law—Borrowing money of an alleged lunatic.

The Court is very reluctant at issuing commissions in the cases of persons whose minds have become affected merely by age and infirmity.

Stuart and Elderton appeared in support of the petition in this case, which was presented by the son-in-law and daughter of the alleged lunatic, and who applied for the carriage of the commission.

The alleged lunatic was a person of considerable substance, and lately lived upon his own property. At the instance of his son-in-law he sold it, and went to reside with him. Part of the produce of the sale the son-in-law borrowed, on the security of a bill of sale of his household furniture, and the good will of a school, which he (the son-in-law) had lately established.

The LORD CHANCELLOR said that he had always been very reluctant to issue commissions of lunacy against persons whose minds had become affected merely by age and infirmity. It was the duty of those whom such persons had taken care of when young to watch over and tend their parents when old. They ought not for slight and trivial reasons to sue out commissions, and commit their relatives to the custody, and place them under the control of strangers. The party applying for this commission had been dealing with the property of the alleged lunatic, his father-in-law, as if it had been his own, and in his dealing with him, he had treated him as a sane person; he had borrowed of him 700*l.* upon (to say the very least) very uncertain security, and he now came to this Court and asked for a commission against this very person. It was difficult to understand how he (the petitioner) could consider him sane enough to lend him 700*l.* on a bill of sale, and now affect to treat him as a lunatic. His lordship was of opinion that a commission ought to issue to protect, as well his person as his property, and he would consult with the Master as to the best method of securing both those objects; he certainly would not trust the carriage of the commission to the petitioners. If this unfortunate person had not been a person of substance, this application would not in all probability have been made.

DUNKLEY v. DUNKLEY.

Married woman—Husband and wife—Wife's equity to a settlement—Claim of creditors on the part of the husband to participate in a fund belonging to the wife—Practice—Appeal—Claim.

A wife obtained a divorce from her husband on the ground of adultery, but without alimony. On the falling in of the wife's reversionary interest in a sum of 1,000l. the whole of that amount was directed to be settled in opposition to the claim of the assignees of the husband.

It is in the discretion of the judge to settle the whole, or any smaller portion of a fund on a married woman.

In a case where no provision had been made by a husband for his wife and children, the Court directed the whole of a fund to be settled to her separate use.

On an appeal under a claim, there must in future be a deposit as upon a bill.

The practice as to the opening of an appeal under a claim is the same as under a Bill.

This was an appeal from an order of the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce made on a claim.

Bethell directed the attention of the Court to the omission of the payment of a deposit on appeals under claims.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—The omission shall be supplied; I will make an order declaring that in future no appeal under a claim shall be set down until the usual deposit be paid.

Schomberg, for the appellant, claimed the right of opening the case.

Bethell objected, on the ground that the appeal was from the whole decree. In an ordinary suit, by bill, he would have had the right.

The LORD CHANCELLOR held that to be the better practice.

The facts of this case were shortly these:—Mr. Dunkley, the husband of the plaintiff, had been living in a state of adultery since 1840. In 1850 the wife obtained a divorce. During the whole of that time the husband forsook his wife and children, and did not contribute anything to their support. In 1850 a sum of 1,000*l.* (being property which had belonged to the father of the wife) fell into possession, and to which the assignees of the husband, who had become bankrupt, laid claim. The husband had previously obtained in right of his wife property to a considerable amount.

On a claim by the wife, the Vice-Chancellor ordered the whole fund to be settled on herself and children.

From this order the assignees appealed.

Bethell and Leach supported the order of the Vice-Chancellor.

Schomberg and Burden appeared for the appellants.

J. H. Palmer for the trustees of the fund.

The following cases were cited during the argument:—Gardner v. Marshall, 14 Si. 575; Scott v. Spashett, 3 Mac. & G. 599; Gilchrist v. Cator, 1 De G. & S. 288; Napier v. Napier, 1 Dr. & W. 407; Vaughan v. Buck, 1 Si. N.S. 284; Greedy v. Lavender, 13 Bea. 62; Green v. Otte, 1 S. & S. 250; Coster v. Coster, 9 Si. 595, Brett v. Greenwell, 2 Y. & C. Ex. cases, 230; Ball v. Montgomery, cited in Oswell v. Probert; Burdon v. Dean, 2 Ves. jun. 607, 680; Sturgis v. Champneys, 5 M. & C. 97.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—It is of great importance that there should be some settled practice as to this point, in order that counsel, when giving advice in chambers upon cases of this kind, may advise their clients of the law, and so save much expensive litigation and its attendant delays. There is a discretion reposed in the judge, but it is only a judicial discretion; there is, however, a rule which can guide me in exercising it. Now, first let us consider what that rule is: According to the old practice, the fund, in ordinary cases, where there was no misconduct, was equally divided. I believe I set the example in Ireland (Napier v. Napier) of deciding what share the wife ought to have and that without directing a reference. I did so, in order to save unnecessary expense. I am referred to cases as establishing a rule which prevents the whole fund being given to the wife. No doubt Lord Eldon was of that opinion; but in the case before him the wife had filed the bill, and therefore it was that she had not the whole. That rule has not since been adhered to. Green v. Otte is only important because it has been insisted that the fact of the husband having already received property in right of his wife, would not entitle her to the whole of a fund; but we have the authority of the learned judge who decided that case, that, in point of fact we must regard the wife's property, and look to the manner in which it has been applied. Gardner v. Marshall shews that, where large advances had been made to the husband by the wife's father, and he had become bankrupt, on the death of the father, leaving other property to the wife, the Court gave the wife the whole fund. In Gilchrist v. Cator, the whole was given to the wife; that certainly might have been because it was small; it was not even sufficient for her maintenance. Scott v. Spashett is certainly a very strong case, because there the whole was given against the particular assignee of the husband and wife; I once thought that there should be no relief against a particular assignee. In Vaughan v. Buck two-thirds of the fund were given; that might have been a very proper proportion to give, as it was a peculiar case. I have referred to these cases, not because I entertain any doubt of what the rule is, but from my anxiety to prevent litigation, and to shew that they are not inconsistent with the conclusion I have come to. If in any given case the judge thinks the wife ought to have the whole, he has full power to give it her. Now, what are the facts of this case? The whole of the funds belonged to the wife, and the husband has been living in a state of adultery; the wife subsequently obtained a divorce; from 1840 to 1850 he deserted his wife and family, and during the whole of that time of desertion he never advanced a shilling to her or came forward in any way as her husband to assist or protect her; he became bankrupt, and his assignees came in for an interest in property of his wife's, represented on one side as worth 200*l.* and on the other as worth 122*l.* a year: at the same time the fund now in question, amounting to 1,000*l.* fell in. In 1834, an estate of the wife's was sold for 4,800*l.* It is represented that the estate was mortgaged. The husband mortgaged it, and it is alleged that the mortgage money was expended upon an estate to which the ... would be ultimately entitled. That is a question as between the husband and wife; and, though he may not have shared in the purchase-money, the mortgagees being paid off, his assets were left clear for other creditors. The husband settled on his wife 3,000*l.* part of that sum to which he, in her right, was entitled; and this the Court is bound to take into consideration. He settled 3,000*l.* and sold her real estate for 4,800; so that he did not settle too much. Then, in 1850, the assignees take this life interest, say of the annual value of 122*l.* which if her age were forty-six may be worth about 1,000*l.* The judge below thought that he was not exceeding his duty in giving the whole of the 1,000*l.* now in question to this unhappy lady. The assignees, representing the husband or his creditors, can have no better right than the husband; they have no moral right to the fund. I entirely concur with the learned Vice-Chancellor, and shall dismiss this appeal with costs.

Re JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES WINDING-UP ACTS, 1848, 1849, and re DIRECT EXETER, PLYMOUTH, and DEVONPORT RAILWAY COMPANY, ex parte WOOLMER and OTHERS.

Winding-up Acts, 1848, 1849—Application to discharge winding-up order—To discharge calls.

An action having been commenced against a member of the managing committee of an abortive railway company, he obtained a winding-up order, before some other members of the same body who were about to proceed to obtain such order. An official manager was appointed, and proceedings under the winding-up order prosecuted with the concurrence of the other members of the managing committee:

Held, affirming the order of the Court below, that such last-mentioned persons could not, whether such winding-up order were rightly or wrongly obtained, now move to discharge it.

Held also, that although considerable costs and expenses had been incurred by the official manager in endeavouring to place the members of the provisional committee and allottees on the list of contributories, which ultimately consisted only of the managing committee, that a call upon all the members of the managing committee by the Master was properly made.

This was an appeal against the decision of Vice-Chancellor Parker of the 13th December last (reported 18 Law T. Rep. 152), refusing to discharge a winding-up order, and also against an order of Master Horne, making a call upon seven persons, members of the committee of management of the Direct Exeter, Plymouth, and Devonport Railway Company. The circumstances of the case are as follows:—

The company or association called "The Direct Exeter, Plymouth, and Devonport Railway Company," had for its object the formation of a line of railway from Exeter to Plymouth, and its proceedings were set in motion at Exeter by persons who styled themselves the "provisional committee." It was intended that the capital of the company should be ultimately held in shares of 25*l.* each; but before this could be accomplished, it was necessary that certain preliminary proceedings should be taken to place the company in a position to apply to Parliament for an Act of incorporation. This duty was undertaken by the provisional committee, who proceeded to register the company under the Registration Act, and then, at a meeting of the provisional committee held on the 7th October, 1845, at which thirty-one members attended, seven gentlemen, viz.—Mr. Woolmer, Mr. Bastard, Major D'Urban, Col. Ellis, Mr. Kingdon, Mr. Salter, and Mr. Tanner, were elected as the committee of management. The committee of management took the usual preliminary proceedings, opened a banking account, appointed engineers, surveyors, solicitors, and others, who surveyed the proposed line, published the Parliamentary notices, advertised for parties to apply for shares, and lodged the Parliamentary plan. An allotment of shares was made in the following month of December, but the deposits were not paid, and ultimately the scheme was abandoned in the same month. The committee of management considered that both the members of the provisional committee, and the parties who applied for shares, were bound to contribute towards the payment of the liabilities which had been incurred, and took legal proceedings to enforce such contributions. In the month of December, 1848, several creditors of the company brought actions against Colonel Ellis, and, amongst others, Mr. Floud, the solicitor of the company, for 1,508*l.* Things being in this position, there being many debts and claims to a large amount unsettled, and disputes and differences between the parties, several members of the committee of management were desirous of obtaining an order for the winding up of the company, but Colonel Ellis was successful in first obtaining the order on the 8th of June, 1849, which was served on Mr. Salter, one of the committee of management. That several of the other members were endeavouring to obtain a similar order, was clear on the affidavits. Amongst others, the affidavit of the appellant, Mr. Woolmer, who now sought to discharge the order sworn 5th June, 1849, contains the following passage—"That immediately after the decision of the Lord High Chancellor that railway companies similar to the Direct Plymouth and Devonport Railway Company were within the operation and effect of the said Joint-Stock Companies Winding-up Act, 1848, we began to collect, and subsequently, at great labour and expense, collected all the information that we believed necessary for determining the number and amount of contributories, and also the moneys paid by various members of the company, and the debts and liabilities still remaining due; and we directed a petition to be prepared and presented to this Honourable Court; but that in the meantime, before such petition could be prepared and presented, the said Colonel Ellis presented his said petition, and it appears in the account of disbursements sent in by Mr. Woolmer, that he made two journeys in April 1849, with the view of preparing materials for such petition." Immediately after the winding-up order was obtained, Mr. Alexander Sandeman was appointed interim manager, and the 29th of June was fixed for the appointment of the official manager. Four of the other persons constituting the committee of management apparently acquiesced in the propriety of the winding-up order being acted upon, but they wished to have an official manager of their own nomination, viz. Mr. George B. Gregory, of Bedford-row, London, instead of Mr. Sandeman, whom Colonel Ellis supported; they appear, in fact, to have wished to get the carriage of the winding-up order in effect into their own hands, as they considered that they could manage matters better than Colonel Ellis, or at any rate that they should have a considerable control over his proceedings. The following extracts are taken from their affidavits:—"We fully believe that the said Col. Ellis will be unable to give the necessary information for determining the persons who ought to be made contributories, the amount of moneys paid by the several members of the company, and an account of the present debts and liabilities of the company." Again, "We firmly believe that for the fair and equitable adjustment of the affairs of the company, it will be absolutely necessary that we should by our solicitor attend before the manager and assist in winding up of the said company, and that without such attendance and assistance it will be impossible for the said manager to wind up the affairs of the said company in a fair and equitable manner." And they added, that "The principal duties of such manager will consist in indicating who should be contributories." The question as to the appointment of the official manager was discussed before the Master in the presence of the solicitors of Mr. Woolmer, Mr. Bastard, Mr. Kingdon, and Mr. Salter, and at their request an adjournment took place till the 10th July following, when Mr. Alexander Sandeman was appointed official manager. The claims made against the company by creditors were as follows: Bankers (Sanders and Co.) 800*l.*; Mr. Floud, 509*l.*; Mr. Force, 78*l.* 11s. 1d.; Mr. Farrant, 282*l.* 5s. 10d.; sundry tradesmen, 282*l.* 5s. 10d.; making, in the whole, 1,722*l.* 2s. 2d. Part, however, only of these claims had been regularly proved, and amongst others those of Mr. Floud, Mr. Force, and some of the tradesmen. On the appointment of Mr. Sandeman as official manager, after investigating the affairs of the company, he, with the advice of counsel, put upon the list of contributories several classes of persons besides the seven persons who were ultimately decided to be the sole contributories, viz. all the members of the provisional committee and allottees, to whom liabilities of different degrees were supposed to attach. The investigation of these cases occupied a considerable time, and the Master placed nearly the whole of them on the list as contributories; but appeals from the decision of the Master reduced the number of contributories as before mentioned to the seven persons constituting the committee of management. Until this time all these proceedings, which it was supposed would have the effect of reducing the liability of the committee of management, were acquiesced in by the present petitioners, but then it appeared that no benefit could be derived from those proceedings, but on the other hand considerable costs incurred. The appellants, on the 15th of May, 1851, presented a petition to Vice-Chancellor Parker to discharge the winding-up order, upon two grounds, first, that the company was not within the Winding-up Acts; secondly, that there was nothing to wind up, the sole persons liable being the committee of management, who knew they were liable before. In that petition is contained the following statement:—"That the whole of the debts due from any or the members of the said intended company in respect of the affairs thereof, do not exceed the sum of 1,000*l.* including the sum of 750*l.* or thereabout, due to the Exeter Bank, and that none of the creditors have taken any proceedings for the purpose of enforcing payment of their debts except the action brought by Charles Langley against Col. Ellis, and that the call made by the master was made only for the purpose of discharging in part the costs of the proceedings under the winding-up order, and which costs are alleged to amount to several thousand pounds." On the 26th January, 1852, the petition was dismissed by the Vice-Chancellor Parker, with costs. A call was then made on the committee of management of 100*l.* a-piece, but against that there was an appeal, on the grounds that the debts had not been accurately ascertained and proved, that the costs to be paid had not been taxed. On these grounds the order for a call was discharged, and proceedings were taken to dispose of the claims for debts which had been brought into the Master's office. It was then found that all the creditors, with the exception of two, amounting in the whole to only 86*l.* 3s. had been induced to withdraw their claims. Other debts, the secretary's being one of them, were also discharged, although actions were pending for their recovery. On this, an appeal against the order of Vice-Chancellor Parker was presented to the Lords Justices, in which it was contended by the appellants, as the principal reason for reversing the decision of the Vice-Chancellor and discharging the winding-up order was, that there were no debts due from the company; their lordships, however, ordered that the petition should stand over generally, upon an arrangement that the Master should complete his inquiries into the debts and expenses, and make such call as he should think proper, and that the appeal from the call should be made directly to their lordships, and be brought on with the petition of appeal from the original order, so that they might be able to dispose of the whole matter altogether. Afterwards, the debts of the company and the costs and expenses incurred by the official manager having been ascertained to amount to 3,019*l.* 4s. whereof the debts amounted only to the sum of 86*l.* 3s. and the costs had been taxed at the request of the Master by one of the Taxing Masters. On the 3rd of July, 1852, the Master made a call upon the seven members of the managing committee, namely, on Mr. Woolmer, 277*l.* 16s. 5d.; Mr. Bastard, 358*l.* 15s. 5d.; Mr. Kingdon, 359*l.* 16s. 5d.; Col. Ellis, 451*l.* 1s; Mr. Tanner, 496*l.* 6s. 3d.; Col. D'Urban, 515*l.* 18s. 5d.; Mr. Salter, 559*l.* 9s. 9d.; and the way in which he arrived at this result was by debiting each of these gentlemen with one-seventh of the expenses of the company, including the costs of the winding up, and crediting them with such sums as they had properly paid towards those objects. According to the arrangement made, when the matter was part heard before their lordships, Mr. Woolmer, Mr. Kingdon, Mr. Bastard, and Mr. Salter now appealed against the order of Vice-Chancellor Parker, and applied to discharge the order for a call made by the Master.

Bacon and Terrell for the appellants, contended that the order for winding up the company was unnecessary, and ought never to have been obtained; that there were in fact no debts, at any rate at the time the winding-up order was obtained, no proceedings were taken by the creditors against any one, except the action against Col. Ellis. That the call was a mere call for costs, which as they had been incurred by Col. Ellis obtaining the winding-up order, from which the appellants had never derived any benefit, and in which they alleged they did not acquiesce, the call as against them ought to be discharged. That the amount ordered to be raised was far too large, that the costs of the official manager had not been properly taxed, and the manner of assessing the calls to be made upon each contributory respectively had not been made upon a right principle; that the call ought therefore to be discharged.

Sir W. Page Wood and Roxburgh, for the official manager, contended that the winding up order was properly obtained by Colonel Ellis, and was intended to be for the benefit of all the persons on the committee of management; that they would have obtained the same order had not Colonel Ellis done so; that as long as the official manager was successful in extending the liabilities to a larger class of contributories, the present appellants acquiesced in all his proceedings; but when they turned out to be unfavourable, they wished to leave the costs and expenses to Colonel Ellis to pay, although they would have equally derived benefit from those proceedings had they been successful. That there were debts due from the company at the time when the winding-up order was obtained; and even now there were debts to a small amount; that other debts to a considerable amount were not at present claimed, but that was by some arrangement with the appellants, in order that they might come to the court with the argument which they now adduced, that there were no debts, and that this was a call merely for the costs and expenses of the official manager; that those costs had been duly taxed, and the expenses properly incurred, and the call made upon the parties by the Master was on just and equitable principles.

Malins and Daniel, for Colonel Ellis, supported the same views as the counsel for the official manager.

Lord Justice Lord CRANWORTH.—This case comes before us upon two proceedings—first, upon a petition by four out of seven gentlemen, who constitute the list of contributories, as ultimately established in the Master's office, to discharge the winding-up order; and, secondly, upon a motion by those same gentlemen to discharge an order which was made for a call to raise a sum of 3,019*l.* 4s. We have already intimated in the progress of the argument, that when the affidavits came to be fully stated before us, the first application,—the application by the petition to discharge the winding-up order, which Vice-Chancellor Parker had refused to discharge,—was entirely without foundation. We not only intimated that, but we intimated pretty clearly the ground on which we came to the conclusion, that the winding-up order, whether rightly or wrongly obtained, was an order obtained practically as much by the present petitioners as by Colonel Ellis. They were both proposing to obtain what they thought, and perhaps rightly thought, was a fit and expedient course to take. They were both proceeding in that course, and Colonel Ellis got the order first. It was prosecuted by him, but evidently with the sanction and concurrence of the other parties, who took as much part in the proceeding as he took, and, therefore, we are clearly of opinion that they could not say that Colonel Ellis had done wrong in obtaining the order from the commencement. If he had not done it, if he had been a fortnight later, or a week later, they would have got it themselves. Both parties were proceeding to obtain the order. Colonel Ellis obtains it, and the other party cannot now say that the order was wrongly obtained. We think the Vice-Chancellor was right in refusing the present petition to discharge that order, and, consequently, that the appeal from him must be dismissed with costs. Now how is the matter with regard to the motion to discharge the order for the call? When it comes to be sifted the way the matter stands is this:—The great object of the parties obtaining the order—I say the parties, because I consider Mr. Woolmer and Mr. Kingdon, and other gentlemen who are trying to discharge the order, were just as much applicants for the order as Colonel Ellis himself—the great object was to fix the liability to the expenses of this company, not upon the managing committee only—the seven who were eventually constituted the only contributories—but to throw that liability over a much wider surface, to include among the contributories either the whole body of the provisional committee-men, or certain of the provisional committee-men who were supposed to have rendered themselves more liable than the general body, and, in short, to disperse among thirty or forty the liabilities which have been eventually thrown upon the seven, and for that purpose they endeavoured to place upon the list of contributories a great number of other persons. They succeeded in doing so as far as the Master's office was concerned; but those parties from time to time appealed against the decision of the Master, and, it turned out, successfully appealed—so successfully, that instead of the number, thirty or forty, that was originally put on the list as being contributories, by successful appeals made by those parties so placed, their names were removed and the number reduced to the present seven that constituted the managing committee. The result of all those appeals was, that very heavy costs were incurred, costs that practically amount to the whole of the sum now sought to be recovered, because, although there is one creditor of 83*l.* he may be put out of the case; and therefore it turns out that the attempt to wind up the affairs of the company and to diffuse the liability among other persons beside the seven eventually found to be liable, has occasioned the sum which the Master estimates at 3,019*l.* 1*s.* I say estimates, for I will assume, for the purpose of the present argument, that the exact amount has never been conclusively established; but this estimate is made, not on any loose grounds; for even if Mr. Bacon is right in saying that there has never been any taxation, properly so called, at which the parties interested in cutting down the amount of the bill have been heard as against the party setting up the bill, yet the bill has been in a sense taxed. The Master has had it laid before a party competent to exercise a judgment upon it, and that party, one of the Taxing Masters, has reduced it to an amount that leaves it at 3,019*l.* 1*s.* for the whole demand. The Master thinks it reasonable that that amount should be raised, and we both concur in thinking that was a very reasonable conclusion. It is true that this is a sum for which the parties that will be liable to pay it have, in one sense, had no value—that is, they get nothing; but I think the observation is very truly made on that remark, that that may be said of any person who, having resisted a demand, has to pay large costs. It is true that in one sense he gets nothing, because he was wrong, yet he got a locum standi to contest the point whether he was right or wrong. If his views of the law had been right, he would have got a great benefit; it turns out that he was wrong, consequently he is like any other parties, litigants in a court of justice, who have bonâ fide endeavoured to resist a demand, thinking they have a legitimate defence, and it turns out that they have no such defence. Who is to pay? Why, the parties who have caused this expense. They have been endeavouring to satisfy the Court that they were not the only contributories, but that others were liable with them, and they endeavoured to reduce the sum to a very small amount. They failed in doing so, and for their attempt they must pay. Now, we are desired to make a final end here. Probably it may be exceedingly reasonable that these parties should acquiesce in the taxation, or the arrangement which the Master has made about the amount that is to be raised. But we do not think that by our decision we necessarily conclude the parties, if they mean to say that this sum, when raised, is not to be applied in the manner proposed, because some of it will be unnecessary. That is open to them, if they should be so advised. It would be a very unwise thing so to act, but that is a matter in which they must exercise their own judgment. All that we can say is, that the Master exercised a sound judgment in directing that this amount, which has been ascertained as nearly as it can be, must be raised for the purpose of paying these costs. Then, that being so, the only question is, has he assessed it in a reasonable and proper manner. There again, not meaning to say a case might not be made hereafter to shew that some of this must be returned to the parties, yet primâ facie we think the Master has taken the most convenient and only practical course that could be taken—he has found seven people who are among themselves liable to pay this sum of money. In what proportion have they hitherto paid? He has taken the payments de facto made, and all made bonâ fide. It may be that what the present petitioners say is right, that Colonel Ellis was less justified in incurring his costs in resisting the creditors than they were in resisting their creditors, because the liability was more clear at the time Colonel Ellis resisted than at their time, but these are niceties which, in the present state of our information, we cannot possibly inquire into. It appears to us, not only that the Master has done right in saying that this sum must be raised, but that he has taken the only legitimate mode of ascertaining the proportion in which each party is to contribute. He has taken the proportion arising from what each party has contributed, then, finding that what he contributed shews what he is to pay on the shares, he makes a ratio of equality among them. I do not know that it is an absolute equality, but they have all the same amount of shares. It seems to us that this is a reasonable and proper course to be taken, and, consequently, that this application ought not to have been made; and therefore this motion must be dismissed with costs, in the same way as the petition of appeal.

Lord Justice KNIGHT BRUCE.—I am of the opinion.

Re GEDGE.

Solicitor—Bill of costs—Taxation—Order of course—Special order—Suppression of facts necessary to be stated on applying for an order of course—Action at law—Judgment.

The rules and principles upon which orders of course for taxation are obtained, though originally unsettled, are now finally settled, and the rule as laid down is, that it is incumbent on the party who applies for an order of course to tax a bill, to proceed in the same manner as if he were asking the Court for an ex parte injunction, that is, to state every fact to the officer to whom he applies which can be material to the matter, in order to enable the officer to judge whether it really is a proper case for an order of course; and that if he do not do so, and there are special matters affecting the question whether he ought to have an order of course or not, and these are suppressed, or are not mentioned, the Court will not stay to inquire whether in fact, if a special application had been made, he would have been allowed to have an order to tax, but will discharge the order of course, even though, as a special application, he might have been entitled to the order to tax.

The Solicitors' Act (6 & 7 Vict. c. 73) provides "that no such reference to tax shall be directed after a verdict shall have been obtained, or a writ of inquiry executed in any action for the recovery of the demand of such attorney or solicitor."

Held, that the words "writ of inquiry executed" were put in for the purpose of shewing that a mere judgment obtained by the party was not to prevent his obtaining the order of course; so that the Act provides that the order of course shall go in every case where there has either not been a verdict in a contested action or not been a writ of inquiry, where the judgment goes by default, to assess the amount of damages.

That consequently, where a solicitor brought an action for a bill of costs, and obtained judgment by default, for want of a plea, and then the client obtained an order of course to tax, and there was no writ of inquiry executed, the order of course was not irregular or invalid on that account. Sed quære, for in the case of an action for debt, there is no writ of inquiry, the judgment is final.

That, however, there having been previously to obtaining the order of course three several applications made to the Courts of Common Law, one of which had been granted upon terms, and afterwards abandoned, and the other two refused, that was a material circumstance which ought to have been mentioned to the officer from whom the order of course was obtained, and as it was not, the order of course must be discharged with costs.

This was a motion to discharge an order of course obtained by the governors and guardians of the poor of St. Mary's, Newington, for the taxation of certain bills of costs for business done for them by Mr. Gedge, whom they had employed as their solicitor. The grounds upon which the application was made to discharge the order were, first, that at the time it was obtained, a judgment had in fact been obtained at law for the amount of the bills; and besides there had been several applications to the Courts of Common Law for a reference to tax, and this had not been stated to the officer when applied to for the order of course. There were several bills delivered by Mr. Gedge, including one for costs in soliciting a Bill in Parliament. Some correspondence took place after the delivery between Mr. Gedge and his clients; but on the 18th of December, 1851, the latter obtained an order from Coleridge, J. referring all the bills, including that for the parliamentary, on condition of their paying into court the sum of 500*l.* This order they abandoned, or at least did not act upon it, and they afterwards applied to the Court of Ex. for and obtained another order of reference, which, upon its being shewn what had been done before Coleridge, J. was discharged by Platt, B. who refused to entertain the case after hearing that it had been before another judge. On the 13th of January, 1852, Mr. Gedge brought his action to recover the amount of the bills, and on the 24th of the same month, the order of course was obtained, but was not served till the 27th, on which same day, but some hours prior to the service, judgment by default for want of a plea was signed in the action. None of the proceedings at Common Law were mentioned to the officer in making application for the order of course. Mr. Gedge now moved to discharge the order as improperly obtained.

Roupell and Hardy contrà.

Thursday, Feb. 12.—The MASTER of the ROLLS.—This was a motion to discharge an order of course for the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs; and the grounds upon which the application was made were twofold. It was stated that there had been, in fact, a judgment obtained at law for the amount of the bill at the time when the order to tax was obtained, and also that three several applications had been made to the Courts of Common Law for the purpose, one of which had been granted upon terms, and the other two refused; the one granted upon terms was abandoned, and two subsequent ones applied for afterwards, or rather I may say one applied for since and refused, which were reasons for not obtaining an order of course. The rules and principles upon which orders of course are obtained originally appear to have been a little unsettled, but were finally settled by Lord Langdale; and I have adopted the rule he laid down, and the rule he laid down was this, that in applying for an order of course, it is incumbent on the party who applies to adopt the same rule that would be applied if he were asking the Court to grant an injunction ex parte—that he must state every fact to the officer to whom he applies which can be material to the matter, in order to enable the officer to judge whether it really is a proper case for an order of course; that if he do not do so, and there are special matters affecting the question whether he ought to have an order of course or not, and if those are not mentioned, the Court will not stay to inquire whether, in fact, if a special application had been made he would have been allowed to have an order to tax the bill; but if it be a matter of sufficient moment and sufficient importance to require grave consideration or discussion, then the officer would not have granted the order of course; it would have been necessary to have made a special application, and the Court would then have decided on the propriety of taxing the bill. And where there is a matter of that description not stated, and by reason of that non-statement of it the applicant has obtained an order of course, which he could not have obtained except by the non-statement—I do not use the word "suppression" in any harsh sense,—but by the suppression of that fact, in all those cases, even though on a special application he might be entitled to the order, the Court will not allow the order of course to stand. I have myself so decided on more than one occasion, and in doing that I have followed Lord Langdale; and I am satisfied that this is the proper rule that ought to prevail. I have, therefore, now to consider whether the facts which were suppressed here were of sufficient moment and importance to warrant the Court in saying that they ought to have been gravely discussed. Now, the first which I shall mention—not that which was previously put forward—but the first I shall mention is the fact of a judgment having been obtained. I am of opinion that the judgment having been obtained in the manner it was obtained here was not a matter to make it necessary, it might be proper, to mention it, but I have no doubt that the officer would have granted the order of course, although there had been the judgment, for this reason: the Act of Parliament is precise on this point—it says there shall be an order of course to tax within twelve months after the delivery of the bill, and then it states, "provided always, that no such reference shall be directed after a verdict shall have been obtained, or a writ of inquiry executed in any action for the recovery of the demand of such attorney or solicitor." Consequently, the Act of Parliament provides that this order of course shall go in every case where there has either not been verdict or not been a writ of inquiry, but the verdict of course is in those cases where there is a contested action, but where the judgment goes by default, in every case there is a writ of inquiry to assess the amount of damages; consequently it is, I apprehend, perfectly clear that the words "writ of inquiry executed," were put in for the purpose of shewing that a mere judgment obtained by the party was not to prevent the party obtaining the order of course.

Roupell.—The judgment was after the date of the order.

The MASTER of the ROLLS.—I understand that; but I have decided in your favour on this part of the case. The date of the order was on Saturday, and the judgment was in fact signed on the Tuesday; but I am not of the opinion that, even if the judgment had been obtained that was a matter of any moment. The order was served on the day (a short time after) the judgment had been signed, but it was a judgment by default for want of a plea; and I am of opinion that as there was no writ of inquiry executed (nor could there have been), which must take place in every case of judgment by default, the mere circumstance of the judgment, if the other circumstances are the same, is not a sufficient reason for withholding the order of course. I explain this rather the more fully, because the word "judgment" appears in some of the cases where it is evident that the word "judgment" is used as the judgment obtained subsequent to a verdict. The verdict for an amount of damages on a solicitor's bill of costs precedes the judgment; the judgment is only obtained in consequence of that.

Collier.—Will your honour allow me to say that the judgment in an action of debt is final; there is no writ of inquiry in the case.

The MASTER of the ROLLS.—That may be, Mr. Collier; there is no writ of inquiry at all?

Collier. Not in an action of debt; the judgment is final at once.

The MASTER of the ROLLS.—That may possibly make a difference in the view which I have taken of this case. I certainly have considered, that in every case where a judgment went by default (having made inquiries on the subject) there would have been a writ of inquiry executed; still I should not, on that ground, have considered that the fact of judgment having gone by default would have rendered the order of course that was obtained improper, the fact being that there had been no inquiry into the amount of the debt at this time, as there would have been in the case of a verdict, or in the case of a writ of inquiry executed, which is what I think the clause meant to refer to. With respect to the other part of the case, I am of opinion that that is a material circumstance which ought to have been stated. I do not at this moment understand why the application was made to a Court of Common Law, which does not grant orders of course to tax, instead of coming to this Court, nor do I exactly understand upon what grounds it was that Mr. Justice Coleridge made an order that the taxation should only be allowed on payment of the sum of 500*l.* Undoubtedly, if there were nothing else in the matter prior to obtaining that order, the clients might have come here and obtained a taxation of Mr. Gedg[illegible] bill. Now the subsequent proceedings before Mr. Baron Platt proceeded solely upon the ground that the order had been made by Mr. Justice Coleridge, which had been declined. I do not now inquire into whether that would be sufficient to induce this Court not to tax the bill. Upon that I particularly wish not only not to express an opinion, but to give no impression that I think it would prevent the bill from being taxed; but I am satisfied that this matter was a matter of sufficient importance to have it mentioned to the officer that there had been an application made to a court of competent jurisdiction to tax the bill, which taxation had been refused, and that if that had been so mentioned the officer would not have given the ordinary order of course to tax the bill, but that it would have been necessary to come to the Court to make a special application for that purpose; and therefore, on that ground, which in fact was the principal ground set forth, without in the slightest degree prejudicing any special application that may be made to tax this bill, I am of opinion that this order of course cannot stand, and that it must be discharged in the usual manner, and with costs.

Monday, Feb. 16.

PEARD v. KEKEWICH.

Will, construction of—Accumulation—Power—Appointment, validity of—Vested interest, subject to be divested—Independent gift distinct from time of payment.

S. P. by his will gave and devised certain property to G. P. for life, remainder to such of G. P.'s children as he should appoint, and in default of appointment remainder to the children equally as tenants in common in tail. G. P. by his will bequeathed, devised, and appointed to trustees in trust for his eldest son G. S. P. his heirs, executors, &c. to be conveyed, assigned, and assured to him when and as he should attain the age of twenty-three, and if he should die before twenty-one, then "to the use of the second, third, &c. son of G. P. in tail, with remainder over. He then directed the payment out of the rents of annuities for the benefit of his wife and children, and subject thereto, to invest the residue of the rents and profits in government or real securities, to accumulate, and also "to accumulate the accumulations in like manner until his son G. S. P. (who was born at the death of S. P.), or &c. should attain the age of twenty-three, and then to pay, assign, and make over all such securities and accumulations to G. S. P. &c. for his own absolute use and benefit."

the power of appointment created by the will of S. P.

That G. S. P. took an estate in fee, liable to be divested in case of his death under twenty-one.

That the accumulation directed by G. P. in favour of G. S. P. who was born at the death of S. P. or such other son as should attain twenty-three, was valid as to G. S. P.

But semble, such a trust for sons not in esse at the time of the creation of the power would not be valid.

This was a special case for the opinion of the Court as to the effect of two wills, one that of Rear-Admiral Shuldham Peard, late of Exeter, and the other that of his son George Peard, the former creating and the latter purporting to exercise a power of appointment in favour of George Peard's children; the question being whether the former had been legally and effectually exercised by the will of George Peard. A question also was raised as to the appropriation of the residuary personal of the admiral, which, by his will, he had directed to be accumulated. Admiral Peard, by his will bearing date the 15th of June, 1829, gave and devised all his lands, tenements, and hereditaments whatsoever unto and to the use of the defendants William Henry Whitehead and Deeble Boger, their heirs and assigns, upon the trusts thereinafter expressed, that is to say, as to one half of whatever might be his estate and interest in the tithes of Budock and Falmouth, in the county of Cornwall, and as to certain other hereditaments therein particularly described upon certain trusts in favour of the testator's son John Whitehead Peard and his children. And as to all the rest and residue of the lands, tenements, and hereditaments so devised as aforesaid upon trust for the testator's son George Peard and his assigns for life, with remainder for all and every or any or more, to the exclusion of the others or other of them, of the children of the said George Peard, for such estate and estates, and in such manner and form as the said George Peard should at any time or times, by any writing or writings to be by him signed and sealed in the presence of and attested by two or more credible witnesses, or by his last will and testament in writing, to be signed and published as the law required for the devise of real estates, direct, limit, and appoint; and in default of such direction, limitation, or appointment, and subject thereto in trust for all and every the children of the said George Peard in tail, such children to be entitled equally as tenants in common in tail, with cross-remainders in tail between such children respectively, the tenants in tail for the time being to be always entitled, if more than one, as equal tenants in common with remainder, if there should be but one child for that one child in tail, with remainder for the said John Whitehead Peard, his heirs and assigns for ever; and the testator thereby declared that each of the estates for life thereby limited should be without impeachment of waste, and that the estate and interest of all married women under the will should, both as to real and personal estate, be for their own separate use and benefit, independent of their husbands. The testator afterwards made a codicil to his will, dated the 4th of June, 1831, and thereby, after stating that he had contracted for the purchase, from the representatives of Mr. Richards, deceased, of his moiety or interest in the said tithes, he thereby devised the same to his said trustees, their heirs and assigns, on the same trusts as were by his will expressed and declared of and concerning the moiety of the said will, and devised as aforesaid, but the codicil did not otherwise affect the trusts of the will.

The testator, Admiral Peard, died on the 27th December, 1832, without having revoked or altered his said will and codicil, and leaving his two sons, John Whitehead Peard and George Peard, him surviving. The testator was seised in fee of divers real estates of considerable value. By an indenture dated 5th July, 1833, and made between the said John Whitehead Peard of the one part, and the said George Peard of the other part, John Whitehead Peard granted and released to George Peard the moiety of the said tithes so devised by the said codicil in trust for him, the said John Whitehead Peard, and his children, to hold to him, his h[illegible] and assigns, during the life of him, the said John Whitehead Peard.

Previous to the dates of the will of Shuldham Peard, George Peard had married, and there was issue of the marriage two sons and three daughters, viz. George Peard, who was born on the 25th July, 1825, and died in the same year; George Shuldham Peard, the plaintiff, who was born on the 29th of June, 1829, in the lifetime of Shuldham Peard; the defendant, Charlotte Kekewich, wife of defendant Trehawke Kekewich, now twenty-one; Francis Peard, who was born 30th of June, 1832, and died 30th of June, 1834; and Frances Peard, who is still an infant.

George Peard, by his will dated 30th November, 1836, appointed his wife, the defendant, Frances Cooke Peard, sole executrix thereof, and of the various provisions respecting his personal estate, gave, devised, bequeathed, and appointed all that the one-eighth part of the great tithes of Budock aforesaid, or the sum of money equivalent thereto, as the same might have been conveyed or secured to him by virtue of a deed under the hand and seal of his brother, John Peard, and also all and singular other the lands, tenements, tithes, and hereditaments of or to which he was in anywise seised or entitled, or over which he had a power of appointment or disposal under and by virtue of the last will and testament of his father, the late Shuldham Peard, or otherwise, howsoever, unto Hugh Myddelton Ellicombe, William Henry Whitehead, and George Bradford Ellicombe, their heirs, executors, and administrators, according to the nature and quality thereof, in trust for his son, the said George Shuldham Peard, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, and to be respectively conveyed, assigned, and assured to him when and as he should attain the age of twenty-three years; and in case his son George Shuldham Peard should die before he should have attained the age of twenty-one years, to the use of the second, third, and fourth, and all and every the other son and sons of his (the testator's) body lawfully begotten, whether born in his lifetime or after his decease severally and successively and in remainder, &c. and of the several and respective heirs of the body and bodies of all and every such son issuing, the elder of such sons and the heirs of his body to take before the younger, &c. and to her respectively conveyed, assigned, and assured to such respective sons when and as they should first attain the age of twenty-three years, and for default of such issue to the use of the testator's daughters Charlotte and Frances, and of all and every other the daughter and daughters of his body lawfully issuing, equally to be divided between and among them, share and share alike as tenants in common, and to the use of the several heirs of the body and bodies of all his several daughters respectively issuing; and in case of the death and failure of issue of the body or bodies of any one or more of his said daughters, then as to the part of her or them so dying without issue, to the use of the survivors or others to be divided, &c. and for default of such issue to the use of his brother John Whitehead Peard, his heirs and assigns. The testator then directed his trustees to pay out of the rents and profits of the lands, tithes, &c. certain annuities for the benefit of his wife and children as therein mentioned, and subject thereto, to invest the residue of the said rents, &c. in government or real securities, to accumulate, and also "to accumulate the accumulations in like manner until his said son George Shuldham Peard, or such other son as aforesaid, should attain the age of twenty-three years; and on his or their first attaining that age, then upon trust to pay, assign, and make over all such securities and accumulations unto the said George Shuldham Peard, or to such other sons as aforesaid, who should first come to attain that age, his executors, administrators, and assigns, for his and their own absolute use and benefit."

George Peard died on the 16th February, 1837, having never had any other child than the said children already mentioned. The executrix, his widow, duly proved his will, and certain questions were then raised upon its construction, as respected the appointment thereby made, or purported to be made, under the power created by the will of Shuldham Peard, and as to the disposition of the tithes granted by the indenture of the 5th July, 1833.

The first question on the case was whether the power of appointment given by the will of Shuldham Peard was duly exercised by the will of George Peard.

Secondly, what estate or interest George Shuldham Peard took under such appointment (if any), and in particular whether the same estate or interest was or not vested on the said George Shuldham Peard attaining the age of twenty-one years.

Thirdly, whether under such appointment (if any), the trust in the said will of the said George Peard contained, for accumulating the surplus rents of the residuary real estate of the said Shuldham Peard, until Geo. Shuldham Peard, or such other sons of George Peard, should attain the age of twenty-three years, is valid or invalid; and if invalid, to what extent is the same invalid, and who are or is entitled to such surplus rents and the accumulations thereof, and in what proportions?

And, fourthly, whether the trust in the will of George Peard for accumulating the profits of the tithes granted to George Peard by the indenture of 5th July, 1833, until George Shuldham Peard, or such other sons of the said George Peard, should attain the age of twenty-three years, is valid or invalid, and who are or is entitled to the profits of the said tithes and the accumulations thereof, and in what proportions?

Walpole and Amphlett for the plaintiff.—It is a gift to a person not on attaining but if he should attain twenty-three, and if not, then over to another; and if the latter gift is void there is no reason why the first ought to be void. Then if the accumulations are not given to any one they must go to us. They cited Kampf v. Jones, 2 Keen, 756; Ring v. Hardwick, 2 Beav. 352; Carver v. Bowles, 2 Russ. & M. 301; Lord Southampton v. Marquis of Hertford, 2 Ves. & B. 54; Marshall v. Holloway, 2 Swanst. 432; Browne v. Stoughton, 14 Sim. 369; Farrand v. Wilson, 4 Hare, 344; Lord Dungannon v. Smith, 12 Cl. & F. 546; Saunders v. Vautier, 1 Cr. & Ph. 240, Off. 4 Beav. 115; Arnold v. Congreve, 1 Russ. & Myl. 209; 1 Jarm. Wills, 257.

Lloyd and J. H. Palmer for Mrs. Kekewich and Francis Peard, an infant, contended that the qualifying words at the end of the will of G. Peard applied to the whole of it. They cited Holliday v. Overton, Porter v. Fox, 6 Sim. 485; Boraston's case, 3 Rep. 16.

J. H. Palmer and Nalder for other parties.

The MASTER of the ROLLS.—There are several points in this case which I think abundantly clear. In the first place there is no question respecting the first question put in the case; in fact, Mr. Lloyd, with great propriety, did not offer any argument upon that subject. There can be no question that the will was a good exercise of the power of appointment. With respect to the second question, I think that also very clear. I think the construction of the gift to George Shuldham Peard perfectly clear and distinct. Now it is to be observed it is given to trustees in trust for his son George Shuldham Peard, his executors, administrators, and assigns; and Mr. Walpole contends that I am to stop there, and I am of that opinion. Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Palmer think that I must necessarily mix it up with the sentence which goes afterwards. Now, if you stop there, the gift is complete. There can be no question but that if you give an estate to trustees in trust for another person, and his heirs and assigns, that that other person will take a complete fee simple upon the death of the original testator, and words are required for the purpose of making the gift complete - the words are complete in themselves. Well, it is said I cannot separate that gift from the words which follow afterwards, which are mixed up with it. That appears to me contrary to the true grammatical sense of the sentence, and also to the various authorities in which similar words have been construed, and which are analogous to these. There might possibly have been some question if it had gone on to say in trust for his son, his heirs, and assigns, to be conveyed and assigned at the age of twenty-three years, which might have mixed it up more; but the word "and" really makes a distinction and a separation between the two sentences; but giving it to the trustees in trust for the son, his heirs, and assigns, and to be regularly conveyed, assigned, and assured to him, when and as he attains the age of twenty-three years, does make a distinction between the gift to him and the period when he is to have the enjoyment of the gift itself; and that is made consistent and clear with the subsequent gift by which the rents are directed to accumulate till the age of twenty-three years, and is made still more distinct by what follows, because it directs that in case the son should die before he attained twenty-one years of age, then it was to go over to the second, third, fourth, and every other son. Then the observation forces itself upon the mind of every person reading this sentence, if the construction contended for by the defendant in this case be admitted by the Court, what is to take place if George Shuldham Peard should die after having attained twenty-one and before attaining twenty-three. According to the statement, he would not have obtained a vested interest in himself, nor would the gift ever take effect, and consequently it would be a case where the testator had evidently endeavoured to provide for every event—a case manifestly not provided for by the will. But that is made perfectly distinct and intelligible if the gift be given to the son in fee simple—that it is to be conveyed to him, and he is to have the benefit of the gift at the age of twenty-three, with accumulations in the mean time, but a gift over if he should attain the age of twenty-one. A case similar to that is that which constantly occurs in legacies. A case which Mr. Lloyd cited to me of Porter v. Fox was really no authority for holding a contrary decision to that which I think is the true construction of the clause, because in Porter v. Fox it was an interest given to trustees in trust to accumulate the rents for the benefit of certain persons. The moment you direct the rents to accumulate for certain persons, it shews that they are not to have a vested interest in them on the death of the testator, because if that were so there could be no accumulation, and then the testator himself must fix the period of the accumulation, and in that case he fixed it at the age of twenty-five; the consequence of which was that there was no gift to them until they attained the age of twenty-five, which was a period up to which the rents were to accumulate. Leake v. Robinson is also perfectly clear. In that case the estates were given to trustees in trust, to receive the rents and profits of the estates, and to apply such portion of the rents and profits of the estates as might be thought proper for the maintenance and support of certain persons. That is no gift to those persons—it is a mere trust to apply the rents for the benefit of certain persons. Well, when is that trust to cease? The trust is to cease when they attain the age of twenty-one, and then the trustees were to pay over to them certain shares; and Sir William Grant held, no doubt in accordance with all former and subsequent decisions, that there was no gift to them until they attained the age of twenty-one—that the gift was only contained in the words of payment. Here there appears to me to be a distinct gift, independent of any words of payment; and there is no direction here that the estates shall not be vested in George Shuldham Peard, but that they should be conveyed to him when he attains the age of twenty-three years. I am, therefore, of opinion, that George Shuldham Peard took an estate in fee simple, upon the death of the testator, liable to be divested in case of his death under the age of twenty-one years (which event has not occurred), and with a direction that the estates should be regularly conveyed and assured to him upon attaining the age of twenty-three. Then with respect to the trust for accumulation. I am also of opinion that that is governed by the principle and authority to which Mr. Walpole referred, which is distinctly laid down in the case of Williams v. Leale, that this is the case of a gentleman who gave a power of appointment to the donee of the power to be divided amongst a certain class. The donee of the power cannot give to any person to whom the original creator of the power could not himself have given it, and the testator gives a power to the donee of the power to divide the estate between one or more child or children, exclusive of the others, in such shares and proportions as he should think fit by will. At the time when that power came into effect, there is one son of his son alive. Why could not the original testator have given a limited estate to that son if he had thought fit, or directed that there should be an accumulation during the period until that son attained the age of twenty-three years? Well, being of opinion that he had the power of doing so, I am also of opinion that the testator had the power of making that accumulation in favour of the eldest son. Now with respect to the other sons no point arises, and therefore I shall express no opinion, though it is pretty evident what my opinion would be, that that would not come within the same rule as the other, but that to the extent of the accumulation until the son then in esse attained the age of twenty-three, the trust for accumulation was a good, valid, and subsisting trust. Now I think, having expressed that opinion, the fourth question which was stated, on which Mr. Walpole suggested some difficulty to the Court, will not arise. Costs of all parties to come out of the accumulated fund.

VICE-CHANCELLOR TURNER'S COURT.

Reported by J. HENRY COOKE, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

Monday, May 24.

Privileged communications—Solicitor and client—Suppression of interrogatories.

Documents prepared by a solicitor acting for a party under whose bill the plaintiff and defendant claim, and acting also for a third party as a mortgagee, form privileged communications, and therefore the interrogatories relating to them and depositions thereupon, must be suppressed, excepting for the mere purpose of proving handwriting.

Such documents as are prepared for the person under whom the plaintiff and defendant claim are not privileged.

This was a motion to suppress the fifth and twelfth interrogatories, which had been exhibited for the examination of witnesses in this cause, and to suppress also the depositions of the witness Thorne in answer to the fifth interrogatory, and of the witnesses Clatworthy and Hancock in answer to the twelfth interrogatory, on the ground that the evidence was given in breach of professional confidence. The bill was filed by Mr. and Mrs. Chant, for the purpose of setting aside an appointment made in 1828 by Edward Melton, in favour of one of his children, and a mortgage which was made of the lands so appointed. The case made by the bill was, that by a settlement dated in 1805 lands were settled upon trust for Edward Melton for his life, with remainder to his wife for her life, with remainder to such of his children as he should appoint, and in default of appointment, to the children equally, as tenants in common in tail general; and if no children, upon trust for Edward Melton's appointment generally; and if he make no appointment, then to his right heirs. Edward Melton had four children; the plaintiff Mrs. Chant, and the defendants Richard Melton, Mary Melton, and Mrs. Bult. Mrs. Melton being dead, Edward Melton, in exercise of his power, appointed the lands in question to one daughter in fee, and then joined with her in executing a mortgage for securing two sums of 4,000*l.* and 600*l.* with interest, to John Timewell. The defendant Augustus Pulsford Browne was the solicitor of Melton in respect of the appointment and mortgage, and of Timewell in respect of the mortgage. Timewell died, and by his will left all his mortgages upon trust for the benefit of his daughter, the defendant Mary Browne, the wife of the defendant A. P. Browne. This motion was an application on behalf of the defendants A. P. Browne and his wife, and their three children, and Francis Timewell, the executor of John Timewell, to suppress, first, the fifth interrogatory, and Thorne's deposition in answer to that interrogatory. That deposition was as follows:—"That the said document or bill of costs now produced and shewn to me, marked 'N.' is in my handwriting. It was written by me by the direction and as the clerk of the said A. P. Browne; and I have no doubt but that I copied it from a draft bill of costs, made out from the last-named defendant's attendance-book; but whether I or the last-named defendant prepared the draft I am unable to say. I have no doubt but that the exhibit 'N.' was written for the purpose of its being sent to the said Edward Melton; but I cannot speak to the fact of its having been sent or delivered to him, or of its having been paid or settled in account." Such is the history of the case so far as it relates to the fifth interrogatory, and the answer to it. But as to the twelfth interrogatory, it appeared that in 1827 it was proposed to raise some money by mortgage of the property in question, and a case marked "L." in the exhibit in the cause was prepared on behalf of Edward Melton, for the purpose of obtaining opinion of counsel whether a good security could be made for an advance of 1,300*l.* and upwards. This case was prepared in the office of Mr. Hancock, now deceased, who was then the solicitor of Edward Melton. "L." was prepared apparently from original documents. The security concerning which it was prepared had no reference to any exercise of the power of appointment under the settlement of 1805, and therefore did not respect Timewell's mortgage. The exhibit "K." was also prepared in the office of Mr. Hancock, and it was prepared in 1840, and was in the handwriting of the deponent Clatworthy. This case was prepared for the purpose of taking counsel's opinion in the suit on behalf of Mrs. Bult, and appeared to have been principally copied from the document marked "L." The third document marked "M." was prepared in 1841 in the same office, and was also in great measure copied from "L." with the necessary additions for taking a further opinion, which was taken on behalf of the plaintiff Mr. Chant, and the defendants Mary Melton and Mrs. Bult. This appeared from the depositions of Hancock and Clatworthy.

Rolt and Dickenson, for the plaintiffs.

Sir W. P. Wood and Terrell, for the defendants.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR, after detailing the facts of the case, observed that the document "N." was the bill of costs of the defendant A. P. Browne, against Edward Melton, in reference to the mortgage; and his Honour was of opinion that the deposition of Thorne could not be made use of except for the purpose of proving the handwriting. The evidence was tendered for the purpose of impeaching the title of the mortgagee. If it had been attempted to examine Browne himself as a witness, his evidence would have been inadmissible. The witness Thorne was at the time of copying the document the clerk of Browne, and copied it in that character, and derived all his knowledge of the matters in question from his occupying that position. A bill of costs is the attorney's written history of the transactions between himself and his client. The attorney not being competent to come and give his own account of the transactions vivâ voce in answer to interrogatories, it was impossible that it should be permitted to take his written account of them. The position which this deponent Thorne occupied, and in consequence of which he obtained his knowledge, closed the source from which that knowledge was derived, and this deposition must, therefore, be suppressed. As to the twelfth interrogatory, and the depositions and exhibits, it is to be remarked, that the position of these witnesses was wholly different, and his Honour did not think the objection could be sustained. The witness Hancock was the son and partner, and had ultimately succeeded to the business of the Mr. Hancock in whose office these documents were prepared. He was, at the time of preparing them, as was also the witness Clatworthy, a clerk in Mr. Hancock's office, and Clatworthy had continued to be the clerk of the witness Hancock. But Hancock never was the solicitor of Timewell, or of any party claiming under him; but of Melton and those claiming under him. He thought the two portions of the case were quite distinguishable, and therefore that the motion must, as to the twelfth interrogatory, and the depositions founded on it, be refused; but must be granted as to the 11th interrogatory and its depositions.

Re BARTON'S TRUST.

Severance of joint tenancy—Reversionary interest of wife in chattel personal—Bankruptcy of husband.

A certain sum of money was bequeathed, the interest to be paid to A. for life, and, after her decease, the capital was given in such a way among B., C., D. and E. as made them joint tenants equally. B. married, and her husband became bankrupt. B. then died, and, after her death, A. the tenant for life, died. On a division of the fund, the Court Held, that C., D. and E. the three other joint tenants who survived B. were entitled in preference to the assignees of the bankrupt husband of B.

A testator, by his will, bequeathed 2,000*l.* to Mary Barton for life, naming her sole executrix of his will. After her death he bequeathed the 2,000*l.* in such a way as that the four children of another person were entitled thereto as joint tenants. One of these four children married, and her husband, in 1841, became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate. In 1847 [illegible] wife died, and subsequently Mary Barton, the tenant for life of the fund, died. A question having arisen between the assignees of the husband of one of the four children and the other three children, the remaining joint tenants of the fund, the money was paid into court, and the question was now argued between counsel for the assignees on the one hand, and for the other joint tenants on the other, the husband's counsel submitting his rights, if any, to the decision of the Court.

Campbell and Bruce, for the surviving joint tena[illegible] the real question was, whether the bankrupte[illegible] husband had the effect of severing the joint t[illegible] which, they contended, it did not, and that, [illegible]re, the bankruptcy could only transfer t[illegible] the assignees such an interest as the husband himself possessed, and that such interest being a materially qualified interest, namely, both reversionary and irreducible into possession, did not in any way affect the fund. A joint tenancy could only be severed by an actual agreement to sever it, or by a positive alienation of the share. As to bankruptcy being held to be in the place of an agreement, that was out of the question, first, because bankruptcy was altogether an adverse matter; and, secondly, because the husband when he became bankrupt, was not a joint tenant himself. Whatever might be said of marriage as an assignment to the husband of all a wife's personal estate, it was limited to such as she had in possession; or such as during the coverture could be and was reduced into possession. Here, however, marriage was not equivalent to an assignment; because the interest of the wife was, and continued during the whole coverture to be, merely a reversionary chose in action. Whatever the assignees could take, was only that which the husband had, and what the husband had was merely the chance of being able, by means of the death of the tenant for life of the fund, of reducing the share of his wife into possession. This chance never arose; for the tenant for life outlived the wife; and therefore the husband never could defeat the right of the surviving joint tenants by a severance of the joint tenancy. On the whole, therefore, although the bankruptcy could pass all the interest the husband had, still that interest was confined to the contingent right he might have, but never had, of severing the joint tenancy, by reducing the chose in action into possession; for the estate of the tenant for life did not fail until after the death of the wife, and long after the bankruptcy of the husband. (They cited Brown v. Randle, 3 Ves. 256; Mitford v. Mitford, 9 ib. 87; Purdew v. Jackson, 1 Russ. 1; Ripley v. Wood, 2 Sim. 165; Pierce v. Thorneley, id. ib. 177; Ellison v. Elwin, 13 ib. 307; Ashby v. Ashby, 1 Coll. C. C. 553; and 2 Cruise Dig. 378, and cases there cited.

Fabo, for the husband, took no part in the discussion.

Bacon, for the assignees.—To say that there is no right in the assignees in this case, is equivalent to saying that no feme covert can sever a joint tenancy. The marriage of this lady with the husband sufficiently severed her joint tenancy, as is shewn from the case of Brown v. Randle (before cited), where it is laid down that a covenant by one joint tenant to sell his share has the effect of a severance in equity, although it has not that effect at law. Marriage, however, is far more than a mere covenant or agreement, and is in fact an actual assignment of the interest of the female joint tenant.

Friday, June 25.—Campbell, in reply, was stopped by the Court.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR.—I should not have stopped this case, but that I have looked into the authorities in Coke upon Littleton, and Plowden, on the point, involved in this most singular case, and I think them quite decisive on the question. The will here gives 2,000*l.* to Mrs. Barton for life, and then to Frederick Ekin, if he survives; otherwise the 2,000*l.* is to go to his children. Frederick Ekin died in the lifetime of Mrs. Barton, leaving four children; one of them married Mr. Loraine, who afterwards, in July 1841, became bankrupt. In February 1847, Mrs. Loraine died, leaving Mrs. Barton, the tenant for life, her surviving; and Mrs. Barton being now dead, the question is, who is entitled to Mrs. Loraine's share? That these four children took as joint tenants, there is no doubt; and the first question is, what is the effect of the marriage on the joint tenancy between Mrs. Loraine and the other children? Now, on looking into Co. Litt. 185, b, I find something there which seems to lead to the decision of this question. "Two femes, joint tenants of a lease for years; one of them taketh husband and dieth, yet the term shall survive; for though all chattels real are given to the husband if he survive, yet the survivor between the joint tenants is the elder title, and after the marriage the feme continued sole p[illegible]d; for if the husband dieth, the feme shall have it, and not the executors of the husband; but otherwise it is of personal goods." Now this is a case of personal [illegible]od, and as Lord Coke relies on Plowden for this, [illegible] must see what Plowden [illegible]. The case referred to is that of Brace[illegible] Cooke, Plowd. 418, [illegible]ere, after stating that th[illegible] [illegible]ate will be remitted to [illegible] But otherwise it is of [illegible] personal, for if a woman who has personal [illegible] husband the law devests the property [illegible] the wife and vests it in the husband only; and [illegible] if a stranger gives personal goods to a feme covert and to a[illegible], the jointure is presently severed by the law, as th[illegible] the whole shall not go to the surviv[illegible] of the wife [illegible] the other, but the husband and the other [illegible] tenants in common presently, and the title of [illegible] of them as dies shall go to the executors; for chattels personal are esteemed in law of less value and are of a baser degree than chattels real; and so there is a diversity between them. Wherefore [illegible] as this is a chattel real the coverture of the wife makes no severance of the jointure. [illegible] is it any impediment to the plaintiff's having the whole as survivor, it so [illegible] the other point does not hurt him." And then the report proceeds to disc[illegible] the other points of the ca[illegible]. In the present case, also, there is another circumstance to be considered, viz. that the property is not only personal goods, but that the wife's interest was reversionary, and therefore the husband's right to take could only be by survivorship, in case of his surviving his wife. Then the instant the wife dies there accrues a right to the husband which passes to his assignees, and a right also to the other joint tenants claiming by survivorship, and it is brought to this next point, whether the one right or the other accrues first. Now, in the same page of Co. Litt. from which I have already quoted, we find a distinction taken, which is, I think, decisive on this question. Littleton having stated that a devise by one joint tenant shall not prevail against the surviving joint tenants, says.—"And the cause is, for that no devise can take effect till after the death (post mortem) of the devisor, and by his death (per mortem) all the land presently cometh by the law to his companion. Here," says Lord Coke, "both their claims commence at one instant; and although an instant est unum indivisibile tempore, quod non est tempus nec pars temporis, ad quod tamen partes temporis connectuntur," and that "instans est finis unius temporis et principium alterius;" yet, in consideration of law there is a priority of time in an instant; as here the survivor is preferred before the devisee; for Littleton saith that the cause is, that no devise can take effect till after the death of the devisor, and by his death all the land presently cometh by the law to his companion; whereby it appeareth that Littleton, by these words post mortem and per mortem, though they finish at one instant, yet alloweth priority of time in the instant which he distinguisheth by per and post; and the reason of this priority is, that the survivor claimeth by the first feoffer, as hath been said, and therefore, in judgment of law his title is paramount—the title of the devisee.' Putting the case, therefore, on the narrow question whether the survivorship took effect in favour of the husband or of the surviving joint tenants, I think the distinction here taken between taking per and post settles the question; and the authorities being in favour of the older title; where two titles of different dates come into possession at the same moment, I must decide in favour of the joint tenants surviving, and against the assignees of the husband.

VICE-CHANCELLOR PARKER'S COURT.

Reported by GEO. S. ALLNUTT, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Monday, July 19.

Will—Construction—"Issue"—"Children."

A testatrix bequeathed a sum of stock to trustees, upon trust to pay the dividends to A. the wife of C. D. for her life, and after her decease, in case C. D. should survive her, and she should leave no issue living at her decease, then to C. D. for his life, but in case she should leave issue, then one moiety of the dividends to be paid to C. D. for his life, and the other to be applied for the benefit of such issue, and after the decease of A. as to one moiety of the capital, and after the decease of the survivor of A. and C. D. as to the whole of the capital upon trust, to divide the same among the children of A. in certain proportions, with provision for maintenance, and in case A. should die in the lifetime of C. D. leaving issue, and all such issue should die under age and unmarried during the lifetime of C. D. in trust to pay the whole of the dividends to C. D. during his life, and after the decease of A. and C. D. and the survivor, and failure of issue of A. upon trust for the children of E. F.

Held, upon the construction of the will, that the gift over, after "failure of issue" of A. was valid.

Jane Clementina Bryan, by her will dated the 10th of August, 1819, made the following bequest:—"I give and bequeath to my friends John Collins, Edward Jerningham, Anthony Blake, and George Tennant, the capital sum of 29,558*l.* 8s. 10d. Four per Cent. Bank Annuities, &c. upon the trusts following, that is to say, upon trust that they, &c. do and shall pay and apply the dividends and produce thereof when and as the same shall be received, unto my niece Mary Doyle, wife of Sir John Milley Doyle, for her life; and after her decease, in case her husband, the said Sir J. M. Doyle, shall survive her, and she shall leave no issue living at her decease, then to the said Sir John Milley Doyle for his life, but in case she shall leave issue, then one moiety or half part only of such dividends and produce to be paid to the said Sir John Milley Doyle for his life, and the other moiety thereof, to be applied during his life to or for the benefit of such issue of my said niece for their respective minorities as my said trustees for the time being shall think fit and proper, and from and after the decease of my said niece, then as to one moiety or half part of the said capital stock, and after the decease of the survivor of my said niece and of her said husband, then as to the whole of the said capital stock, upon trust to pay, transfer, and divide the same respectively unto, between, and amongst all the children of my said niece either by her said present or any future husband, in the shares and proportions and in the manner following: that is to say, if there shall be only one such child, the whole to such only child, but if there shall be a son and one or more younger child or children, then one-half part thereof to such son, and the other part thereof into and equally amongst such younger children, the shares of sons to become vested at their respective ages of twenty-one, and of daughters at their respective ages of twenty-one years, or at their marriage with the consent of her or their parents or guardians which shall first happen; and in case of the death of any such child before his or her portion shall become vested, the same to be divided equally between the brothers and sisters of the child so dying, and to become payable in like manner as their original shares; and in case there shall be only daughters, the whole to be divided equally amongst such daughters, and to be paid and payable at the times and in the manner hereinbefore mentioned; and my will is that my said trustees for the time being shall, during the minority of any of the children of my said niece, apply all or any part of the interest of the expectant portion of such children in or towards their respective maintenance, education, or advancement, as my said trustees for the time being shall think fit; and in case my said niece shall depart this life in the lifetime of her said present husband, leaving issue, and all such issue shall depart this life under age and unmarried during the lifetime of her said husband, then in trust to pay the whole of the said dividends and interest to the said Sir John Milley Doyle during his life, and from and after the decease of my said niece, and of the said Sir John M. Doyle, and the survivor of them, and failure of issue of my said niece, upon trust to pay and transfer the whole of the said capital stock unto and equally between and among all the daughters and younger children of my nephew George Bryan," &c.

The testatrix gave all the residue of her estate to the said Mary Doyle, and appointed John Collins and George Tennant executors of her will. The testatrix's niece, Lady Doyle, died without issue, and leaving her husband, Sir J. M. Doyle, her surviving; and a question arose in this suit as to the before-mentioned bequest, viz. whether the gift over upon Lady Doyle's death without issue took effect or not.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said that he considered the issue referred to in the gift over were not general issue, but those who were to take under the previous limitations. The testatrix had provided for all the children of Lady Doyle whom she intended to take vested interests—namely, the sons at their respective ages of twenty-one years, and daughters at their respective ages of twenty-one years, or at their marriage, with consent of their parents or guardians. She did not intend any son to take who might have married and died under twenty-one, leaving issue. His Honour considered it to be a rule of construction not now to be controverted, that where there was a gift to some only of a class, and then a gift over upon failure of all the class, it was to be construed upon failure not of the whole class, but of those only who were mentioned before. This was the rule laid down in the cases of Malcolm v. Taylor and Salkeld v. Vernon, among others. A case of Doe v. Lucraft had been cited, in which Lord Chief Justice Tindal was pressed by that rule, and it appeared that he did not dissent from it, but said that he would not apply it in that case so as to make the word "issue" include the issue mentioned before with the restrictions which had accompanied the mention of them, and he said, "If we were to import such a restriction into this part of the will, we should manifestly do violence to the intention of the testator expressed in another part." His Honour did not feel sure that in this will he was obliged to call in aid that rule of construction. The gift here was on failure of issue, and he thought that the word "issue" in this will meant children, and thus it came within the very words. It was obvious that in many parts of this will, "issue" must mean "children." The testatrix first disposed of the income of the fund during the lives of Sir John and Lady Doyle, and the survivor of them, and then she proceeded to dispose of the capital; and the application which she made of that was, that during the lifetime of Sir John Doyle one half, and after the decease of the survivor of them the whole, was given to the children of Lady Doyle, with a provision for the maintenance of the children until they came of age. That was obviously a repetition of that part of the provision for the application of the income during the lives of them, and the survivor of them. In case she should leave issue, then one moiety or half part only of the dividends was to be paid to Sir John Doyle for life, and the other moiety thereof to be applied during his life, for the benefit of such issue of the testatrix's niece, or for their maintenance, education, or advancement during their respective minorities; and then she proceeded, during the life of Sir John Doyle, to give half the capital for the benefit of the "children" of her said niece. It was obvious that she did not mean a different class to take under the latter bequest to "children," from those who were to benefit by the former gift to "issue." She made the same provision for "children," eo nomine, as she before made for "issue," meaning, according to his Honour's judgment, "children." And then the word "issue" in the clause which followed, "In case my said niece shall depart this life in the lifetime of her said present husband, leaving issue, and all such issue shall depart this life under age and unmarried," obviously meant "children," and confirmed this construction. His Honour therefore thought, that without calling in aid the general rule, there was enough in this will to shew that the failure of issue here mentioned meant a failure of children, and consequently the gift over took effect.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

Friday, June 18.

POCOCK v. PICKERING.

Warrant of attorney—Attestation, insufficiency of—Declaration by subscribing witness that he is the attorney for the person executing the warrant.

A warrant of attorney had the following attestation:—"Signed, sealed, and delivered, &c. in the presence of me, H. C., who at the request and in the presence of the said J. P. &c. (the parties executing) have set and subscribed my name as the attorney on their behalf attesting the execution hereof, having first read over and explained to them and each of them the nature and contents thereof.—H. C."

Held (Erle J. dissentiente), that the attestation did not comply with the requisites of the stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 9, for want of a declaration that the subscribing witness was the attorney in the transaction for the parties executing the warrant.

B. C. Robinson had obtained a rule calling upon the defendant to shew cause why an order of the Lord Chief Baron setting aside a warrant of attorney and the judgment and execution thereon should not be rescinded. The attestation was in the following form:—"Signed, sealed, and delivered, &c. in the presence of me, Henry Clarke, who at the request and in the presence of the said Joseph Heathcote, J. H. Pickering, and others (naming them), have set and subscribed my name as the attorney on their behalf attesting the execution hereof, having first read over and explained to them and each of them the nature and contents thereof."—(Signed) "Henry Clarke." The rule had been obtained on the ground that this attestation was a sufficient compliance with s. 9 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110 (a)

Saturday, June 12.—Bramwell and Hall shewed cause.—1. This is a second application upon amended materials, which is not allowed. (R. v. The Great Western Railway Company, 5 Q.B. 597.) [Lord CAMPBELL, C.J.—When we granted the second rule, we thought that in this case an exception might be made to the general rule.] 2. The attestation is insufficient. The statute requires two things: the witness is not only to sign as attorney, but he is to declare that he is the attorney in the transaction (Hibbert v. Barton, 10 Mee. & W. 678); and in this case he fails to do the latter. All the decisions shew that the statute is to be applied stringently, and that the form of attestation must be beyond the power of quibble. (Potter v. Nicholson, 8 Mee. & W. 294; Everard v. Poppleton, 5 Q B. Rep. 181; Lewis v. Lord Kensington, 2 C.B. 463; Gay v. Hall, 5 D. & L 522; Holt v. Kershaw, ib. 119)

B. C. Robinson and Lush, contrà, admitting that the statute was to be applied stringently, contended that the attestation did contain all the particulars required by the statute. (Phillips v. Gibbs, 16 M. & W. 208.) Cur. adv. vult.

JUDGMENT.

Friday, June 18.—Lord CAMPBELL, C.J.—I am of opinion that this attestation is insufficient. The rule established by the case of Hibbert v. Barton and other cases cited seems to be, that if the form given by the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, is not exactly followed, the words used must, by necessary implication, shew that all the three requisites of the statutable attestation have been complied with. Here the attorney sufficiently subscribes his name as a witness to the due execution of the warrant of attorney, and states that he subscribes as such attorney; but does he "thereby declare himself to be attorney for the person executing the same?" that is to say, that he acted as the attorney of the party in this transaction, doing what is required as such attorney to give validity to the instrument. According to probable intendment, from the words "having first read over and explained to them and each of them the nature and contents hereof," it may be inferred that he did so as their attorney, and at their request. But this is not, as it seems to me, a necessary inference, for he may have read over the document, and explained it, as the attestation states, without any request from them, and before he was employed by them as their attorney. It is painful to consider such subtleties, but, as it seems to me, we are bound to give effect to them, if we would follow former decisions upon this enactment of the Legislature for the protection of debtors.

COLERIDGE, J.—The question in this case is, whether the provisions of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 9, are satisfied by an attestation to the execution of a warrant of attorney by three persons named therein, which is in the following words:—"Signed, sealed, and delivered, being first duly stamped in the presence of me, Henry Clarke, who, at the request and in the presence of the said Joseph Heathcote, James Coghlan, and James Henry Pickering, have set and subscribed my name as the attorney on their behalf, attesting the execution hereof, having first read over and explained to them, and each of them, the nature and contents thereof," followed by the signature. The section enacts, that "no warrant of attorney to confess judgment in any personal action, or cognovit actionem, given by any person, shall be of any force unless there shall be present some attorney of one of the Superior Courts on behalf of such person expressly named by him, and attending at his request, to inform him of the nature and effect of such warrant or cognovit before the same is executed, which attorney shall subscribe his name as a witness to the due execution thereof, and thereby declare himself to be attorney for the person executing the same, and state that he subscribes as such attorney." In construing an Act of Parliament, our first business, I conceive, is to examine the words themselves which are used, and if in them there be no ambiguity, it is seldom desirable to go further; and although, from the common uncertainty of language we may very frequently be driven to ascertain the intention by a consideration of the preamble, where it recites the object, or of the previous common law, where the statute clearly alters or supersedes it, in order to settle the meaning of the enactment itself; yet the object still is only to ascertain the mind of the Legislature as expressed in these words; and where in either of these ways you have arrived at the meaning, I conceive nothing is more dangerous than to flinch from that conclusion because we think the enactment is less wise or efficacious than it might have been made, or even wholly fails of its object. Perhaps the most efficacious mode of procuring good law—certainly the only one allowable to a Court of Justice—is to act fully up to the spirit and language of the enactments, and to let their inconvenience be fully felt by giving them their full effect. The clause in question has obviously two parts. Certain things it requires to be done before execution. An attorney must be present on behalf of the person about to execute; he must have been expressly named by that person; he must attend at his request, and he must inform him of the nature and effect of the instrument he is about to execute. All this precedes execution and a fortiori attestation; and whether all this have been complied with is left, in case of dispute, to be proved extrinsically by evidence. No particulars of it need appear to have been done on the face of the instrument. Then comes the execution and the provision as to the form of attestation; the same attorney spoken of before is now to become the witness, and in discharging this distinct duty he is to do three things: first, he is to subscribe his name as witness; secondly, he is in the attestation to declare himself to be the attorney for the person executing; and, thirdly, he is also, in the attestation, to state that he subscribes as such attorney. The two parts seem to me entirely distinct, and framed with different objects. Both must be complied with, or the instrument will be of no force. If the attorney has failed in any one of these requisites in fact, which the former part requires, it will be in vain to rely on an attestation faultless on the face of it; if the attestation be deficient, or informal in any particular on its face, that cannot be cured by its being proved that, in fact, he fulfilled all the requirements of the former part. In the attestation in question, H. Clarke has subscribed his name as witness; he has stated that he has so done as the attorney of the parties executing; but he has not beyond this declared himself to be their attorney. There is not then a literal compliance with the statute. Is there, then, a virtual one? It appears to me not; and I wish to observe that this is not the same question as whether the attestation shews that the parties have had substantially all the protection and information which they could reasonably desire, or the statute intended—the protection and information which they could reasonably require, and which the statute intends, must be given before execution, and before attestation; and we are now upon a question as to the sufficiency of the attestation. It is not enough that Mr. Clarke should have been de facto such an attorney, so named, so requested, and so discharging his duty, as the section requires before execution; he must beyond this declare in his attestation on the face of it that he is the attorney of the parties. Now, there can be only two ways in which this attestation can be said to shew a virtual compliance with this requirement. The first, that to state that he subscribes his name as the attorney, is the same as to declare himself to be the attorney. But if that be so, I remark first, that you may then strike the words in question out of the statute,—you give them no distinct meaning at all; and, secondly, that, in common sense, the two parts of the sentence have not the same meaning, are not tautologous. A man may very well subscribe his name as attorney, and state truly that he does so, without being the attorney in the transaction; if he came in at the last moment before the execution, he might do the former, and yet not be in a condition to make the attestation as to the latter. The second mode in which it may be argued that this attestation shews a virtual compliance with the statute, is in its asserting that H. Clarke has subscribed his name at the request of the parties, and in their presence, and that he had first read over and explained to them and each of them the nature and contents of the instrument; in other words the argument is, that to declare he has performed the duties of an attorney to the parties in the transaction, is the same as to declare that he is their attorney. Now here, again, it is obvious to remark: first, that this particular enumeration does not include all the particulars required by the statute, it does not include the being "expressly named by" the parties; secondly, that if the statute only intended the attestation to shew on its face a compliance with the particulars required before execution, its language is most inappropriate for any such purpose; and, thirdly, that to perform the duties of attorney to a person in this matter, and to be his attorney in it, may be in fact, according to this statute, as expounded in many decisions, a very different thing. If the plaintiff's attorney, "at the request of the parties," had "read over and explained to them and each of them the nature of the instrument and its contents," before execution and attestation, and "had set and subscribed his name as the attorney on their behalf attesting the execution thereof," he yet would not have been their attorney, nor could he truly have declared himself to have been so. In other words, the present attestation may be true in every particular, and yet the requisites of the statute not complied with. But, lastly, it is obvious, on reading the statute, that the precisely worded provisions as to the attestation are intended as an additional security, certainly to the debtor, probably to both parties, beyond what is afforded by those which guard the execution. Whether such additional security is thereby gained, or whether it was on the whole wise to seek for it, is immaterial to us, whose only business is to see that the provisions, such as they are, are complied with. I conclude, then, that this attestation neither literally nor in substance satisfies the requisites of the statute, and I feel neither regret nor satisfaction in arriving at any such conclusion in this or in any similar case. In deciding them, we ought not to have our minds distracted by looking to the right or left at the particular circumstances, which we very often know but imperfectly after all, and which, if we knew them ever so well, could form no safe rule for the interpretation of the statute, which ought to be general. If there are careless lenders and fraudulent borrowers on the one hand, there may be usurious or overreaching lenders and oppressed or overreached borrowers on the other; but in either case the rule must be the same which the statute lays down, if a Court of Law is to apply it with certainty; and unless applied with certainty, it becomes no rule at all. The strictness of former decisions has been complained of as technical and favouring fraud. I am far from saying that none of them have had the effect of defeating an honest security. Is any rule so wisely framed as to be secure from abuse? But I believe that this strictness has led to greater care in the execution of the instruments, which is attested by their coming before the courts much less frequently than formerly. It is perfectly easy to comply literally with what the statute requires: that course must be safe. I cannot feel the force of the argument that it is difficult to frame a faultless equivalent; no one need have recourse to equivalents, and those who will speculate on such have no right to complain if they should turn out to be insufficient. I have not thought it necessary to refer to any decisions specifically. It was not contended that the general current of authority was not in accordance with the view I have taken; but it was rather desired to review them. In my opinion, if the matter were now for the first time to be considered, it would be right to come to the same conclusion. I think the rule should be discharged.

ERLE, J.—In this case the question has been, whether a memorandum of attestation to a warrant of attorney in these words, "Signed in the presence of A. B. who subscribe my name as the attorney attending on behalf of the defendant, and at his request attesting the execution, having first read over and explained the instrument," is a sufficient compliance with the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 9. The memorandum is properly subscribed by the name of the witness, and properly states that he subscribes as attorney; and, according to my understanding of the words, it declares that he who now, as the attorney of the party, attests the execution, did, before such execution, as the attorney of the party, read over and explain to him the nature of the instrument. Assuming that the statute is to be construed strictly, and a literal compliance exacted, according to the judgment in Hibbert v. Barton, this is sufficient. According to that case, the memorandum must allege that the attorney subscribing had acted as attorney to inform the party of the nature of the instrument. It assumes that an attorney may subscribe, as attorney, an attestation, without having been the attorney to inform him of the nature of the instrument. It was an extreme construction, adopted without doubt by Parke, B. and with such repugnance on the part of Lord Abinger, that he assigned as his reason the then existing feeling in favour of defendants and prisoners; and no one perceived more clearly than himself the mischief which must result if this feeling were carried to the extent of generally construing instruments, so as to defeat the intention of the parties who would think the existence of courts a nuisance. There is no dispute that this attestation, in respect of the witness subscribing his name, and stating that he subscribes as the attorney, is correct. But the question has been whether the witness declared by the attestation, according to Lord Abinger, that he had been "the attorney in the actual transaction, and knew what the document was about;" according to Parke, B. "that the attesting attorney was present for the purpose of advising the defendant as to the nature and effect of the instrument, and that he attested as such attorney." Now, by the present attestation, it appears to me to be stated, that the witness who subscribes as attorney had, as attorney, first read over and explained the instrument as attorney acting on behalf of the party. In grammar, "who" may, according to the context, signify "and I;" "as," in law, signifies "in the capacity of." The expression that "an agent did an act in a certain capacity is equivalent to "the agent being in that capacity, did the act;" and the expression that "an agent, being in a certain capacity, did an act, having first done another act," is equivalent to the expression that "the agent, being in that capacity, did the first act first, and then the second act." This attestation then expresses grammatically, "that I, being the attorney acting on behalf of the party, and at his request, read over and explained the instrument to him, and now attest his execution." That which is expressed is both stated and declared; and he who states or declares need not state or declare that he states or declares. Whether the statute or the decision be referred to, the attestation expresses all the ideas required by the Legislature as perfectly as language will permit; it being, as far as I know, impossible to frame a sentence incapable of misconstruction. No definite objection was offered to this attestation in argument. The learned counsel suggested that quibbles in respect of such instruments had been before supported, and perhaps a quibble might be found on the present occasion. If it is said that "the parties have the words of the statute before them, and why cannot they use them?" I would answer that no form is given by the statute, and that this objection ought never to receive assent, unless the objector adduces that which he can shew to be a valid form, and, by comparison with a valid form, points out the invalidity of the form objected to. If the words of the enactment are strictly followed, the attestation would be void, according to Hibbert v. Barton. In the words of the statute, the attestation would be—"I subscribe my name as a witness to the execution, &c. and I hereby declare myself to be attorney for the party executing the same, and state that I subscribe as such attorney;" and it would be consistent with this, that the subscribing witness became attorney at the time of subscribing, without having been attorney before. And according to that decision, it is necessary to add, that he who subscribes and declares himself to be the attorney, had first informed the party of the nature of the instrument, that is, read over, and explained it to him; which is done here; and as the subscribing must be not merely by the same man but by the same attorney who gave the information, I cannot suggest a more precise expression than that "I subscribe as the attorney attending on behalf of the party attesting his execution, having first explained the instrument to him." I regret that I differ from my brethren, because this case will be added to the number of those where the creditor, instead of receiving from, is adjudged to pay to his debtor, and where the law increases, instead of redressing, the loss from wrong.

Lord CAMPBELL, C.J.—The rule will be discharged, and I think it should be without costs.

Rule discharged.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

SITTINGS AT NISI PRIUS.
(Before Sir F. POLLOCK, C.B.)
LINES v. LORD C. RUSSELL.

Parliaments—Select election committee—Warrant of chairman—Form of.

The proceedings of a select committee of the House of Commons under stat. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 98, are entitled to the respect accorded those of the House itself, and of all Superior Courts of Justice: where, therefore, the chairman of such a body has power by the 83rd section to commit witnesses and others to custody in certain events, it is not necessary that the warrant should specify the particular misconduct of which the party committed has been guilty; but it is sufficient if it states that he has been "guilty of prevarication and misbehaviour before the committee."

The declaration stated that the defendant, on the 5th day of April, A.D. 1851, and on divers other days and times, with force and arms, assaulted the plaintiff, and imprisoned him, and forced and compelled him to go from and out of a certain house or room, in which he, the plaintiff, then lawfully was, to wit, the House of Commons, into and along divers passages and ways to a certain other part of the said house; and then and there again imprisoned the plaintiff, and kept and detained him in prison without any reasonable or probable cause, for a long space of time, to wit, for three days then next following, at the expiration of which time he, the defendant, again with force and arms forced and compelled the plaintiff to go from and out of such last-mentioned part of the said house into and along divers ways and passages unto and into a certain other part of the said house, and there again imprisoned the plaintiff for a long space of time, to wit, twelve hours, whereby the plaintiff was not only greatly hurt and injured, but was also obliged to pay a large sum of money, to wit, 30*l.* and to become liable to pay a certain other large sum of money, to wit, 30*l.* in endeavouring to obtain his liberation from the said imprisonment and other wrongs to the plaintiff then did, against the peace, &c.

Pleas, first, not guilty.

Secondly, that before, and at the said several times, when, &c. in the declaration mentioned, and during all the time in the declaration and in the plea mentioned, a parliament of our Sovereign Lady the Queen was holden at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, and that during all the time aforesaid he, the defendant, was the Serjeant-at-Arms attending the House of Commons. That before, &c. to wit, on the 18th of February, 1851, a certain petition had been and was presented to the said House of Commons, complaining of an undue election and return of Jabob Bell, esq. to serve in the said Parliament as a burgess for the borough of St. Albans, in the county of Hertford, and that afterwards and shortly before the first of the said several times, when, &c. to wit, on the 28th of May, 1851, the said petition had been and was referred in due form of law to a select committee of the said House of Commons, duly chosen, appointed, and sworn to try and determine the merits of the said petition, of which said committee, Edward Ellice, the younger, esq. before any of the said several times when, &c. to wit, on the day and year last aforesaid, had been and was duly selected to be and act as the chairman, and which said committee before and at the said several times when, &c. was sitting for the trial and determination of the merits of the said petition. And the defendant further says, that immediately before the first of the said several times, when, &c. to wit, on the said 5th day of April, in the year aforesaid, the plaintiff was a witness before the said select committee, and was as such witness examined upon oath before the said committee, and did then as such witness, and while he was so examined before the said committee, prevaricate and otherwise misbehave himself, whereupon the said Edward Ellice, the younger, then being and acting as such chairman of the said committee, according to and by virtue and authority of the statute in such case made and provided, and by the direction of the said committee, by his warrant in that behalf, under his hand then duly made and bearing date the said 5th of April, in the year aforesaid, after reciting therein that the select committee appointed to try and determine the merits of the petition, complaining of an undue election and return for the borough of St. Albans, had that day ordered that the plaintiff, therein described as William Lines, of St. Albans, having been guilty of prevarication and misbehaviour before the said committee, should be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms attending the said House of Commons, did require and authorise the said Serjeant-at-Arms to take into his custody the body of the plaintiff, and to keep him in such custody until twelve of the clock on Tuesday then next, the 8th day of April, at noon. And the defendant further says, that at the time when the said Edward Ellice, the younger, so made his warrant as aforesaid, the House of Commons was not sitting, and that the said House of Commons had before then been duly adjourned to a certain time after the making of the said warrant, the same being a time less than twenty-four hours before the said hour of twelve of the clock at noon on Tuesday the 8th day of April, in the said warrant mentioned, that is to say, at the hour of a quarter before four of the clock on Monday, the 7th day of April, in the year aforesaid. And the defendant further saith, that the said warrant was afterwards and before any of the said several times when, &c. to wit, on the said 5th day of April, in the year aforesaid, duly delivered to the defendant, then being such Serjeant-at-Arms as aforesaid, to be by him executed in due form of law, by virtue and in execution of which said warrant he, the defendant, as such Serjeant-at-Arms as aforesaid, afterwards and at the same time when, &c. in the said declaration mentioned, to wit, on the day and year last aforesaid, gently laid his hands on the plaintiff to arrest him and take him into custody, and did then arrest him by his body by virtue of and in execution of the said warrant, and did then, in execution of and in obedience of the said warrant, imprison the said plaintiff, and keep and detain him in custody, and did also, in further execution of their obedience to the said, necessarily force and compel the plaintiff to go from and out of the said several houses, rooms, and places in the said declaration first-mentioned, into and along the passages and ways therein mentioned, and did then, in execution of and in obedience to the said warrant, imprison the said plaintiff, and keep and detain him in custody, until he, the plaintiff, was afterwards, to wit, on the 7th day of April in the year aforesaid, and before the expiration of the time mentioned in the said warrant as aforesaid, by the order of the said House of Commons, discharged from the said imprisonment and custody, which are the said several trespasses in the said declaration mentioned, and whereof the plaintiff hath above complained against the defendant, and this the defendant is ready to verify, &c.

Edwin James, Q.C. and Allan, for the plaintiff.

Sir F. Thesiger, Attorney-General, and Andrews, Q.C. and Welsby, for the defendant.

This was an action to recover damages from the Serjeant-at-Arms of the House of Commons for the imprisonment of the plaintiff under a warrant issued by E. Ellice, esq. M.P. for the borough of Coventry, as chairman of the select committee appointed to try the validity of the return of J. Bell, esq. for the borough of St. Albans.

E. James submitted that the warrant was illegal. The question was one of law rather than of fact, and turned entirely on the form of the following warrant:—

"House of Commons—

"St. Alban's Election Petition Committee.

"Whereas the select committee appointed to try and determine the merits of the petition complaining of an undue election and return for the borough of St. Albans, have this day ordered that William Lines, of St. Albans, having been guilty of prevarication and misbehaviour before the said committee, be committed to the custody of the Serjeant-at-Arms attending this House. Now these presents are therefore to require you to take into your custody the body of the said William Lines, and to keep him in such custody until twelve of the clock on Tuesday next, April 8, at noon. For which this shall be your sufficient warrant.

"Given under my hand this 5th day of April, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two.

(Signed) "EDWARD ELLICE,

"Chairman of the said Committee."

"To the Serjeant-at-Arms attending the House of Commons, or his deputy or deputies."

It was contended that there was no authority for the issue of such a warrant. Mr. Ellice, as chairman of the St. Alban's committee, derived his power and jurisdiction exclusively from the provisions of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 98, and it was submitted that being the creature of a statute, he was bound to keep himself strictly within it. Now the 83rd section gives the chairman of such committees power to commit witnesses to custody under certain circumstances and conditions alone, and in the exercise of that power they ought to bring themselves within the very words of that section on the face of the warrant. By that section it is enacted, —"That every such select committee may send for persons, papers, and records, and may examine any person who has subscribed the petition which such select committee are appointed to try, unless it otherwise appear to such committee that such person is an interested witness; and they shall examine all the witnesses who come before them upon oath, which oath the clerk attending such select committee may administer; and if any person summoned by such select committee, or by the warrant of the Speaker of the House of Commons (which warrant the speaker may issue from time to time as he thinks fit), disobey such summons, or if any witness before such select committee give false evidence or prevaricate, or otherwise misbehave in giving or refusing to give evidence, the chairman of such select committee, by their direction, may at any time during the course of their proceedings report the same to the House for the interposition of the authority or censure of the House, as the case may require, and may by a warrant under his hand directed to the Serjeant-at-Arms attending the House of Commons, or to his deputy or deputies, commit such person (not being a peer of the realm or lord of parliament) to the custody of the said serjeant, without bail or mainprize, for any time not exceeding twenty-four hours if the House be then sitting, and if not, then for a time not exceeding twenty-four hours after the hour to which the House stands adjourned." Now the plaintiff appeared as a witness before the committee, and for his conduct as such it was that the chairman thought proper to order him into custody, for which purpose he issued this warrant; but it was submitted that the warrant was defective in omitting to specify the particular misconduct of which the plaintiff had been guilty, and to set forth the particular ground for his imprisonment. The fact was, that the plaintiff had not answered a certain question in a manner satisfactory to the chairman; but whether he gave false evidence, or prevaricated, and if so, in what manner, or misbehaved himself, or whether his misconduct consisted of his refusal to give evidence, or in his manner of giving it, did not clearly appear on the face of the warrant. That instrument rather treated the plaintiff as if he had been guilty of all the offences specified in the section; but whereas it ought, as is submitted, to have distinctly set forth the particular misbehaviour and prevarication imputed to the plaintiff. Then again, the warrant did not allege that the plaintiff had been examined on oath, which, if his offence occurred while giving evidence, ought to have been the case. Nor did the warrant allege that the offence was committed in the House of Commons. In fact, the warrant was in form a general warrant; and though it may be that the speaker of the House itself may have power, as one of the highest tribunals in the land, to issue such an instrument, it is contended that the chairman of a select committee sitting under a particular Act, which defines and gives to it certain powers, does not partake of the same immunity from the common law, and that any warrant issued by him under such circumstances, ought to specify the precise nature of the offence sought to be punished. As the action was brou ht entirely to try the validity of this warrant, the plaintiff would be content to take the opinion of the Judge at Nisi Prius, without troubling the jury with any assessment of damages.

Sir F. POLLOCK, C.B.—As the facts are admitted, and raise a question which must go to the Court above, and I have a clear opinion on them, I think I may as well express my view of the law at once, leaving it to the plaintiff to move. My present impression is strong that the proceedings of a select committee of the House of Commons, sitting under the statute alluded to, are entitled to the same degree of respect which is accorded to those of the highest tribunals known to the English law. As regards the Superior Courts of Westminster-hall, the rule clearly is that a liberal construction prevails. Though a strict compliance with technicalities is required from the Inferior Courts, it is not so in regard to the proceedings of the Superior Courts. Whether it be that it is assumed that they will not conduct themselves improperly, I know not, but so it is.

ANDERSON v. WHALLEY.

Ship's log—Refreshing memory.

A ship's log written by the mate, but read by the captain about a week after it was written, may be used by the captain to refresh his memory.

Case for the negligent navigation of a vessel, whereby the vessel was injured.

In the course of the cause, the captain of the defendant's vessel was put into the witness-box. He deposed that the ship's log, which he produced, was written by the mate, and that the mate was, and had been for some time, serving abroad on the coast of Portugal; that he had himself read the log about a week after it was written; that the matters to which it referred were then fresh in his mind, and he at that time thought the narrative it contained to be correct.

It was then proposed that the witness should refresh his memory by looking at the log-book.

Byles, Serjt. for the plaintiffs, objected. The witness had not himself written the log-book, and therefore could not be allowed to refresh his memory by it. The absence of the mate was not an excuse.

Crowder, contrà.

The learned judge overruled the objection, and the evidence was admitted.

Verdict for the plaintiffs, damages 50l.

Byles, Serjt. and Unthank, for the plaintiffs.

Crowder and Duncan, for the defendant.

SITTINGS AT WESTMINSTER AFTER HILARY TERM.

(Before JERVIS, C.J.)

CAMFIELD v. BOND.

Slander—Evidence—Animus—Amendment.

In an action for slander, the plaintiff may give in evidence other slanderous words to shew the animus of the defendants.

The Court will not amend the declaration, if it appears that by the words really used, the defendant did not intend to make a slanderous and actionable charge.

Case for slander.

The declaration alleged that the defendant had said of and concerning the plaintiff, "That's the man,—Camfield, I mean. He's a thief."

Pleas—Not guilty, and a justification.

In the course of the cause, Horn, for the plaintiff, asked a witness as to some other slanderous words spoken by the defendant of the plaintiff, to shew the animus in which he had used the words complained of in the declaration.

Petersdorff, for the defendant, objected. Other slanderous words could not be given in evidence unless there was some ambiguity in the words complained of, or as to the spirit in which they were used. In this case there was nothing of the kind.

Horn, contrà, submitted that evidence to shew the animus in which slanderous words were used was always admissible, whether there was ambiguity in the words themselves or not. He cited a case, Cafflin v. Cooper, tried by Coleridge, J. at the Lewes Summer Assizes, 1845, where it was held that evidence might be given of words spoken five years before, to shew the animus; similar words being used from time to time, down to the periods of using the words complained of.

JERVIS, C.J. thought the evidence admissible for the purpose proposed.

The facts of the case were these:—Fifteen years before the action was brought, the plaintiff was employed as a journeyman by the defendant, who is a plumber; he charged the plaintiff with robbing him of some solder, and dismissed him from his employ. Subsequently and recently, he said to a plumber named Slane,—"You have got a man named Camfield in your service; I had him in my employ. I was looking about and found some solder hidden. I told him he was a thief, and discharged him." Slane mistook the name for that of one Caulfield, also in his service, and told him what had been said. Caulfield immediately went to the defendant, and asked him why he had charged him with robbing him. Defendant answered, "It is not you, it was Camfield I meant."

At the close of the case, Petersdorf submitted that the plaintiff must be nonsuited. He had failed to prove the words alleged in the declaration.

Horn applied to the Court to amend the declaration, by substituting the words proved for those declared on.

JERVIS, C.J.—I would amend, if the difficulty was one merely technical, but the words proved were not actionable.

Horn contended that if the words used by the defendant on both occasions were coupled together, they would be actionable. In answer to the question, why did you charge me with robbing you, the defendant answered, "It was Camfield, I meant." That, taken in conjunction with what he had said before, was a charge of felony. [JERVIS, C.J.—He only meant that Camfield was the man he alluded to on the former occasion.] He submitted that the question, what the defendant meant was a question for the jury. The impression necessarily made on Camfield's mind was, that a charge of felony was made. That was enough. An additional ground for the Court to amend was, that if it were improper so to do, the Court above could amend the error, while in the opposite case the plaintiff would be without a remedy.

JERVIS, C.J.—What the defendant said was strictly true, and merely historical. He had found the solder, he had told the plaintiff he was a thief, he had discharged him. In my opinion, the subsequent remark merely meant that Camfield was the individual he had alluded to. Under these circumstances, I do not think I ought to amend.

Nonsuit.

Petersdorff for defendant.

ROBINSON v. GELDARD.

Will—Charitable legacies—Pure personalty—Personalty savouring of realty—Abatement—Marshalling.

Although according to the general rule personalty savouring of realty and pure personalty, will not be marshalled so as to throw the general legacies on the former, and to leave the latter for the payment of the charitable legacies, if the testator shews a clear intention to give priority to the charitable legacies with reference to the pure personalty, the Court will give effect to such intention.

A testator gave legacies to charities to be raised and paid out of such of his ready money, goods, and personal effects as he might or could by law charge with the payment of the same; and he gave other legacies for charitable purposes:

Held, reversing the decree of the Court below, that the charitable legacies were a primary charge on the pure personalty, in preference to the general legacies.

The testator, Thomas Clapham, by his will dated the 2nd of January, 1816, bequeathed as follows:—"I give and bequeath to the treasurer for the time being of the General Infirmary at Leeds the sum of 10,000*l.* to be raised and paid out of such of my ready money, goods, and personal effects as I may or can by law charge with the payments of the same, which sum I declare and desire may be applied towards carrying on the charitable purposes of the said infirmary." The testator then gave, in similar terms, other charitable legacies, to the amount of 20,000*l.*; and afterwards other legacies, not charitable, to the amount of 36,000*l.* The testator's general personal estate, consisting of pure and mixed personalty, was more than sufficient for the payment of his debts, funeral and testamentary expenses and legacies; but his pure personalty alone was insufficient for that purpose. His Honour the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, upon the authority of The Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. 581, and Sturge v. Dimsdale, 6 Beav. 462, held that the charitable bequests ought to abate in the proportion which the pure personalty bore to the whole personalty, but his Honour stated, that had it not been for those cases, he should have held otherwise.

This was an appeal from the decree of the Vice-Chancellor.

J. Parker, Malins, and Bolton, in support of the appeal, contended that the charitable legacies were, in effect, given by the testator out of the personalty, which he could by law charge with the payment of the same, that is to say, out of the pure personalty. The rule, therefore, that the Court will not marshal assets in favour of a charity was inapplicable to this case, and was unnecessary in order to give effect to the testator's intention. That the cases of The Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. 581, and Sturge v. Dimsdale, 6 Beav. 462, by which the Vice-Chancellor considered himself bound, did not apply to the present case; if they did, they were rather in favour of the appellants. These charitable legacies were in effect given specifically out of a particular fund, and ought to be considered as demonstrative legacies. Acton v. Acton, 1 Mer. 178; Fowler v. Willoughby, 2 S. & S. 354; Newbold v. Roadnight, 1 Russ. & My. 677; 1 Roper on Legacies, 198, 4th ed.; Wms. Executors, 923, 928, 931, 1083, 3rd ed.

Walker, J. Russell, and Willcock for the residuary legatees, in support of the decision of the court below, contended that the charity legacies were not entitled to any priority over the other legatees as far regarded the pure personalty, and that, according to the general rule, assets could not be marshalled in their favour.

J. Parker, in reply.

The LORD CHANCELLOR (Truro).—In this case a suit was instituted to administer the testator's estate, and at the hearing it was contended, on behalf of the charities, that the legacies given to individuals ought to be paid out of the personalty savouring of realty, so as to leave the whole of the pure personalty for the payment of the charitable legacies so far as it would extend; and the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce was apparently of opinion that on principle that mode of payment ought to be adopted, but in deference to two cases before Lord Langdale, The Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. 581, and Sturge v. Dimsdale, 6 Beav. 462, which appeared to him to be authorities for the opposite course, he made a decree that the charitable legacies ought to abate in the proportion that the part of the testator's personal estate savouring of realty bears to the whole personal estate. Against this decree the charitable institutions have appealed; and I am of opinion that the appeal ought to be allowed. However proper it might have been for the Vice-Chancellor to have deferred to the language used by Lord Langdale in the two cases which I have mentioned, the actual decisions in those cases do not govern the present case, and of course I should not be justified in yielding to any mere expression of opinion on the part of the learned judge who decided those cases, which did not accord with my own conclusion as to the true doctrine applicable to the present case. In The Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. 581, the testatrix gave legacies to certain individuals amounting in the whole to about 4,000*l.* and she also gave legacies to charities amounting together to about 1,300*l.* which charitable bequests she directed should be paid and satisfied out of her ready money, and the proceeds of the sale of her funded property, personal chattels, and effects, and not from the proceeds of her leasehold or real estate; and the testatrix charged her leasehold estate bequeathed to S. B. and M. S. in addition to her other personal estate, with the payment of her debts, funeral, and testamentary expenses, and the legacies not given to charitable uses. The assets of the testatrix consisted of about 1,200*l.* in pure personalty, and 5,400*l.* in personalty connected with real estate, and were liable to about 1,500*l.* debts, besides her funeral and testamentary expenses. Lord Langdale, after observing that it was a new question, and making some other remarks, proceeded thus:—"The leaseholds being given 'in addition to,' and not 'in exoneration of,' the other personal estate, we have the whole personal estate subject to the debts, &c. and all the other the legacies; the necessary consequence is, that when you come to apply the assets in payment, you must have pro ratâ payments out of different sorts of persona estate; you pay the debts, funeral expenses, an legacies, out of the common fund, and yet it is de sired that the charity legacies should be first pai out of the pure personalty; here, as in every case the testatrix intended all the legacies to be paid, but it must be done according to the principle of law and if this were a matter altogether independent o authority, I own I should have thought that gooc reasons might have been found for marshallin assets; I cannot help very strongly thinking so, bu considering the authorities which have prevailed the language which has been laid down on this sub ject, and the necessity of having pro ratâ payments in cases where charity legacies are concerned, I think that something more than is to be found in this will is wanting to entitle the charity legacy to be paid in full out of the pure personalty; the words in thi will seem to me insufficient to enable her intention to be carried into effect in the state of her assets the intention was perfectly lawful, and might have been effected in a different way, if there had been words introduced into this will expressly, throwing the other burdens upon the other portions of the estate; in that case I think the lawful intentio would have been carried into effect, and there would have been no such difficulty as at present appears.' The circumstance that in that case the testatrix expressly subjected the pure personalty to the payment of debts and legacies to individuals, as well as the personalty savouring of realty, and the circumstance that the personalty savouring of realty was insufficient for the payment of the debts and legacies to individuals, constitute, as it seems to me, two material distinctions between that case and the present. I regard the first circumstance as constituting a material distinction, because in such a case, if the Court directs the legacies to individuals to be paid partly out of the pure personalty, the direction is only in accordance with the express words of the testator. And I regard the second circumstance as constituting a material distinction, not indeed as affecting the construction of the will, but as influencing the adjustive interference of the Court, which is not the result of construction, but of the application of equitable principles independent of construction or any intention on the part of the testator as to the mode of payment, although in furtherance of the presumable general intent as to the payment itself. In this view, the insufficiency of the personalty savouring of realty for the payment of debts and legacies to individuals, forms a strong reason for allowing the private legatees to participate in the pure personalty, which reason does not exist in the present case, as they can satisfy themselves out of the personalty savouring of realty. But even, notwithstanding these circumstances, Lord Langdale intimated that he should have decided the case in the contrary way, but for the language used in previous cases as distinguished from principle, or from any actual decisions on the point, of which he considered there was none. In Sturge v. Dimsdale, 6 Beav. 462, a testatrix created a mixed fund of realty and personalty for the payment of her debts and legacies, some of which were given to charities; but she directed that the chari table legacies should be paid exclusively out of such part of her personal estate as was legally applicable thereto; she afterwards directed her trustees to retain a part of the stock of which she might be possessed, sufficient for the payment of some annuities; she then gave a number of legacies to individuals, including twelve legacies of 500*l.* each; and in case her real and personal estate, after payment of her debts, funeral and testamentary and other expenses, and the investment of the annuity fund, and the payment of the legacies, except the said twelve legacies should prove insufficient to pay those twelve legacies; then she directed her trustees, as the annuitants died, to pay off as much of the twelve legacies as should remain unpaid; and, after full payment of all the legacies, annuities, and charges, she bequeathed various charitable legacies to be paid out of the annuity fund as the annuitants died: the actual decision of Lord Langdale in that case, instead of being an authority against the charities in the present case, was a decision that the legacies were demonstrative, and were to be paid out of the annuity fund, as a fund demonstrated (to use the technical expression), for that purpose; and the dicta occurring there which were adverse to the charities in that case are mere extrajudicial doubts, and not considered by Lord Langdale himself as founded on principle or on actual decisions, but on the language used in some previous cases; and it is to be observed that in Sturge v. Dimsdale, as well as in The Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, the testatrix expressly alluded to the pure personalty as a fund applicable jointly with the personalty savouring of realty to the payment of debts, and the legacies given to individuals. On the whole, therefore, so far from those cases being authorities against the charities, I regard them as authorities for the charities, or at all events as not furnishing any conclusive authority against them; and I am not aware of any previous cases which resemble the present. Notwithstanding the decisions of Lord Hardwicke, by which he permitted the marshalling of assets in favour of charities, I quite admit that it has long been settled that assets cannot, in favour of charities, be marshalled in the ordinary way by the mere application of those principles upon which the Court has usually proceeded in marshalling assets; but I consider the charitable legacies in the present case as having the same incidents as demonstrative legacies to individuals, and as being analogous to, if not strictly identical with, such demonstrative legacies, except so far as regards the right to satisfaction out of other assets in the event of the failure of the fund out of which they are directed to be paid, a right of which they are debarred by the Statute of Mortmain, 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. The nature and incidents of demonstrative legacies are thus explained by Mr. Justice Williams, in his valuable work on Executors, p. 923:—"A legacy of quantity is ordinarily a general legacy; but there are legacies of quantity in the nature of specific legacies, as of so much money with reference to a particular fund for payment: this kind of legacy is called by the civilians a demonstrative legacy, and it is so far general, and differs so much in effect from one properly specific, that if the fund be called in or fail, the legatee will not be deprived of his legacy, but be permitted to receive it out of the general assets; yet the legacy is so far specific that it will not be liable to abate with general legacies upon a deficiency of assets." And again, p. 1083, "And in this the testator's intention is the principle; for it is inferred that he, in referring to specific parts of his estate for payment of particular legacies, intended those legacies to have a preference to others which he had not so secured." n illustration of this, as far as it is applicable to .he present question, I may mention two cases. In Acton v. Acton, 1 Mer. 178, a testator bequeathed, s a portion to his daughter, 12,000*l.* and to his iece 4,000*l.* directing that the latter sum should be aid out of the money in his banker's or agent's ands; at the time of the testator's death, there as a sum of money in his agent's hands exceeding he sum of 4,000*l.* but the whole amount of his ersonal property, after payment of debts and specific legacies, was not sufficient to discharge both the legacies of 12,000*l.* and 4,000*l.* Sir William Grant, Master of the Rolls, said,—"This is a question of riority, not of ademption; no other legatee can ave any right to the fund so appropriated, till after payment of the 4,000*l.*; that legacy must therefore be paid in full out of the money reported to be in the agent's hands at the time of the death of the estator." In Livesay v. Redfern, 2 Y. & C. 90, a testrix charged an annuity upon her leasehold messuage in Wimpole-street, and all her residuary personal estate and effects whatsoever and wheresoever, except her leasehold property at Richmond. Mr. Baron Alderson held that the annuity was payable out of the leasehold premises in Wimpole-street in priority over the other legacies given by the will. These authorities appear to me to shew that the charitable legacies in the present case are demonstrative legacies, or analogous thereto; but whether this is the precise character of these legacies, so that had there been a deficiency of assets they would have been entitled to be paid in full in priority to the other legacies, it is not necessary to decide: all that I need determine in the present case is, whether the legacies to individuals are to be paid partly out of the pure personalty, or whether they are to be paid exclusively out of the personalty savouring of realty, which is sufficient for the full payment of those legacies. Now, where there is no direction as to the payment of any legacy out of a particular fund, it may be admitted, for the purpose of the present question, that the different legacies may fairly be regarded as intended to be paid out of the different funds rateably, Roberts v. Walker, 1 Russ. & M. 752; and where there is a deficiency of personalty savouring of realty to pay the legacies to individuals, there, in furtherance of the general or paramount intention that all the legacies should be paid, the legacies to individuals may be paid partly out of the pure personalty, even although the legacies to charities may be expressly made payable out of the pure personalty; and this will more especially be the case, where the will purports to make the legacies to individuals also payable out of the pure personalty as well as out of the personalty savouring of realty, as in The Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. 581. Where, however, the testator expressly directs charitable legacies to be paid exclusively out of his pure personalty, and the personalty savouring of realty is sufficient for the payment of the legacies to individuals, and the will does not purport to make those legacies payable out of the pure personalty as well as out of the personalty savouring of realty, and the pure personalty is not sufficient, or only sufficient for the payment of the charitable legacies. Here, it appears to me, that to direct that the legacies to individuals should be paid partly out of the pure personalty, to the partial defeasance of the charitable legacies, would be a complete and unjustifiable inversion of the rule that charities are favoured in law, and an utter violation of the general or paramount intention of the testator as to the payment itself, and probably, also, of the particular or subordinate intention as to the mode of payment. As regards the rule that charities are favoured in law, it cannot be reasonably contended for one moment that an exception to this rule is called for in the present case, in order to prevent the mischiefs intended to be guarded against by the Statute of Mortmain. The charitable legacies are expressly made payable out of pure personalty; and a legacy of pure personalty, however large, however unjust towards relations who have the strongest moral claims on the testator, however "languishing" or near death the testator may be at the time of making his will, is contrary to the provisions of the Statute of Mortmain, for that statute does not affect to prohibit disposition of pure personalty at all. Whether it would be expedient to extend the provisions of the statute to pure personalty, is a question which it is not for me but for the Legislature to decide, and on which I give no opinion but until the Legislature shall think fit to extend the restrictions of the Mortmain Act, I have no power to do so either directly or indirectly. It may, however, be said, that the Court has refused to marshal assets in favour of a charity; but this Court would by so doing be occasioning the mischiefs intended to be prevented by the Mortmain Act, and that, in the present case, the Court ought not to compel the private legatees to pay themselves out of the personalty savouring of realty; for by so doing the parties who are interested in the personalty savouring of realty, after the payment of legacies, will be losers to the extent of that which the charitable legatees take out of the pure personalty, which would otherwise pay the private legatees. This argument is specious enough, but it is founded in sophism. The cases in which the Court has refused to marshal assets have, in truth, nothing whatever to do with the present case. In these cases a testator had affected to do what he could not lawfully do: he had attempted to make charitable bequests payable wholly or partly out of real estate or personalty savouring of realty, and the Court refused to marshal his assets in favour of the charities, and thereby caused the legacies to be paid in a different way from that which he intended. But in the present case the testator in effect has himself marshalled or arranged his assets, by directing the charitable legacies to be paid exclusively out of the pure personalty; and there can be no reasonable doubt of the lawfulness of his intention. He gives charitable legacies out of his pure personalty. It cannot be said that it would have been a contravention of the Mortmain Act if he had merely made charitable bequests out of pure personalty, and had made no other bequests; and it can make no difference that he happens to have left other legacies. It may, however, be said, that if the charitable legacies be allowed to exhaust the whole of the pure personalty, the diminution of personalty savouring of realty caused by the payment thereout of legacies to individuals, is indirectly occasioned by the charitable legacies. And this argument, if it proved anything, would prove too much; for it would prove that the legacies to individuals ought to be entirely paid out of the pure personalty so far as it would extend, rather than out of personalty savouring of realty, and that the charitable legacies ought to take no part of the pure personalty until after the other legacies were satisfied; but that would never be contended. And again, this argument is founded on mere conjecture, for non constat but that the testator, if he had not given legacies to charities, would have given as much more to individuals, so that the parties interested in the personalty savouring of realty, after payment of legacies, would take no more than if the charitable legacies had not been given; and therefore it cannot be said with any certainty, that, by allowing the charitable legacies to exhaust the pure personalty, the parties interested in the personalty savouring of realty are injured by the bequests being made in favour of charities, for they would equally have been injured if additional bequests had been in favour of individuals. The argument which I have combated derives some countenance from an equivocal expression of Lord Hardwicke in Arnold v. Chapman, 1 Ves. 108, 110, where he remarks,—"It is said the assets should be marshalled; and this case put, that since this Act a man may say that he charges his real estate with debts and legacies, and gives his personal estate to a charity: possibly that may do; but it would go a great way towards overturning this Act; but as to that I will give no opinion, for there an intention appears in the testator." To so much of the language as implies a doubt of the lawfulness of exonerating pure personalty in favour of charities from legacies to individuals, I attach no weight, for the reasons I have assigned; and, indeed, in The Attorney-General v. Lord Mountnorris, Dick. 379, where a testator charged his real estate with the payment of his debts and legacies, except three legacies given for charitable purposes, which he directed should be paid out of his personal estate, Lord Northington decreed the charitable legacies to stand in the place of the specialty creditors for what they should exhaust of the personal estate. And it was admitted by Lord Langdale in The Philanthropic Society v. Kemp, 4 Beav. 581, that if the testator, instead of expressly making the legacies to individuals payable partly out of the pure personalty, had expressly thrown the legacies to individuals on the personalty savouring of realty, as well as directed the charitable legacies to be paid exclusively out of the pure personalty, yet there the effect, as regards the alleged contravention of the Mortmain Act, would have been precisely the same; the means alone would have been somewhat different. In Williams v. Kershaw, 1 Keen. 274, n. of which there is only a short note, where it was contended that charitable legacies ought to be made good out of so much residue as consisted of pure personalty, Lord Cottenham is reported to have said,—"This would be marshalling the assets at least against the next of kin, and would be contrary to the rule of the Court adopted in all such cases, which is to appropriate the fund as if no legal objection existed as to applying any part of it to the charity legacies, then holding so much of the charity legacies to fail as would in that way be to be paid out of the prohibited fund." In the cases in which the rule so stated by Lord Cottenham has been adopted, the testator himself, by giving the charitable legacies out of a mixed fund, intended that the fund should be appropriated as if no legal objection existed as to applying any part of it to the charitable legacies; but this rule is obviously quite inapplicable to a case in which the testator himself, far from intending such an application of the fund, has taken care expressly to negative such an application of it. I have alluded to the general rule that charities are favoured in law, but I need not at all rely on it, although it bears very strongly on the present question. I think the case may be viewed as if the legacies directed to be paid out of the pure personalty were legacies to individuals; and I conceive that an attention to the fundamental maxim, that the lawful intent of the testator, expressed or implied, is the governing rule in the construction of wills, is all that is necessary for the determination of the present question in favour of the charities. The claim of the appellants is not properly a claim to have the assets marshalled, but a claim of priority; and the cases on the subject of marshalling of assets in favour of charities has in reality nothing to do with the present question. Marshalling of assets, in the ordinary acceptation of the term, is not an arrangement directed by the testator, but is the result of the application of the principles of equity jurisprudence. But the arrangement insisted on by the [illegible]nts in this case is plainly directed by the testator h[illegible]self; he has in effect marshalled or arranged his a[illegible]ts himself. It is true he has not expressly thrown the [illegible] legacies to individuals on the personalty savouring of [illegible]alty, but he has plainly manifested his intention that [illegible] they are paid at all out of the pure personalty, it shall [illegible]ly be after payment of the charitable legacies; for by directing that the charitable legacies shall be paid exclusively out of the pure personalty, he has plainly shewn his intention that they shall be satisfied out of the pure personalty in preference to the legacies to individuals, whether they are strictly demonstrative legacies or not. No one can doubt that the testator intended all his legacies to be paid in full, and that he well knew that the charitable legacies could not receive a shilling out of the personalty savouring of realty; it is clear, therefore, that he intended the charitable legacies to be paid in full out of the pure personalty, so far as it would extend, leaving the legacies to individuals to be paid out of the personalty savouring of realty, to which the charities could not resort. I confess I am unable to perceive anything to debar me from giving effect to his intention. The Mortmain Act, and the actual decisions against the marshalling of assets in favour of charities, have nothing whatever to do with the question. The policy of the law, as it relates to the subject, requires that the charities should be favoured rather than injured by the decree of the Court; and the fundamental rule of effectuating the lawful intention of the testator, expressed or implied, makes it incumbent upon me to direct that the charitable legacies be paid out of the pure personalty, so far as it will extend, in preference to the other legacies. The result, therefore, is, that the Vice-Chancellor's decision, made in deference to the language used by Lord Langdale, must be reversed, while at the same time the opinions of both those learned judges will be affirmed.

STROUGHILL v. ANSTEY.

Equitable mortgage—Trustees for sale charged with the payment of debts and legacies—Effect of such a charge—Breach of trust—Trustees' receipts—Purchaser's liability to see to the application of purchase-money, and the doctrine relative to trustees' receipts considered.

Power of sale, whether it includes a power to mortgage.

The cases of Mills v. Banks, Ball v. Harris, Johnson v. Kennett, and Forbes v. Peacock, considered.

Distinction between a trustee raising money after a distance of time, where he is merely a trustee, and where he is beneficially entitled to the estate subject to the charge.

Testator bequeathed a leasehold house to trustees, for his wife for life, and after her death, in trust for sale; and he also bequeathed all his personal estate (including leaseholds A. and B.), under a general residuary bequest, to trustees, who were also executors, upon trust to sell, for the payment of debts and legacies, with a special power to the trustees to give receipts.

The testator died in 1826, his wife in 1841.

In 1842, the then trustees borrowed two several sums of money on the security of the title-deeds to leaseholds A. and B. In 1846 one of the trustees died, and the survivor, who continued to pay the interest, shortly afterwards absconded. On an equitable mortgagee's claim, filed by the lenders of the money:

Held, overruling the decision of the Vice-Chancellor, that a mortgage was not authorised by the trust to sell, and that their security was invalid.

A testator declared that the purchaser of a particular house bequeathed in trust, and who should pay his purchase-money to the trustee or trustees for the time being of his will, "or who now have or hath, or from time to time shall or may have all or any part of the said trust moneys, subject to the bequests and trusts of this my will, in his or their hands," should not be obliged to see to the application of the said money after payment to the acting trustee or trustees, and that the receipt or receipts of the acting trustee or trustees should be sufficient discharges:

Held, that the above receipt clause gave the trustees a power to give discharges.

If a trust be created for the payment of debts and legacies, a purchaser or mortgagee is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money.

When a testator charges his estates with the payment of his debts and legacies, it shews that he intends to entrust his trustees with the power of receiving the money in case there may be debts, and by implication he imposes upon them, and not upon a purchaser or mortgagee, the obligation of seeing it properly applied.

A mortgage, under a mere trust for conversion out and out, is not a due execution of it.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S COURT.

Where trustees are entrusted with the legal estate, and with the performance of a particular trust, through the medium of a sale, although a direction for a sale does not properly authorise a mortgage, the Court has in some measure a discretion whether it will sanction a mortgage.

A power of sale out and out for a purpose, or with an object beyond the raising of a particular charge, does not authorise a mortgage, but where it is for raising a particular charge, and the estate is settled or devised subject to that charge, the Court will support a mortgage, as a conditional sale, as a proper mode of raising the money, and within the power.

Where a trustee, who is also owner of the estate, raises money, a purchaser or mortgagee is not liable for its misapplication, unless it clearly appear that he is raising it not for the purposes of an obligation with which the estate may be charged. But where an estate is devised subject to a charge, and the trustee, from the intrinsic evidence of the transaction, appears not to be acting in the execution of his duty, a purchaser or mortgagee will be liable, as in the case of a purchase or mortgage from an executor, as a party to a breach of trust.

If trustees, at a considerable distance of time, raise money without any apparent reason, those advancing it must be considered as under an obligation to inquire for what purposes it is about to be used, otherwise a breach of trust may be established, of which they ought to have taken notice.

Where there is a general trust without pointing out the mode of raising charges, or where by force of the charge itself there is an implied trust to raise it, and the estate itself is disposed of subject to it, there the charge may be raised as well by mortgage as by sale, because there is no trust to sell out and out for its payment, but where estates are devised upon trust for certain persons as a residue after a direction to pay debts, that would be a charge generally for the payment of debts, and one which the Court would construe into a general trust to dispose of the estates in a manner best suited to effect the objects of the testator.

The Court, in favour of the intention of a testator, will construe a clause empowering trustees to give receipts in respect of the sale of a particular property into a general receipt clause.

This was a claim arising under the will of a Mr. George Anstey, by persons alleging themselves to be equitable mortgagees, and seeking to obtain the benefit of their securities.

Mr. Anstey having by his will appointed several gentlemen his executors in trust, gave a particular leasehold estate in trust to his wife for life, and then to be sold and the money to form part of his residuary personal estate. He then gave all his personal estate, which included the leasehold houses in question, by the general description of "residue," upon trust, at such time or times as to the trustees should seem meet, to sell and convert into money all such part thereof as should not consist of money, and to invest the produce of such sale and conversion in manner therein mentioned, with power to vary the securities, and to be possessed of the same, upon trust to pay and discharge his funeral and testamentary expenses, and all his just debts, and then to pay an annuity and certain legacies, including two legacies of 15,000*l.* each to two of his daughters, and he disposed of the other residue in the manner therein mentioned. The will contained the following power to the trustees to give receipts:—"I declare that the person or persons who, from time to time, shall become the purchaser or purchasers of the house in Montague-street [which was the house given to his wife for life], and who shall pay his, her, or their purchase-money or moneys to the trustee or trustees for the time being of this my will, or who now have or hath, or from time to time shall or may have all or any part of the said trust moneys, subject to the bequests and trusts of this my will in his, her, or their hand or hands, or upon securities to be given by him, her, or them, shall not be obliged or required to see to the application of the same moneys, &c. or any part thereof." The testator did not absolve the purchaser of the other property, but expressly absolved the purchaser of that particular leasehold so directed to be sold after the death of his wife; but he exonerated all persons who should or might have any part of the trust moneys in their hands.

Mr. Anstey in his life time contracted for the purchase from Mr. Cubitt of two leasehold houses, Nos. 35 and 39, Tavistock-square, and which, after Mr. Anstey's death, were assigned to Mr. Frampton, the only executor who proved the will, and who subsequently assigned them to the two acting trustees (one of whom was a Mr. Anstey, a party beneficially interested), and in whom the legal estate then became vested. In 1836, Mr. Frampton died, whereupon Mr. Hobson (a solicitor) was appointed a trustee.

In August 1842, the plaintiffs advanced to Messrs. Anstey and Hobson the sum of 1,800*l.* for the repayment of which they agreed to take as a security the title-deeds to one of the leasehold houses; and in the month of November following they advanced the further sum of 1,000*l.* on the security of the other.

The original lease and two several indentures of assignment were deposited with the plaintiffs when they paid the two several sums of money to Messrs. Anstey and Hobson, and who, by two several articles of agreement accompanying such deposits, covenanted to pay the two principal sums and interest, at 5 per cent. on a day named. In June 1846, Anstey died intestate, and Hobson duly paid the interest on the money up to the month of November 1847. In 1848 h absconded, and the interest being in arrear, the plaintiffs filed their claim, for the purpose of having the mortgaged premises sold, and the produce applied in satisfaction of their claim.

The claim was heard by the Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce, and his Honour, upon the authority of the cases, declared the plaintiff entitled to the usual foreclosure decree, on suits by equitable mortgagees. From this decree the defendants appealed. The judgment of the Vice-Chancellor, the facts of the case, th ent, and the names of the counsel, will be found in 18 Law T. Rep. 60.

At the close of the argument, the Lord Chancellor said that as the case was one of very great importance on the general practice in conveyancing, he would look into the authorities, and give judgment in the morning.

Monday, July 12.—The LORD CHANCELLOR having gone through the facts of the case as they appear above, and observed that it was the intention of the testator to make the trustees' receipts discharges to purchasers generally; and that although the words of the will were somewhat difficult to deal with, yet, being sufficient for the purpose, the Court was bound to consider the trustees as having the power to give discharges, said.—The learned Vice-Chancellor is reported to have decided this case on the authorities, but what those authorities were does not appear. Those that were cited before me depend upon grounds very different to the present case. This was not the case of an executor. The legal estate in these leasehold houses was in the trustees. They had the legal estate for the purposes of the will, and the power of the executor was at an end. Mr. Hobson acted fraudulently, and raised the money for his own benefit. He prevailed on Mr. Anstey to join with him in raising the money upon the security of the estates. Although the two trustees were present upon the first transaction, and the cheque was drawn in favour of Mr. Hobson by the desire of the other, yet it got to the private bankers of Mr. Hobson, who used the money for his own private purposes. It was, therefore, a gross breach of trust. These were mere agreements for securing the particular sums of money advanced: there is not a word upon the face of either of them to shew that it was for the purposes of the will, except that in describing the parties, they are described as trustees; there is not a word pointing out that the money was wanted or was raised for the purposes of the trust: they covenanted to pay the money themselves at the end of a year from the date of the transaction. That was very unusual; it gave the plaintiffs no legal estate. Now, the first question is, was a mortgage or not authorised by the trusts of Mr. Anstey's will? I think that where trustees have a legal estate, and where they are to perform a particular trust, through the medium of a sale—although a direction for a sale does not properly authorise a mortgage, yet where the circumstances justify it, it must be in some measure in the discretion of the Court whether it will sanction that particular mode or not. It may be the saving of an estate; it may be the most discreet thing that could be done; and, as the legal estate would go, and the purposes of the trust become satisfied, I think it impossible for the Court to lay down that in every case of a trust for sale to raise particular sums, a mortgage might not under circumstances be justified; but as a general rule there can be no difficulty in saying that a mortgage under a mere trust for conversion out and out, is not a due execution of that trust. The nature of this property was leasehold, a varying property, and one which the Court would, as a matter of course, even under a general gift, convert into money, where it is to be distributed among different parties, having different interests. This Court would not allow such property to remain unconverted, under an absolute trust for conversion out and out, and allow the trustees to deal with it as if it were property that was to be enjoyed in specie. Now, what do they do? They receive the rents and account to the persons who are beneficially entitled to the purchase-money for those rents; Mr. Hobson sends in his accounts without mentioning the money which he has raised: he deducts no interest, although he pays it. This is the case of a trust in which it was meant that, with all convenient speed after the testator's death, the property should be converted out and out, not simply for the purpose (for that is the point) of paying a charge, which might therefore be more conveniently raised by a mortgage, but for the purpose of conversion. One of the objects of the conversion was to pay debts; but there were other and final objects, which render a conversion out and out absolutely necessary—namely, the dedication of the trust-moneys to raise particular sums according to the testator's will; and to continue the property unconverted is to set aside the will and to treat it as nought, instead of executing its trusts. If the trusts had been properly executed this fraud could not have taken place. Now as to the authorities. The case of Mills v. Banks was simply a trust under a term of years to raise portions: there was an ambiguity from the nature of the trust whether it was to be raised by sale or mortgage—the Court decreed a sale: the trustees made a mortgage, which was disputed, the dispute being whether the money ought to be raised out of the annual profits or thrown as a charge upon the corpus. I have no hesitation in saying that the money was raised properly out of the corpus, because large portions were directed to be raised out of the term. The estate was to be settled for other purposes: the estate was not to be set aside, and the annual rent received to pay the charge, so that during that time nobody should have the enjoyment of the estate; but it was intended to be borne by all. That case was re-heard, and the Chancellor was not inclined to agree with his predecessor, although he did ultimately affirm it. And Lord Cottenham, in Ball v. Harris, referring to that case, considers it as settling a general question. He says:—"The third point is untenable, viz. the right of the trustee to sell did not authorise a mortgage—a power to sell implies a power to mortgage, which is a conditional sale." I think that a power of sale out and out for a purpose, or with an object beyond the raising a particular charge, does not authorise a mortgage; but that where it is for raising a particular charge, and the estate itself is settled or devised subject to that charge, there it may be proper to raise the money by mortgage, and the Court will support it as a conditional sale,—as a proper mode of raising the money, and within the power. Now, this case is not without authority upon the general question. The point came before Lord Langdale, M. R. in Haldenby v. Spofforth. There the trustees were to sell and dispose of real estate and such part of the personal estate as should not consist of money; and there was a power to give receipts; and seven years after the death of the testator the trustees mortgaged the property, and it was held that that mortgage could not be sustained. In Raikes v. Hall, Lord Abinger set aside a mortgage which was of this nature. The testator devised his estates upon trust for sale, and at the time of his death he had an account at his bankers', and there was a balance against him on that account of about 5,000*l.*; the executors opened themselves an account with the same bankers, and they incurred a debt after some years which amounted to another 5,000*l.*; they then gave the bankers a mortgage for both sums. The bankers filed a bill as mortgagees to establish their claim and to have a sale; their bill in respect of that claim was dismissed with costs. It was treated as a common creditor's bill, and there was a common decree for sale, and they came in therefore as creditors, but not as mortgagees. Now I think that that was quite right, as there was no power in the trustees there to convert a simple contract debt of the testator to the bankers into a mortgage debt. The trust was to sell and pay, and not to cover simple contract debts with the legal estate so as to convert them into mortgage debts. The debt they had themselves incurred, though it might be in execution of the trusts, was also a simple contract debt. They were not justified in giving to the debt a different character from that in which the debt had been contracted. In Ball v. Harris the testator charged all his just debts and so on to be paid, the result of which was that the words which afterwards followed "as to the rest and residue of his estates" did by implication create a charge of the debts upon his real estates which he had devised to trustees in fee upon trust for certain persons successively; there was then a power of sale and a power to give discharges, and the question was whether those trustees could make a title irrespectively of the question of the debts without the purchaser being bound to see to the application of the purchase-money. They had made a mortgage, and the question was whether that mortgage could be maintained. The Lord Chancellor maintained it, upon the ground that it was not a mere power to sell, but a trust to raise money out of the estate to pay debts by implication. That case, therefore, introduces this distinction—that where there is a general trust without pointing out the mode of raising the charges, or where, by force of the charge itself, there is an implied trust to raise it, and the estate itself is disposed of, subject to obligation or charge there it may be raised by mortgage as well as by sale, because there is no trust to sell out and out for the payment of debts or to apply the money; but where there is a devise of estates upon trust for certain persons, and which are devised as a residue after a direction to pay debts, that would be a charge generally to pay debts, and one which this Court would construe into a general trust to dispose of the estates in a manner best suited to effect the objects of the testator. That case, therefore, introduces a very proper distinction, but it does not disturb the authorities to which I have referred. I am of opinion, therefore that this trust did not authorise a mortgage, and that this equitable claim cannot be maintained. This case was argued before me on another and a distinct line of cases, and no doubt those are the cases to which the learned Vice-Chancellor referred as compelling him to make the decision at which he arrived; but do those cases bear upon this? They were cases in which, there being a charge for debts and no declaration that the trustees' receipts should be discharges, the purchasers or mortgagees were to be absolved from looking to the application of the purchase-money from the circumstance that the legacies only were not charged; that where debts and legacies were charged, the payment of the former being too extensive an obligation, they were not bound to see to the latter. That led to occasional differences of opinion between the late Vice-Chancellor of England and Lord Lyndhurst. Now, Watkins v. Cheek established this rule: if a man is himself the trustee as well as owner of the property, unless it absolutely appear that he is raising the money not for the payment of the obligation with which it is charged, the purchaser or mortgagee is not bound to see to its application; but if he holds the property subject to a charge, and is selling or mortgaging not for that purpose, it should appear it would be the same case as an executor mortgaging at a distant period, or selling under circumstances that would raise a fair presumption that he was selling for his own benefit. In that case, the Vice-Chancellor held, which I think was good law, that if it clearly appear a man is not meaning to execute his trust, but endeavouring to do something for his own personal benefit, which cannot go to the trust, that cannot be deemed a good execution of it, so as to absolve the purchaser from seeing to the application of the money. In Johnson v. Kennett, the testator gave, subject to the payment of his legacies and debts, all his real and personal estate to his son in fee. There is a distinction between cases where an estate is given to trustees for a purpose, and where it is given to a man subject to a charge absolutely. By that gift the son became a trustee for the payment of the legacies and debts, but he did not lose his character of owner—he could not be divested of that—he was owner of the estate, subject to those legacies and debts, and therefore in his dealings he filled the two characters. He settled the estate to uses as if it were his own property, and then raised money by sale of the estate. The question was, whether the sale could be maintained? The Vice-Chancellor thought it could not, on the ground that the man was dealing with the property as his own, and that therefore it could not be supposed it was an execution of the trust for payment of the debts. Lord Lyndhurst reversed that decision, and upon a ground, I think, not altogether satisfactory. His lordship having referred to Lord Lyndhurst's judgment in 3 M. & K. p. 631, said,—the purchasers had a good title, but not upon the ground there stated. The testator had entrusted his son with the ownership of the estate; he had given it to him beneficially, and entrusted him with the obligation or trust to pay debts and legacies—that did not take away his ownership; he was at liberty to settle it to uses to bar dowry for himself as he thought proper, and when he sold he, of course, sold not only as owner, but as trustee: selling therefore as owner was no breach of trust; it was a sale by him in his proper character, but subject in equity to the payment of the debts and legacies. It was not a breach of trust, it enabled him to pay the debts and legacies, and it put him on the same footing as that on which an heir-at-law stands in regard to his liability to debts and expenses; he had power to dispose of the estate by sale, but he was bound, and this Court would compel him, to apply the purchase-money in payment of the debts, and would not allow him to divert it to other purposes. It must not be supposed that he meant to commit a breach of trust. In Page v. Adam there were debts at the time of sale. The property was given, subject to the payment of debts, legacies, and annuities, and the question there raised was, whether the purchaser took subject to an annuity? The Master of the Rolls very properly decided that he did not. The sale was good against the annuity; and it being a general charge, the purchaser was safe, and he did not think it right to follow the decision of the Vice-Chancellor in Johnson v. Kennett. The Vice-Chancellor Shadwell, again, had to decide a similar point in Forbes v. Peacock, in which, after a direction for the payment of debts, an estate was given to the wife for life, subject to their payment, and also to certain legacies. The testator gave her power to sell it in her lifetime, if she thought proper, and declared what was to be done with the money; and provided that if the estate were not sold in her lifetime it was to be sold at her death: she lived twenty-five years after her husband's death, and did not sell the estate; at her death it became saleable, which is a circumstance to be noted. It was not the case of an executor selling at the end of twenty-five years without any reason for doing so, but it was a clear execution of the trust; at that time it became a trust for sale, and was properly held to be in the executor. The Vice-Chancellor, on the case coming before him again, on the authority of Page v. Adam, in which he did not acquiesce, held that, although the legal estate was conveyed, the purchaser from the inquiries which he had to make, was bound to know that there was an outstanding charge, and therefore he did not sustain the purchase. He considered the title was not good. Forbes v. Peacock came in review before Lord Lyndhurst, who reversed the decree, and admitted what I have already stated,—that if a purchaser had notice that the vendor intended to commit a breach of trust, and was selling the estate for that purpose, he would, by purchasing under such circumstances, be concurring in the breach of trust, and thereby become responsible. His lordship having then read a part of Lord Lyndhurst's judgment, and a note by the reporter, said I do not think that Lord Lyndhurst's view is a satisfactory settlement of so important a point, nor can I follow the distinction which he (Lord Lyndhurst) has there pointed out. The case must stand upon one of two grounds,—either it must stand on the ground that it is unimportant that the purchaser should know that there are no debts, and then, upon principle, it would be indifferent whether there were no debts at the death of the testator, or no debts at the time of the purchase, which is the more satisfactory, and open to none of those ambiguities. That, when a testator by his will charges his estates with debts and legacies, he has shewn that he intends to entrust his trustees with the power of receiving the money, because there may be debts. He has anticipated that there will be debts, and he provides for their payment; it is, therefore, by implication a declaration by the testator that he intended to entrust the trustees with the receipt and application of the money, and not to throw the obligation upon the purchaser. The intention does not cease because there are no debts: he has imposed upon them the trust and has given them the power of absolving the purchaser or mortgagee by implication; that remains just as much whether there are debts or not, because the power arises from the circumstance that the debts are provided for. The power does not cease because there are no debts, it being in the very creation of the power a declaration or indication by the testator that he means the trustees alone to receive the money and apply it. In that way all the cases would be reconcilable and stand upon this footing, namely, that if a trust be created for the payment of debts and legacies, the purchaser or mortgagee shall in no case be bound to see to the application of the purchase-money. That would be a consistent rule on which every body would be able to act. It is a sensible rule, and is authorised by the words, and draws none of those fine distinctions which embarrass Courts and lead to so much litigation. That would be a broad and sensible rule, and one to which I shall allude. But those cases do not apply to this. They are cases shewing that at a considerable distance of time a mortgage or sale has been upheld under trusts of this nature; but they do not bear out that proposition; they stand upon distinct grounds. In Johnson v. Kennett there was an actual gift to a person of the property, subject to the trust. In such a case the purchase-money could not be followed in the hands of the purchaser or mortgagee. The other cases depend on the intention of the testator to delegate to the trustees the right of giving receipts. In Forbes v. Peacock it is a mistake to suppose that that was a trust executed at a distance of twenty-five years from the time when it arose—it was executed at the very time it arose, the happening being twenty-five years after the death of the testator. I apprehend, therefore, that those cases which I have endeavoured to reconcile, have no proper bearing upon this case. As regards the general question of distance of time, if people deal with trustees, who at a considerable distance of time raise money without any apparent reason, those advancing it must be considered as under some obligation to inquire, to look fairly at what the trustees are doing. I do not mean to incumber or lessen the security of purchasers or mortgagees under trusts, but those who deal with such trustees may be in the situation of having it established that there was a breach of trust, of which they ought to have taken notice, but this arises only if they deal with the trust. I am endeavouring to lay down a rule to make purchasers and mortgagees, under ordinary circumstances, more secure than perhaps they have hitherto been. There is no authority in favour of the plaintiffs. I cannot maintain the order of the Court below. I must set aside these mortgages and declare them invalid, and to be no charges upon the property. Strictly I ought to dismiss this appeal with costs, but considering the great hardship of the case, I shall not do so.

COURT OF APPEAL IN CHANCERY.

Reported by Owen Davies Tudor, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Friday, July 2.

MILES v. DURNFORD.

A. the surviving executor of B. filed a bill to set aside a mortgage of assets made by C. the deceased executor of B. A. was also the administrator of C.:

Held, that A. might, notwithstanding he filled these two characters, file a bill to set aside the deed of C.

Held, also, that the mortgage made by C. must be considered as primâ facie good, although the money was originally advanced to him without security, and that in the absence of evidence impeaching it, the bill filed for setting it aside ought to be dismissed.

This was an appeal by the plaintiff from the decision of Vice-Chancellor Kindersley, under the following circumstances:—A bill was filed by Miles, who was the surviving executor of the testator, John Punter the elder, to restrain the sale, which was alleged to be improper, of some premises, part of the estate of the testator, which had been mortgaged to the defendant Mrs. Durnford, for 370*l.* by the deceased executor, J. Punter the younger, and to set aside the mortgage altogether, or otherwise to redeem, upon the usual terms. It was alleged by the plaintiff that J. Punter the younger had made the mortgage for his own private debt, and that the mortgagee had actual or constructive notice that such was the fact. J. Punter the younger died in September 1849, and the plaintiff Miles, his co-executor, was also his administrator. The defendant, on a motion by the plaintiff for an injunction, submitted to an order being made against him, as the attempt to sell was made without giving three months' previous notice, according to the provisions contained in the mortgage-deed. It was alleged by the defendant that the mortgage was made to her by J. Punter the younger, as executor, to raise money for executorship purposes; that after advances had been made by the defendant, and before the execution of the mortgage-deed, an equitable mortgage had been made to the defendant, in respect of which she had filed a bill as an equitable mortgagee. In the mortgage-deed there was the following recital:—"That on the application and request of the said J. Punter the son, the said Durnford, at divers times between the months of October 1846, and February 1848, advanced and lent to the said J. Punter the son, several sums of money, amounting together to the sum of 600*l.* and that the sum of 350*l.* part of the said sum of 600*l.* was so advanced and lent to the said J. Punter the son, for the purpose of enabling him, as such executor as aforesaid, to pay off or discharge a certain mortgage debt of 250*l.* and interest, to Henry Smart, charged upon three houses in Earl-street aforesaid, and also to pay certain charges which the said J. Punter the son had incurred as such executor as aforesaid, to the said E. Durnford, in respect of the said sum of 350*l.* and the interest thereon, the sum of 370*l.*" There was a cross bill also by Mr. Durnford, for, amongst other objects, to set up the deed. On the cause coming on to be heard before Vice-Chancellor Kindersley, his Honour held that he could make no decree impeaching the mortgage, and must, so far as the bill sought to impeach that deed, dismiss it with costs, inasmuch as the plaintiff, after proving the will of J. Punter the elder, took out letters of administration to J. Punter the younger, he could not be heard to say that filling two characters, in one of which—namely, as administrator of J. Punter the younger, he could not sue, he had a right to be heard in that character in which, if he filled that only, he might sue. Had it not been for this objection his Honour said that he would have referred it to the Master to inquire whether any and what sums out of the 600*l.* were applied in the administration of the testator's estate, his Honour considering it to be the rule of the Court, that where a party was applied to to advance money on the representation of an executor that it was for the purposes of the estate, and he advanced the money on the mere personal security of the executor, and without taking any security or agreement for security; if he afterwards took a security, the onus of proof was on the person who advanced the money to shew that the moneys advanced were applied to the purposes of the testator's estate. (2 Sim. N.S. 234.)

On the case coming on to be heard on appeal, two points were taken for the appellant. First, that there was no misjoinder, as the bill was properly filed by Miles. Secondly, that although the money was advanced by Mrs. Durnford to Punter the younger, before she obtained the security from him, that circumstance did not throw upon him the onus of shewing that the transaction of Punter the younger, as executor, was a proper one,—that in fact the loan, primâ facie, must be considered as properly obtained for the purposes of the executorship.

Nalder, in the absence of Stuart, who was with him, for the appellant, first insisted that the bill was properly instituted in point of form.

Willcock and Giffard contrà.

Lambert v. Hutchinson, 1 Beav. 277; Griffiths v. Van Heythuysen, 9 Hare, 87, were cited.

Lord Justice Knight Bruce.—The case is this. One of the two executors, by being acting executor, committed, it is alleged, a breach of trust with respect to the general personal estate, and having done so, he died, and the surviving executor of the testator, innocent of participation in the breach of trust, makes himself an administrator of the executor who committed the breach of trust. I am of opinion it is competent for him to file a bill to make good the breach of trust, submitting all in a proper mod to this Court.

Lord Justice Lord Cranworth concurred.

Nalder was then heard on the second point. M'Leod v. Drummond, 14 Ves.; Keane v. Robarts, 4 Madd. 332; Eland v. Eland, 4 My. & Cr. 420; Scott v. Tyler, 2 Dick. 725; Hill v. Simpson, 7 Ves. 152, were referred to.

Willcock and Giffard, on the other side, were not called upon.

Lord Justice Knight Bruce.—On the evidence, the security is not impeached, not touched. Assuming, then, that all the evidence that can be, has been, adduced, the question is, whether this creates such a case of suspicion as that further inquiry should be directed or allowed. I am of opinion that that proposition cannot be warranted. The only evidence is, then, that the advances were originally made without security, and that the security was afterwards added. That is a circumstance deserving of attention, but it does not go a long way, it is not inconsistent with the probability that the advances were made for the purpose for which he might properly borrow as executor. But that being the case, all is clear, and in my opinion, the presumption is in favour of that view of the case, and that the plaintiff wholly fails.

Lord Justice Lord Cranworth.—We both concur with the Vice-Chancellor that the bill ought to be dismissed, but we arrive at that conclusion on different grounds.

July 1 and 2.

MOORHOUSE v. COLVIN.

Contract in letter—Marriage portion—Reference to will.

P. C. who sent his daughter out to India, and upon that occasion wrote to his friend T. there, to whose guardianship and charge he committed her,—" In regard to her settlement in life I shall be naturally anxious. . . . . . You may assure the young gentleman she may choose that, on his marriage with her, he shall have 2,000l. sterling; nor will that be all,—she is and shall be noticed in my will, but to what further amount I cannot say, owing to the present reduced and reducing state of interest, which puts it out of my power to determine at present what I may have to dispose of." Previous to writing this letter P. C. had made a will, in which he left his daughter a lac of rupees, or about 12,000l. M. made proposals of marriage, and was informed by T. of the letter written by P. C. and, as it was alleged, by Miss C. of the will then existing in her favour. The marriage took place in 1826, and in 1829 M. and [illegible] wife returned to England. P. C. [illegible] afterwards made another will, in which [illegible] he gave all his real and personal property [illegible] for the benefit of his wife, and his two sons [illegible] by her, and in case of their dying without [illegible] issue, he gave the whole to the issue of his [illegible] daughter. Upon a bill being filed by the daughter [illegible] insisting that the testator had agreed to [illegible] settle a lac of rupees upon her, and that [illegible] contract was contained in the letter written by him:

Held, affirming the decision of the Court below, that P. C. had only contracted to give his daughter 2,000l. which had been already paid to her, and that as there was no contract in the letter to leave her in addition any specific or definite sum, the bill must be dismissed, but, under the circumstances, without costs, and the deposit was returned.

This was an appeal from the decision of his Honour, the Master of the Rolls, dismissing the plaintiff's bill, but without costs.

The facts of the case are stated in the judgment, and are fully reported in 18 Law T. Rep. 296.

Bethell and Toller, for the appellant, cited Luders v. Anstey, 4 Ves. 501; 5 Ves. 213; Randall v. Morgan, 12 Ves. 67; Hammersley v. De Biel, 12 C. & F. 45; affirming 3 Beav. 469; nom. De Biel v. Thomson.

Sir W. Page Wood, Willcock, Anderson, G. W. Collins, Giffard, and W. Morris, for the respondents, or parties in the same interest, were not calle upon.

Lord Justice Lord Cranworth.—This is a bill filed for the purpose of establishing the right of Mr. and Mrs. Moorhouse to a lac of rupees, that is to say, a sum of not less than 12,000l. out of the estate of the late Dr. Peter Cochrane; and the foundation of this claim was a letter written by Dr. Cochrane on the 6th July, 1825, to a gentleman of the name of Dr. Thomas, in India, on the occasion of Mrs. Moorhouse, then Miss Cochrane, going out to that country with a view to establishing herself for life. The lady being then of the age of nineteen, Dr. Cochrane sent her to India, and simultaneously wrote a letter to Dr. Thomas. By it he bound himself to give her on marriage 2,000l. in the following terms:—" You may assure the young gentleman who may meet with your and Mrs. Thomas's approbation, that on his marriage with her he shall have 2,000l. sterling;" and then he adds, " nor will that be all, she is and shall be noticed in my will, but to what further amount I cannot say, owing to the present reduced and reducing state of interest, which puts it out of my power to determine at present what I may have to dispose of. I hope, however, that he will have no objection to admit of the 2,000l. and whatsoever else may follow, being settled on herself and children. Should she die before him without issue, he shall have the 2,000l. to himself." Now the real question is, what is the correct interpretation to be put on that letter? I will assume that the letter was shewn to Mr. Moorhouse previous to his marriage with Miss Cochrane, and on that assumption even I still concur with the judgment of the Master of the Rolls. It in effect means this, " I leave you, Dr. Thomas, in charge of my daughter. I wish her to marry, and you have my authority to say she shall have 2,000l. with a provision that it shall be settled; but I further add, I have made a will, and have made a further provision, but to what amount I cannot and will not say; as to the amount of 2,000l. I bind myself to pay it, but no more than the 2,000l." Dr. Cochrane then having paid the 2,000l. she has no further claim upon his estate. But then it is contended that by his writing to Dr. Thomas, " she is and shall be noticed in my will," he had at any rate bound himself not to reduce the provision made for her by will below a lac of rupees, or 12,000l. to which she was then entitled under a then existing will; but that is not so. The testator in effect says, " I have or shall make a will, but I reserve to myself full power either of increasing or reducing by it the provision for my daughter." It is a case of great hardship for Mr. and Mrs. Moorhouse, who were doubtless led to expect a large fortune, but we must not allow any private feelings to make us swerve from our duty. The contract is to give 2,000l. and nothing more, unless it be something which is left entirely to his discretion by will, but he has given nothing. The party might perhaps have a right to an action, in which merely nominal damages could be obtained, but that the Court would disregard. The authorities the counsel for the plaintiff relied on were the case before the House of Lords, Hammersley v. De Biel, 12 C. & F. 45, and Luders v. Anstey, 4 Ves. 501; 5 Ves. 213; but both cases are distinguishable materially from the present. The question in each of those cases was whether the expressions made use of amounted to a contract between the parties, and Lord Loughborough, in the one case, and the House of Lords in the other, held that they did. Whether on the question in Luders v. Anstey all minds would have arrived at the same conclusion, it matters not, because there was no difficulty, assuming that there was a contract in that case, in knowing what was to be done; but in this case the difficulty is, even if there had been an express contract, that the Court cannot tell what sum is to be given. The authorities fail, therefore, in supporting the case of the plaintiff. On the whole, my opinion is, that this amounts to a contract to do a deed which has been done,—that he would give her 2,000l. The Master of the Rolls has acted correctly in dismissing the bill.

Toller asked for a reference as to whether Mr. Moorhouse had the contents of the will communicated to him previous to his marriage, and whether Dr. Cochrane was aware that such communication had been made to him.

Lord Justice Knight Bruce.—I am most clearly of opinion that there was no contract beyond the 2,000l.; the only question which could possibly arise would be whether, notwithstanding our opinion on that subject, a case should be directed on the question of contract to a Court of Law,—first, on facts as they stand proved; and, secondly, with the addition of the facts which it is suggested can be proved. I do not think a case would do the plaintiff any good; but I should not have disagreed as to sending a case to law, if my learned brother thought that it ought to be sent. I am not strongly impressed that a case should be sent, but if Lord Cranworth thinks it should, I shall not dissent.

Lord Justice Lord Cranworth.—I do not think a case should be sent.

Lord Justice Knight Bruce.—We both think it right to dismiss the appeal; but it must be dismissed without costs, and the deposit must be returned.

VICE-CHANCELLOR TURNER'S COURT.

Reported by J. Henry Cooke, Esq. Barrister-at-Law.

April 22 and 23, and Aug. 6.

Copyholds—Infancy—Deputy steward—Acknowledgment.

A conditional surrender was made of copyhold property of inheritance belonging to a married woman by that lady and her husband, and she was examined by the deputy steward who took her acknowledgment, and it turned out that the deputy steward was an infant of twenty years of age and upwards:

Held, the officer being ministerial only, and not judicial, that the surrender was good.

This was a suit for foreclosure. The defence raised questions of fraud, but they are immaterial to be stated, the chief point argued being the validity of the conditional surrender of the copyhold estate on the ground that the acknowledgment of a married lady, to whom the property belonged, was taken by a deputy steward who was an infant.

The short facts were as follow, so far as it is needful to state them:—Property held of the manor of Lyses descended upon a lady, then single, and her heirs in fee-simple, according to the custom of that manor. She afterwards married Mr. Collins, who, with his wife, in 1844, conditionally surrendered out of court the estate to Mr. Adcock for securing 50l. and interest. On this occasion the wife was separately examined and her acknowledgment taken in regular form. The 50l. were not paid, and further sums were advanced, which, together with the original money, amounted to 100l.; and in December, 1846, Mr. and Mrs. Collins made a surrender of the equity of redemption to such uses, and charged with such sums of money for the benefit of Mr. Collins as Mr. Adcock should, by the direction of Mr. Collins, appoint, and in default of, or until, appointment to the use of Mr. Adcock, his heirs and assigns, according to the custom of the manor subject to the surrender of 1844, and to a proviso that the surrender should be void on payment by Mr. Collins, his heirs, executors, or administrators, of the 100l. and interest. This surrender of 1846 was taken by a Mr. Bell, the deputy steward of the manor, and who also took the acknowledgment of Mr. Collins, and it turned out that he was then under the age of twenty-one years, he having been born in Feb. 1826, and the transaction having taken place in Dec. 1846. The surrender was duly presented by the homage and entered on the court-rolls in April 1847. By subsequent instruments the estate was further charged to the extent of nearly 550l. and ultimately, by deed, dated 10th March, 1849, the securities were assigned to the plaintiff, Mr. Edlestone, who then advanced a fourth sum, and the charge was increased to altogether 600l. In August following Mr. Collins died intestate, leaving the infants, who were the defendants in the suit, his coheirs according to the custom of the manor, and subsequently the widow married the plaintiff, Mr. Edlestone.

The arguments in support of the validity of the surrender were that any act done by a steward or by his deputy de facto is good, and for this Coke's Copyholder, 101, and Scriven on Copyholds, 111, and the case of Hippisley v. Tucke, were cited. Admitting that in Co. Litt. b 3, and the note thereupon by Mr. Hargrave, shewed a different conclusion, it was to be remarked that the doctrine was dissented from and expressly overruled in late cases. In the case of Scambler v. Waters, Cro. Eliz. 637, it is said an infant cannot be judge in a court; as, for instance, steward of a court leet, and the reason given is such a steward is a judge. In Cro. Car. 279 and 256, are to be found cases equally in support of the validity of the surrender. If this were held void the effect might be a loss of his office by the steward, since his appointment of an improper person works a forfeiture.

The cases of Zouch v. Parsons, 3 Burr. 1794; Burrow v. Parrot, 1 Mod. 246; and Crosby v. Hurley, 1 Alcock & Napier, 431, were cited and observed upon.

In opposition to the validity of the examination, acknowledgment, and surrender of 1846, it was contended that care and discretion were necessary in the performance of the duties of a deputy steward, and therefore such an office could not be intrusted to an infant, for if it could be trusted to an infant of twenty why not to one of ten years old? From Co. Litt. 3 b, it was clear an infant could not be steward, and the authority of Co. Litt. was, to say the least of it, as great as that of the cases cited as overruling it. Although this Court takes consents of married women, in some cases by deputy, it always takes care that such consents are taken by adult persons. No argument could be raised on the presentation of the surrender by the homage, for that could be considered as nothing more than a report by the homage to the lord of what the steward had done.

Sir W. P. Wood and R. Smythe, supported the validity of the surrender.

Glasse and Beale opposed it.

Sir W. P. Wood was heard in reply, and the judgment was then reserved.

Friday, Aug. 6.—The Vice-Chancellor.—The only question which required any consideration or was raised in this cause, was, whether a surrender of copyholds by a married woman, taken by a deputy steward under twenty-one years of age at the time, was void, by reason of the non-age of the person taking the surrender. The surrender impeached in the present case was a surrender by baron and feme, the feme being privately examined as to her consent by the deputy steward, who was at the time upwards of twenty years of age, and had for more than five years been clerk to a solicitor. Several cases and authorities have been quoted and examined at the bar, and I have taken an opportunity of going into them again, and I am of opinion that the surrender in question is not void. The argument that it was void went chiefly on Scambler's case, in which it appears to have been ruled by the justices, Popham and Fenner, that an infant could not be a steward nor an under-steward; the case being solely as to the capacity of an infant to be an under-steward. And the authority of Co. Litt. 3 b, was also relied on to the same effect; but these authorities were denied and overruled in the cases of Young v. Stoell, and Young v. Fowler, in Cro. Car. In the former of these cases, it was held by all the judges present, that the grant of the office of registrar to a bishop, was good, notwithstanding the infancy of the grantee at the time of the grant. "That the grant was not void because he was at that time an infant, or because he cannot make a deputy; for an infant who can write and understand the Latin tongue, may be a registrar, and may have sufficient knowledge to write and register Acts, which is sufficient for his place; at leastwise he may have sufficient knowledge to make an able deputy, and if he put in one who is insufficient, it is a cause of the forfeiture of his office." And in Young v. Fowler, Ib. 557, it is stated, and as to this point, it was held by all the judges that this grant of an office to an infant of the age of eleven years, "exercendum per se vel sufficientem deputatum," as the usual grants are, is good notwithstanding the infancy, and "the opinion cited in Co. Litt. 3, and there stated to have been resolved in Scambler v. Waters, (viz.) that the grant of an under-stewardship in possession or reversion to an infant is void. But this case was denied, unless it be with this difference, where it is granted with such a clause to execute it per se vel deputatum; for an infant may elect a sufficient deputy, and if he do not elect such, it is a forfeiture of his office. And a deputy is allowed, especially in ministerial offices, and to be approved of by the judges of that Court. And as an infant may present to a church, because the ordinary gives the allowance, whether the clerk be sufficient, or the lord of the manor, or judge of the Court is to give allowance of the deputy's sufficiency. And as an infant may well have an office descend upon him by inheritance, so he may as well have it by grant;" and so in Coke's Copyholder, p. 45, it is said that an infant may be steward, for what he performs is incident to his place, and therefore his official acts shall not be avoidable by reason of this disability. But then it was said, that if an infant might be steward at all, it was only when the office was granted with a clause that it was to be exercised "per se vel deputatum," and that then he could exercise it per deputatum; and this argument was supported by the same book, s. 46, in which it was said that a steward could not, without special words in his patent, make a deputy unless in case of necessity; e. g. as where the office descended upon an infant; then, without any special words in the original grant, he might appoint a deputy, for the law presumed him to be incapable of executing all the duties of his office himself. But the second passage from the copyholder is not inconsistent with its being shewn that the deputy steward was of capacity to exercise his duties in person; and I think this is the true meaning of the passage in "Copyholder," viz. "that without special words in his patent, a steward cannot appoint a deputy unless in case of necessity, as e. g. where the office descends upon an infant of such tender years as to be unable to perform the duties in person;" and this is confirmed by what I have just read from Croke's report of the case of Young v. Stoell, where it is said that "an infant registrar may know how to write and understand Latin, which may be sufficient learning for his office." Many other cases and analogies support this view. In particular, I may remark, that an infant may be appointed an executor, and afterwards have all the powers incident to that office; and formerly he might, at seventeen, have exercised almost all the powers of an ordinary executor. Eyle's case, 1 Ventr. 153, was referred to, to prove that the office of steward was a judicial office. But this office of taking the separate examination of married women is, at any rate, not judicial, for, in the first place, such an office cannot be delegated; while in practice this office is constantly delegated, and the Court acts on the report of the commissioners entrusted with that authority without ever inquiring whether or not any of the commissioners might chance to be an infant. The surrender has been duly entered in the court rolls, and though it might have been impeached by a cross bill upon a proper case being made out, yet in this suit, on the state of the pleadings, and on the circumstances now shewn, I do not think I can accede to this request to treat the surrender as a nullity. There will be the usual decree in a mortgage suit as if this point had not been raised.

VICE-CHANCELLOR KINDERSLEY'S COURT.

Reported by W. H. Bennet, Esq. of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law.

Friday, April 23.

In the matter of Prescott's Trust.

Trustee Act, 1850—Practice.

Where a tenant for life petitions under the above Act for a vesting order, the cestui que trusts interested in the fund should be before the Court.

This was a petition by a tenant for life of a fund, to have a vesting order under the Trustee Act, 1850.

Martindale in support of the petition.

The Vice-Chancellor, however, declined to make any order unless the cestui que trusts of the fund in remainder, who were infants, were made parties as co-petitioners, or should appear by counsel in the usual way. He said that the Act only provided a summary remedy, instead of the proceeding by bill, but that all parties beneficially interested must be before the Court, as if the remedy had still been by bill.

Monday, June 28.

Coles v. Waters.

Interest on bond—Specialty creditor.

A deed of composition recited the debts as simply debts, without stating whether simple contract debts or by specialty, rating them in proportion to the amount of debts owing to the creditors respectively:

Held, that thereby the simple contract debts were not turned into specialty debts carrying interest:

Held, also, that those creditors whose debts were secured by bond could not receive more for principal and interest than the amount of the penalty in which the bond was taken.

These questions came before the Court, by way of exceptions to the Master's report, computing and allowing interest at five per cent. on the amounts of the several debts proved before him in the usual way. He had also found, that certain bond creditors were entitled to amounts of principal and interest exceeding in amount, the penalties in which those bonds had been taken.

The facts of the case appeared to be as follows:—Mr. Edmund Waters being indebted, in the year 1823, to several creditors in very large amounts, made a composition with these creditors, and which was effectuated in the following manner. By an indenture of assignment dated in March 1823, the Opera House, in the Haymarket, with the appurtenances, were assigned to the late Alderman Winchester, upon trust for sale of the interest which Waters had therein, which comprised the residue of a term in a renewable lease of those premises, with the scenery, furniture, &c. thereto belonging. The deed also assigned all sums of money, stocks, funds, and securities payable, or thereafter to be payable to said E. Waters, his executors, administrators, or assigns, by virtue of any decree of the Court of Chancery, in any suit or suits then pending, or thereafter to be instituted respecting the Opera House or its concerns. By another indenture of the same date, Waters assigned to Winchester all the leasehold hereditaments to which he, Waters, was entitled, and all sums of money due to him on account of the rents and profits thereof, and certain other credits and claims. By an indenture of trust bearing date the same day, and made between Waters of the first part, Winchester of the second part, and the several persons creditors of Waters, who by themselves, their agents, or attorneys, should subscribe their names and affix their seals thereto, of the third part. It was witnessed that Winchester should stand possessed of the moneys to arise by the sale of the leaseholds and other saleable property and effects, and which should be collected and received on account of the sums of money, stocks, funds, and securities assigned by the above stated indentures, and also of the rents, issues, and profits of the leaseholds, sums of money, stocks, funds, and securities, in the mean time, and until the same should be respectively sold, collected, and received, "upon trust that the said Henry Winchester, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, do and shall, in the first place, deduct, retain, and reimburse himself and themselves, all usual outgoings for rents, taxes, and repairs, and all such costs, charges, and expenses as they respectively should sustain, expend, or be put unto in the execution of the trusts by the said indentures of assignment of equal date with these presents, and also by these presents reposed in him or them; and in obtaining the consent to and execution of these presents, and otherwise incident to the trusts reposed in him or them, and also all the expenses incurred, or which should be incurred preparatory to the execution of these presents or in relation to the same, and all the expenses incident to the sale and disposal of the said property and effects, or to the collecting in or recovering and receiving of the said sums of money, stocks, funds, and securities, and in or about the execution of the several trusts by these presents, and the said indentures of equal date herewith reposed in him or them, or otherwise relating thereto; and after payment and satisfaction of the same, costs, charges, disbursements, and expenses, upon trust that he, the said Henry Winchester, his executors, administrators, or assigns, do and shall apply all the money which shall be received under or by virtue of the said indentures of equal date with these presents, and which shall remain after answering the purposes aforesaid, or a competent part thereof, in payment of the debts owing by the said Edmund Waters, to such of his creditors respectively as have executed or shall execute these presents, or to their representatives, executors, administrators, or assigns, rateably and in proportion to the amount of debts owing to them respectively, without any priority or preference of any one or more of them before any other or others of them, until each of the same creditors respectively, his or her executors, administrators, or assigns, shall have received the full amount of the debts owing to him, her, or them respectively, and to and shall pay the surplus, if any, to said Waters, his executors, administrators, or assigns." In this last-mentioned indenture was contained a provision that any creditor who had any security by way of mortgage might execute the indenture without prejudice to the same security, and, with the consent of the trustee or trustees for the time being, might convert his security into money, and receive a dividend rateably with the other creditors on so much of his debt as should not be paid out of the produce of the said securities; and that the said trustee or trustees for the time being should or might make any arrangements he or they might deem reasonable, with any person who at that time or thereafter should hold any security or securities given by the said Edmund Waters upon all or any part of the property and effects assigned by the said indentures, with the view or for the purpose of procuring all or any part of the property comprised in such security or securities to be exonerated or released of and from the security so given by him the said E. Waters, so as the trustee or trustees for the time being should not pay or give any consideration or price for or upon any such arrangements, beyond the amount or value of the principal money and interest then due to the persons respectively holding such securities respectively, and the incidental expenses attending such arrangements and release. And the said several persons of the third part did give and grant unto said Waters, until the trustee or trustees for the time being should declare this license to be determined, full and free liberty to go about and attend to any business without arrest, attachment, or other impediment to be offered or done unto or against the said E. Waters, or his future or other property or effects, by the said several persons, parties to the said indenture, of the third part, or any of them.

To this indenture was appended the list of creditors, with the amounts of principal and interest supposed to be due to them in the usual way. A reference to the Master had been made to take an account of the sums due to the creditors of Waters, who had executed this deed of arrangement and compromise, to compute interest on such of the debts as carried interest after the rate of the interest the same respectively, carried under the provisions of such indenture. Under this reference the Master had made his report, dated the 7th day of July, 1851, and finding, as before stated, the amount of the debts proved before him, and computing interest on all at five per cent. and to some of the bond creditors he found due more than the penal sums in those bonds stated. To this report exceptions had been taken.

Willcock and Wickens, in support of the exceptions, contended that the Master had clearly miscarried in allowing any interest at all upon the simple contract debts; and also in finding due to some of the creditors more than the penal sum in which the several bonds had been taken. They cited, among other cases, Hughes v. Wynne, 1 Myl. & Keen, 20; Tait v. Northwick, 4 Ves. 816; Sharpe v. Scarborough, 3 Ves. 557; Tew v. Lord Winterton, 3 Bro. 489.

Malins and Briggs supported the Master's finding, and contended that all the debts which had been subscribed to the deed of composition became thereby specialty debts, and as such carried interest from the date of that deed. That it was inequitable that as the estate of Waters realised by the trustees had or might have made interest in the mean time, and the fund by its accumulations being amply sufficient to pay the amounts found due by the Master, that those creditors should not be paid what the Master had found due to them. Although they admitted interest at law might not be recoverable, yet it might be in a Court of Equity in such a state of circumstances as the present. That it had been admitted at the bar, that interest on all the debts had been computed up to the date of the deed—and why was the interest then to cease?

They cited—Craven v. Tickell, 1 Ves. jun. 63; Hyde v. Price, 1 C. P. Cooper's Rep. 193; Brown v. Newall, 2 My. & Cr. 558.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR said, the first question raised by these exceptions was, whether a creditor in respect of a debt not carrying interest was nevertheless entitled to interest under the terms of the deed of compromise? The second was, whether a creditor by bond could receive more than the penalty expressed in that bond? No reference is contained in this deed, or in any part of it, to the question, whether any of the debts are specialty or simple contract debts? It speaks of debts due without any reference to the nature of those debts. If, then, all the debts had been simple contract debts not carrying interest, what is there to indicate any intention that these debts, which are to be paid out of this property, are to cease to be simple contract debts, and forthwith to become specialty debts? or what was there to indicate that any one of these creditors was to receive interest by virtue of the deed, which he would not otherwise have been entitled to receive? If the deed, an instrument under seal, had contained a covenant in the part of Waters, or an agreement for payment, then they might have been considered as specialty debts, being secured under seal. But it is far from that; the intention of the deed was, that he being liable to pay the debts, but not being able to pay them, makes provision for payment of them, not by stipulating that he himself would pay them, but placing all his property in the hands of a trustee to pay those debts, did so that they should be paid in the manner he himself would have been bound by law to pay them. Some provisions of the deed had been pointedly referred to during the argument. For instance, the provisions in the deed by which there is a direction as to those creditors who held securities for their debts upon certain property of Waters's; and the stipulation was, that any creditor in that position might, when his security had been realised, come in for the balance pari passu with the other creditors, and that the trustee might pay any such creditor holding security for the benefit of the creditors at large, and they stipulate that not more shall be paid to them than their principal and interest. That does not, as he, the Vice-Chancellor, thought, vary the state of circumstances, nor affect the question whether the deed made all debts bear interest alike. Can this deed create a right to interest which he, the creditor, would not otherwise have had? He thought not. Nor could he see that any instrument of this kind, making provision for payment of debts, could be taken to vary the nature in the slightest degree of the debts, for which provision is so made. Now it has been said that the creditors give consideration, as they agree not to sue, except so far as the trustees may give them a right to sue. If they contend that by reason of this the debts were for the future to bear interest, surely it would require a special stipulation to that effect in the deed—they would have asserted such intention by the deed; nor could he, the Vice-Chancellor, understand why, in the absence of any such stipulation, the deed was to have that effect. Now, with reference to the schedule, that of course contains a statement of certain gross amounts; but neither the deed nor the schedule shews that these were the sums actually due. The deed itself provides for the payment in this way; the proceeds are to be applied in payment of the debts due by Waters, to such of his creditors as shall execute the deed, not in payment of the debts mentioned in the schedule. When we look at the deed we find the sums set opposite to the respective creditor's names in the schedule, but no heading to shew that those are the sums due or claimed. If a creditor was there put down with 500*l.* opposite his name, and could prove a debt of 1,000*l.* he would be entitled to this 1,000*l.* so on the contrary, if put down at 1,000*l.* if only 500*l.* should be due, there would have been no obligation in the trustee to pay the 1,000*l.* Now it is alleged that the amounts set down in the schedule include interest; but how a blunder in the calculation of previous interest upon debts, which did not in fact carry interest, can alter the construction of the deed, he (the Vice-Chancellor) could not conceive. The argument would go to shew that simple contract creditors were entitled to interest prior to the date of the deed. It is merely a question of what the contract was between these parties. No doubt, if he (the Vice-Chancellor) could find an implied contract that the debts were to carry interest, he would give effect to it; but so far as omission is a ground of implication, it is only an implication to the contrary. Then as to the clause by which it is stipulated that the debts are to be paid without priority or preference, and that if you paid one creditor interest and another none, you would give a preference. Now that is not so, for he was already entitled to interest, and the other was not; and what was meant by this clause was, that one creditor, because he was a specialty or a judgment creditor, should not be paid in priority, but all should stand pari passu, as this Court is in the habit of dealing with a case of equitable assets. There is no contract to pay interest. As to the second question, whether a creditor by bond can receive more than the penalty mentioned in his bond, I think that clearly settled that he cannot. Hughes v. Wynne is a distinct decision on this very point. The Court then decided that a creditor could not, on a trust deed, receive more than the amount of his bond, as he clearly could not have recovered more at law.

Exceptions on both points allowed.

Nov. 1851.

BOURNE v. BUCKTON.

Accumulations—Thellusson Act, 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 98—Portions.

The testator devised his freehold estates to trustees in trust, to accumulate the rents during the life of his niece, and on her decease to stand seised of the estates to the use of her first and other sons in tail.

Held, that the trust for accumulation became void at the end of twenty-one years from the testator's death; that the void accumulations were undisposed of, and therefore that, as regarded the residuary personal estate of the testator, the accumulations thereof, from the period of twenty-one years after the testator's death, belonged to the personal representative of the sole next of kin of the testator at the time of his death.

The testator, in the clauses for the maintenance and advancement of the children of his niece, termed the provision which he had made for them sometimes "their portions," and sometimes "their portions or shares:"

Held, that such provision was not one within the meaning of the 2nd section of the Thellusson Act, and did not prevent the operation of the 1st section of that Act.

This was a petition to have it declared that a large sum of money standing to the credit of several causes, and which formed the corpus of the general residuary personal estate of the testator, William Stains, accrued since the 24th September, 1848, being twenty-one years after the death of the testator, might be paid to the petitioners (husband and wife), as representing the sole next of kin of the testator at the time of his death. William Stains, by his will dated the 16th November, 1824, devised estates in the county of Kent, which he described at length, and all his other real estates not thereinafter well and effectually given and devised by him to the plaintiffs in the first suit and their heirs in trust during the life of his neice, Elizabeth Stains, to make certain payments out of the rents (particularly mentioned), and to lay out the residue of the rents, or any part or parts thereof, in the purchase of freehold estates in the same county, and to settle, convey, and assure the estates so to be purchased to the same uses, &c. as were declared by his will concerning the estates thereinbefore devised, and in trust (at the discretion of said plaintiffs) as to such part or parts of the said residue as should not be laid out in such purchase or purchases as aforesaid, and also until such purchase or purchases should be made as aforesaid, as to the whole of the said residue, to lay out the same in the securities therein mentioned, and to change such securities from time to time at their discretion, either by making such purchase or purchases as aforesaid, or into other securities of the like nature, and to invest the interest and dividends of such securities in manner aforesaid, so that the same and all the remitting income and produce thereof might accumulate in the nature of compound interest; and immediately after the death of his niece, to stand possessed of all the securities so directed to be purchased and accumulated upon the trusts thereinafter declared concerning his residuary personal estate, of which the same was to be deemed a part; and after the death of his niece to stand seised of all the estates thereinbefore devised to the use of her first and other sons in tail male; with remainder to the use of the defendant Edwin Stains for life, with remainder to the use of his first and other sons in tail male; with remainder to the use of all the children of John Palmer, as tenants in common in tail, with remainder to the testator's right heirs. And the testator gave all his stock, funds, moneys, mortgages, ready money, and securities for money, and also the securities thereinbefore directed to be purchased and accumulated, and all the residue of his personal estate, to defendants Buckton and Bourne (the executors), in trust, to sell such parts thereof as should not consist of stocks, funds, moneys, mortgages, and securities for money, and to get in such parts thereof as should consist of moneys or securities for money, and at their discretion to lay out the moneys to arise by such sale or sales, and to be got in as aforesaid, or any part or parts thereof, in the purchase of freehold estates in Kent, which he directed to be conveyed to the same uses and upon the same trusts as were thereinafter declared concerning such part or parts of his said net moneys as should not be laid out by his trustees in such purchase or purchases as aforesaid; and in trust at their discretion as to such part of the said net residue as should not be laid out in such purchase or purchases as aforesaid, and also until such purchase or purchases should be made as aforesaid as to the whole of the said net moneys, to lay out the same in the securities therein mentioned, and to receive the dividends and interest of such securities, and again lay out the same in manner aforesaid, so that the same and all the resulting income and produce thereof might accumulate in the way of compound interest during the life of his niece, and after her decease in trust to transfer the securities and accumulations to her child, if only one, and if more than one, to her children, exclusive of an elder or only son (such only son not being an only child), equally as tenants in common, and to be vested in the male children at twenty-one, and in the females at that age or on their marriage. And the testator declared that if any of the male children should attain twenty-one, or any of the female children should attain that age or marry, and should die before their mother and leave issue, such issue should stand in the place of and take the share of he securities which their parent would have been entitled to if living; and should take the same in equal shares, and that the shares should vest in the male issue at twenty-one, and in the female at that age or on their marriage. And the testator further declared, that in case any of the younger children of his niece should die before her without leaving issue, who should be living, and have acquired a vested interest at her death, the trustees should transfer the shares of the children who should so die as last aforesaid to the survivors or others of the same children (but exclusive of an eldest or only son, unless he should be an only surviving child), and the issue of such of the same children as should be then dead leaving issue, such issue taking only the shares which their parents would have been entitled to if living, and taking the same in equal shares, and that the same should be vested interests in the male issue at twenty-one, or in the female at that age or on their marriage.

The testator then empowered Buckton and Bourne, after the death of his niece, to apply any part of the income arising from the portion of any of her children and issue, of and in the said trust securities, for the maintenance of such child or issue during his or her minority, and also to apply not exceeding one-half of the then vested or expectant share of any such child or issue, of and in the said trust securities, for his or her advancement in the world; and he directed that the sum which should be advanced for each such child or issue, should be considered as part of his or her portion or share, and should be deducted and allowed out of the same, notwithstanding his or her death before his or her portion should be absolutely vested; and that so much of the income arising from the portion or share of each such child or issue as should not be applied for the maintenance or advancement of the child or issue to whom the same portion or share should belong, should be added from time to time to the principal of the same portion or share, and be improved at interest together with the same, and be subject to all the limitations, trusts, and depositions thereinbefore and thereinafter expressed concerning the principal of the same portion or share, until the principal should become payable.

The testator then directed that, on failure of the before-mentioned trusts, Buckton and Bourne should stand possessed of the trust securities, upon like trusts, for the benefit of the children and issue of Edwin Stains, and of the children and issue of Henry Palmer successively; and, on those trusts also failing, in trust for his own next of kin according to the statutes of distribution; and he appointed Buckton and Bourne his executors.

The testator died in 1827. His brother, James Stains, was his heir both at law and in gavelkind, and also his sole next of kin. James Stains died in 1828, intestate as to any real estate which descended to him from the testator. Buckton was his executor, as well as one of the executors of the testator. Elizabeth Stains was the only child and heir, both at law and in gavelkind, of James Stains; and, on his death, she became such heir to the testator.

A petition had been presented in December 1848 by the heiress-at-law of the testator, to have it declared that she had become entitled, as such heiress-at-law, to the rents and profits of the devised and purchased estates of the testator, as from the 24th of September, 1848, being twenty-one years after his death, and to have the subsequent rents, and for a receiver. An order was made as to these rents by the late Vice-Chancellor of England, in January 1849, declared the trusts for the accumulation, as to the rents and profits and the real estate, void. A similar question now arose on the present petition, as to the accumulated residuary personal estate of the testator, which had accumulated in the hands of the Accountant-General to a considerable amount.

The petitioners were the husband of the legal personal representative of the sole next of kin of the testator living at his death, and his wife, being such representative.

Rolt and Fooks, for the petitioners, contended that testator's accumulated personal residuary estate, from the 24th of September, 1848, being twenty-one years after the death of the testator, was undisposed of by this will, and that it belonged after that time to the testator's next of kin. They relied on the 39 & 10 Geo. 3, c. 98 (a).

Stuart and Jessel, for the defendants, Halford and others.

Bethell and Goodeve, for the defendant Elizabeth Stains, and others.

JUDGMENT.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR, after reading the trusts of the will and the several limitations, said the question as to the devised estates has already been decided by the late Vice-Chancellor of England, in which decision he entirely concurred, although probably not for the same reasons as given in the judgment as reported. The question is now limited to the accumulated residuary personal estate; and he was of opinion that, from the period mentioned in the petition being twenty-one years after the death of the testator, it belonged to his next of kin, or those who now represented the sole next of kin. With regard to the second question, whether the word portion, used as it was by the testator, and which was the word used by the Legislature in the second section of the Thellusson Act, would take the will out of the general operation of the first section of that Act, he was of opinion that it did not. The meaning of the Legislature was not trusts created by another instrument, but by the very instrument creating the portions. That here there was one gift of an aggregate fund, and therefore not a portion within the meaning of the Act. He considered Eyre v. Marsden, 2 Keen, 561, had decided the question, and that the principle involved in that case and the present was the same. He was also of opinion that the word "devise" could not include the whole will, although it might include a gift of personal as well as real estate. After referring to the elaborate judgment of Mr. Justice Bosanquet, sitting as one of the Commissioners of the Great Seal, in Shaw v. Rhodes, 1 Myl. & Cr. 135, he made the order in the terms prayed by the petition, stating at the same time that there was no objection to a declaration on a petition of this kind.

The costs out of that portion of the testator's estate declared to be undisposed of.

(a) The following are the sections upon which the question turned:—

Sec. 1 enacts "That no person or persons shall, after the passing of this Act, by any deed or deeds, surrender or surrenders, will, codicil, or otherwise howsoever, settle or dispose of any real or personal property so and in such manner that the rents, issues, profits, or produce thereof shall be wholly or partially accumulated for any longer term than the life or lives of any such grantor, or grantor's settlor or settlors, or the term of twenty-one years from the death of any such grantor, settlor, devisor, or testator, or during the minority or respective minorities of any person or persons who shall be living or in ventre sa mère at the time of the death of such grantor, devisor, or testator, or during the minority or respective minorities only of any person or persons who, under the uses or trusts of the deed, surrender, will, or other assurance directing such accumulations, would, for the time being, if of full age, be entitled unto the rents, issues, and profits, or the interest, dividends, or annual produce so directed to be accumulated; and in every case where any accumulation shall be directed otherwise than as aforesaid, such direction shall be null and void, and the rents, issues, profits, and produce of such property so directed to be accumulated shall, so long as the same shall be directed to be accumulated contrary to the provisions of this Act, go to and be received by such person or persons as would have been entitled thereto if such accumulation had not been directed."

Sec. 2. "Provided always and be it enacted that nothing in this Act contained shall extend to any provision for payment of debts of any grantor, settlor, or devisor, or other person or persons, or to any provision for raising portions for any child or children of any grantor, settlor, or devisor, or any child or children of any person taking any interest under such conveyance, settlement, or devise, or to any direction touching the produce of timber or wood upon lands or tenements; but that all such provisions and directions shall and may be made and given as if this Act had not passed."

BANKRUPTCY.

BRISTOL BANKRUPTCY COURT.

Thursday, Aug. 19.

(Before Mr. Commissioner HILL.)

POWELL v. HAYES.

Absconding debtor—Ground for motion.

Where a debtor states it to be his intention to leave a place in England, where he then is, on a particular day for Ireland and foreign parts, and to reside abroad; upon proof of this, by affidavit of the creditor, the Court will grant a warrant under the Act for the immediate arrest of the debtor, and this although the permanent residence of the debtor appears to have been in Ireland.

This was an application under the recent Act, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52, to Facilitate the more Speedy Arrest of Absconding Debtors, for a warrant for the immediate arrest of a debtor, who contemplated leaving, and had threatened to depart the kingdom, to avoid the creditor when applied to for payment of the debt, in respect of which the intervention of the Court was sought.

W. Bevan for Mr. Powell, the creditor, applied to the Court to-day under the 1st section of the statute, which authorises a commissioner of a District Court of Bankruptcy, on application by or on behalf of any creditor, and due proof by affidavit of himself or of some other person, entitled in one of the Superior Courts of Common Law, or by affirmation, proving to the satisfaction of such commissioner that a debt of 20*l.* or upwards is owing to such creditor, and is payable at the time of applying, from the person against whom such application is made, and that there is probable cause for believing (a) that such debtor, unless forthwith apprehended, is about to quit England, with intent to avoid or delay the creditor, or with intent to remain out of the jurisdiction of the Courts of Law in England, so long as that the creditor will be delayed in recovery of his debt, to grant a warrant, in the form prescribed by the schedule to the Act, directed to the messenger of the Court of Bankruptcy, authorising such officer, at any time within seven days after the date of the warrant, to arrest the debtor in any part of England, who thenceforth becomes, and is detained in custody, in the same manner as if arrested under a capias issued upon a judgment recovered in a Superior Court, or by virtue of a special capias, obtained by order of a judge at chambers; this warrant and such arrest being preliminary to issuing a capias to be granted or applied for at chambers, and auxiliary thereto, and which it is imperative on the creditor to obtain immediately after the execution of the commissioner's warrant; the intention and operation of the present Act being to prevent the precipitate flight of a debtor contemplating and seeking to depart the realm, and investing country commissioners in bankruptcy and County Court judges, out of the metropolitan districts, with the summary power, on ex parte application, of defeating the machinations of fraudulent debtors dishonestly intending to leave the kingdom, with the object of defrauding their creditors, and this without the delay of applying to the judge of the Superior Court in London in the first instance. The affidavit on which the present application was made, was by the plaintiff, a coal proprietor at Newport in Monmouthshire, entitled in the Common Pleas, and stated that the debtor, who was described as of Waterford, in the kingdom of Ireland, then residing and being in the city of Bristol, was justly and truly indebted to deponent in 648*l.* 8s. 1d. for goods theretofore sold and delivered by him to the defendant, at his request; and which said sum was then due and payable from the defendant to deponent. That, on the 18th of August, the defendant informed the deponent at Bristol, "that he should leave that place on Friday the 20th of August for Ireland, and that it was his intention to leave this kingdom for foreign parts, and should reside abroad." The deponent, therefore, deposed that he verily believed, from the manner and demeanour of the debtor at the meeting before referred to, that it was his intention to leave Bristol for Ireland, at the time before stated, and afterwards proceed to some foreign country, and permanently reside abroad; wherefore deponent stated there was probable cause for believing that the deponent, unless forthwith apprehended, was about to quit England, with intent to avoid or delay deponent, and to remain out of the jurisdiction of the Courts of Law in England and Ireland, so long that thereby deponent would be delayed in the recovery of his debt.

Mr. Commissioner HILL observed, the affidavit was quite sufficient, and the evidence of intention satisfactory, and granted the application.

Warrant granted.

(a) It has been held by the Superior Courts, on application for arrest, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 3, that hearsay evidence is admissible; and an affidavit of the plaintiff that he has been informed and believed the defendant is about to leave England, provided it state the name and description of the person from whom the information was received, has been admitted as sufficient evidence to warrant a judge in making an order for a special capias. (See Gibbons v. Spalding, 11 Mee. & W. 173, which was an application to rescind an order made at chambers for holding a defendant to bail, obtained upon an affidavit which stated only the defendant had been informed by a person, whose name and address was given, and believed, that the defendant intended to leave England for Belgium; without stating any certain time at which it was believed the debtor would actually leave; but the Court, in refusing to discharge the order, observed, Parke, B. (Alderson, Abinger, and Gurney, B. B. concurring) that, "Evidence of this nature is a sufficient foundation for orders like the present, and it is every day's practice to make them on such evidence. In many cases it might be difficult, if not impossible, to procure better; and if we were to establish such a rule with respect to the affidavits, we should render the statute a dead letter. There is, however, this limitation to hearsay evidence, that no judge ought to make an order of this description merely upon the plaintiff's swearing that he is informed and believes that the defendant is about to leave the country; the plaintiff should be required to state in his affidavit the name of the person giving him that information. The judge then has before him information which the defendant has the means of afterwards explaining or denying, and if he can do so, he will be of course discharged." The beneficial operation of this new jurisdiction given to District Courts of Bankruptcy and County Courts, and the facility with which creditors can, under this Act, frustrate the evil intentions of designing debtors, was well exemplified in the above case of Powell v. Hayes. Within an hour from the time of making the application to the Commissioner, the defendant was arrested, and in the course of the same day he executed a deed of assignment for the general benefit of creditors, under which his estate will be honestly distributed rateably among all who are justly entitled to participate. Upon this being done, the debtor was at once set at liberty by the consent of the detaining creditor, without having been taken to prison, or being in custody more than a few hours.—J. C. W.

INSOLVENCY COURT.

(Before Mr. Commissioner LAW.)

Re ———, a Solicitor.

Passing of property at the date of the vesting order—Jurisdiction of the Court—Powers of the provisional assignee—Letters of administration— 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110.

Property which an insolvent may claim at the date of the vesting order passes to the provisional assignee absolutely for the benefit of the creditors, and the Court has no jurisdiction to apportion any part of it to the insolvent, as upon the accrual of future acquired property.

Semble, that the power of taking out letters of administration when that is necessary for the acquisition of property to which an insolvent has a title, may be exercised by the assignee.

This was an application to the Court upon petition by the provisional assignee under somewhat novel circumstances, the object being to obtain the sanction of the Court to an arrangement whereby a portion of a sum of 600*l.* to which the insolvent was entitled upon the death of his infant child, and upon taking out letters of administration, might be set apart for the benefit of the insolvent, he upon his part consenting to take out letters of administration, upon the presumption that the provisional assignee could not exercise that power.

Nichols appeared for the petitioner, the provisional assignee, and Cook and Macrae for the respondent (the insolvent).

Nichols briefly stated the facts from the petition. The insolvent passed through the Court in September 1850, and he had a title to certain property at that date, in right of his wife and child, upon taking out letters of administration; but owing to a misconstruction of the words of the deed giving him that right, the property had been distributed amongst other persons. Subsequently, upon the accidental discovery that this was an error, those parties agreed to refund their respective shares upon the insolvent taking out letters of administration. The provisional assignee, upon the belief that he had not the power to take out these letters of administration, was willing that a portion of the property should be given to the insolvent, upon condition that he would do so, and thus benefit the estate. The sum to be acquired was 600*l.* and the provisional assignee was willing that one-third of that sum should be apportioned to the insolvent. The object of the petition was to know whether the Court would sanction that arrangement. The facts are shortly these,—J. D. the father-in-law of the insolvent, died in 1811, and he gave by his will all his real and personal property to his executors, upon trust to convert the same into money, and among other bequests he directed his executors to raise a sum of 1,000*l.* and pay 400*l.* to his daughter Emma for her own use, and the remaining 600*l.* to place out at interest for her sole and separate use, and after her decease to be paid to her children. She married the insolvent in April 1846, and on the 10th March, 1847, she was delivered of a son, who lived till the 24th April following, when he died, and on the 28th April the mother died. The insolvent, as his late child's personal representative and next of kin, became entitled to this property, but he did not become aware of this till March 1852, when, during the progress of a suit in chancery against the executors, it was suggested by Master Humphery, and the Court directed that he should be made a party to the suit.

Mr. Commissioner LAW.—The provisional assignee, I should think, might obtain letters of administration. I cannot conceive the smallest difficulty.

The Solicitor to the provisional assignee intimated that at first there was a doubt on the subject, but since this proceeding had been adopted he had consulted the proctor, who assured him that he could obtain them for the assignee.

Mr. Commissioner LAW.—That being so, it would be a simpler proceeding for the provisional assignee to take out letters of administration, for he would be the party entitled. He did not see one single advantage that could accrue from his employing the insolvent as his agent. It would only complicate matters, and endanger the funds and increase the expense. If the contemplated arrangement were carried out the insolvent would act as trustee for the provisional assignee. That would embarrass the whole proceeding, and he would be less able to give that assistance which is required. The provisional assignee was the party entitled, and to let this party act as his agent would be a roundabout away. The insolvent might die, and this property might be involved in his personal assets. It was very fit, however, that, under the circumstances stated by his counsel, if the insolvent assisted he should be remunerated, and liberally remunerated. His opinion was that the provisional assignee should forthwith take out letters of administration. He could only say, generally, that he should approve of his being liberally remunerated for his assistance. But the creditors must have something to say to it. There were solicitors and proctors in the schedule. He had no jurisdiction to make such an order at all. All he could do was to make a minute for the provisional assignee to take out letters of administration, and that the insolvent should be liberally remunerated out of the funds acquired.

Stafford Summer Assizes, July 24.

DOE dem. ARMISTEAD v. NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RAILWAY COMPANY.

(Before CRESSWELL, J. and a Special Jury).

Powers of railway company to take land—Lands Clauses Consolidation Act—Construction of—Evidence.

The Local Act for the formation of a railway gave the company power to enter upon and take and use such of the lands delineated on the plans, and described in the books of reference, as should be necessary for the purpose of making and maintaining the railway. The company having taken possession of land under the 85th section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act (8 Vict. c. 18, incorporated with the Special Act), the powers of which are confined to such lands as are required to be purchased or permanently used for the purposes, and under the powers of that or the Special Act:

Held, that the right of the company, under the above provisions, to take possession of land necessary for the railway, was not confined to land without which the railway could not be constructed between given points, but that it extended to such land as was reasonably necessary for the advantageous use of the railway.

The question whether such land was reasonably necessary is one for the jury.

In an ejectment brought by a landowner to recover land taken possession of by the company:

Held, that letters written to the lessor of the plaintiff by one of the directors who had executed a bond to him under the 85th section of 8 Vict. c. 18, were admissible in evidence against the company.

Ejectment, to recover possession of a piece of land in the occupation of the North Staffordshire Railway Company, situate at Stoke-upon-Trent, in the county of Stafford.

Whateley, Q.C. and Whitmore, for the lessor of the plaintiff.

Keating, Q.C. and Phipson, for the defendant.

The action was brought under the following circumstances. The land in dispute, called the Cat's Palate, is situated between the line of railway and the Trent and Mersey Canal. In "the North Staffordshire Railway (Pottery Line) Act, 1846," being the Act for the formation of the railway (repealed for most purposes by the "North Staffordshire Railway Act, 1847," but not affecting this question), this field was scheduled as part of the land over which the compulsory powers of the company extended, but about fifteen perches of it were beyond the limits of deviation. Sir Thomas Boughey and Mr. Armistead (the lessor of the plaintiff) were then owners of the property, and Sir Thomas Boughey subsequently sold his interest to the company, and the lessor of the plaintiff also sold a small portion of his, the company in the first instance believing that a small part only of the field would be required. On the 23rd of June, 1847, they informed Mr. Armistead that they wanted twenty-six perches as a road to other fields, and offering him a sum for it. Mr. Armistead replied that the residue of the field being under half an acre, he should require the company to purchase the whole under the provisions of the Railway Act, and preferred that the value should be settled by arbitration. A correspondence ensued, and the company nominated an arbitrator in respect of the twenty-six perches, and Mr. Armistead did the same, but nothing further was done, and after attempts at a friendly arrangement the company on the 1st of July, 1848, gave Mr. Armistead notice that they should require the whole of the land amounting to two roods and six perches accompanying that notice by an offer of 800*l.* for it, which, however, was not accepted. The company then proceeded under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 85), (a) and delivered to the plaintiff a bond signed by two of the directors for payment of whatever sum might be awarded for the land, which was subsequently valued by a surveyor appointed by two justices at 638*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* and that sum was on the 13th of September, 1848, paid into the Bank of England, where it now remains, the plaintiff refusing to take it. A further correspondence ensued between Mr. Armistead and the Railway Company, but as soon as three years expired from the time the special Act passed (when the compulsory powers of the company ceased under sec. 123 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act), (a) Mr. Armistead brought an action of ejectment against the company to recover possession of the land which had been entered upon by them, laying the demise on the 28th June, 1849, the day after the compulsory powers of the company expired. It was contended in that action on the part of the lessor of the plaintiff, that he was entitled to recover all the land entered upon under section 85 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, as the title of the company to it was defeated by their not having completed the purchase within the prescribed period; and also that the fifteen perches beyond the limits of deviation could not be taken by the defendants, and being included in the bond, vitiated the entry altogether. It was, however, eventually decided by the Court of Queen's Bench, that the expiration of the three years had not the effect contended for, and that the original entry being lawful, the subsequent possession was lawful, and that the ejectment could not be sustained. (b)

The present action was then brought by Mr. Armistead, and the principal question now raised was, whether the land was necessary for the purposes of the railway, the company having no power (under the special Act and the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act), to take any lands but such as were required to be purchased, or permanently used for the purposes of the railway, and the lessor of the plaintiff contending that the land was unnecessary. This question was not raised at the former trial, although the objection was taken in the subsequent argument in the Court of Q. B. (c)

The following evidence was now adduced on the part of the lessor of the plaintiff.

23rd June, 1847. A letter of this date from the company's solicitor to Mr. Armistead, the lessor of the plaintiff, stating that a further portion of the Cat's Palate was required, but only as a road to the other part, and requesting to know on what terms he would dispose of it.

24th June. Mr. Armistead's reply, preferring arbitration, and requiring the company to purchase the whole.

20th July. Nomination by the company of a Mr. Bill as their arbitrator to value twenty-six perches.

20th September. Letter to Mr. Armistead from the defendant's attorney, stating that the valuation was made, and that they were authorised by the company to offer him 700*l.* for his moiety of the land.

1st July, 1848. A formal notice by the company to Mr. Armistead that the company required the whole of the lands; accompanied by a letter from their solicitor, requesting to know whether Mr. Armistead would take 800*l.* for it.

1st September. Bond executed by John Ridgway and another, being two of the directors of the company, with sureties, under the provisions of the 85th section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act.

22nd September. Notice from Mr. Armistead that he should not recognise the proceedings, and would oppose the company's taking the land.

25th November. Letter from Mr. Ridgway to Mr. Armistead.

On this letter being tendered in evidence, Keating, Q.C. objected that a letter from a mere director, unless shewn to be authorised by the company, would not bind the latter, or be any evidence to affect them.

Whateley, Q.C. contrà, called attention to the fact that the writer of the letter was one of the two directors parties to the bond, already in evidence, relating to the land in question.

CRESSWELL, J.—Under those circumstances, I think the letter is admissible in evidence.

The letter was read, as well as others between the same parties. Their only value was to shew that the company considered the question as to taking the land was still open. In one of the letters Mr. Ridgway said, "I will take care and send you an account of what land is required."

Some letters from Mr. Ricardo, the chairman of the company, to Mr. Armistead, were then put in. In one of those letters, bearing date the 16th of January, 1849, Mr. Ricardo expressed himself as follows:—"As hitherto you have refused to let us have the Cat's Palate land, and as you have given us notice that you will oppose our taking the land, we have been obliged to abandon our intentions in

(a) Which enacts "That if the promoters of the undertaking shall be desirous of entering upon and using any such lands (lands required to be purchased or permanently used for the purposes and under the powers of that or the special Act) before an agreement shall have been come to or an award made, or verdict given for the purchase-money or compensation to be paid by them in respect of such lands, it shall be lawful for the promoters of the undertaking to deposit in the Bank by way of security, as hereinafter mentioned, either the amount of purchase-money or compensation claimed by any party interested in or entitled to sell and convey such lands, and who shall not consent to such entry, or such a sum as shall, by a surveyor appointed by two justices in the manner hereinbefore provided in the case of parties who cannot be found, be determined to be the value of such lands, or of the interest therein which such party is entitled to or enabled to sell and convey, and also to give to such party a bond under the common seal of the promoters, if they be a corporation, or if they be not a corporation, under the hands and seals of the said promoters, or any two of them, with two sufficient sureties to be approved of by two justices in case the parties differ, in a penal sum equal to the sum so to be deposited, conditioned for payment to such party, or for deposit in the bank for the benefit of the parties interested in such lands, as the case may require, under the provisions herein contained, of all such purchase-money or compensation as may in manner hereinbefore provided be determined to be payable by the promoters of the undertaking in respect of the lands so entered upon, together with interest thereon, at the rate of 5*l* per cent. per annum from the time of entering on such lands until such purchase-money or compensation shall be paid to such party, or deposited in the bank for the benefit of the parties interested in such lands, under the provisions herein contained; and upon such deposit by way of security being made as aforesaid, and such bond being delivered or tendered to such non-consenting party as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the promoters of the undertaking to enter upon and use such lands, without having first paid or deposited the purchase-money or compensation in other cases required to be paid or deposited by them before entering upon any lands to be taken by them under the provisions of this or the special Act."

(a) Which enacts, "That the powers of the promoters of the undertaking, for the compulsory purchase or taking of lands for the purposes of the special Act, shall not be excised after the expiration of the prescribed period, and if no period be prescribed not after the expiration of three years from the passing of the special Act."

(b) See the case reported, 20 L. J. (N.S.) Q. B. 249.

(c) Patteson, J. in delivering the judgment of the Court said with reference to this point, "Whether these fifteen perches were necessary or not, was a question of fact for the jury, and if he had been asked, the judge must have put it to the jury; but it was assumed at the trial, that the company were entitled to take, at all events, what was within the line of deviation, and the circumstance of the fifteen perches being without that line was mainly relied on."

regard to it, and have made other arrangements accordingly."

It was admitted that the defendants took possession of part of the Cat's Palate under and immediately after the execution of the bond of the 1st of September, 1848.

A surveyor was called to prove a plan produced and referred to by the counsel. On his stating that fifteen perches of the land were beyond the limits of deviation, CRESSWELL, J. observed that was quite beside the present question. The Court of Q. B. had settled that point.

Mr. Harley, another surveyor, stated that the south side of the land was occupied by potatoes, as a garden. The west was entirely waste. There were no works of any kind upon it, and there was no appearance of the land being required for the railway.

On these facts it was contended that the lessor of the plaintiff was entitled to recover. The 17th section of the local Act empowered the company "to make and maintain the said railway and branch railways in, through, and upon the lands delineated on the said plans and described in the said books of reference, and to enter upon, and take, and use such of the said lands as shall be necessary for the purpose." This only gave a power to take lands necessary for the purposes of the railway, and the company could not take any land which was not necessary, notwithstanding it was scheduled. The appointment of Mr. Bill as arbitrator, to assess the value of only twenty-six perches, shewed that the company did not adopt Mr. Armistead's proposition, that they should take the whole. They were not bound to take it, as it was more than half an acre, and Mr. Armistead was of course released from his former stipulation, that the company should take the whole. Mr. Ricardo's letter, moreover, positively stating that the company had made other arrangements, was equivalent to saying that the land was not required for the railway.

Keating, Q.C. on the close of the plaintiff's case, submitted that there was no case to go to the jury. The evidence shewed that the defendants entered under the 85th section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act.

CRESSWELL, J.—I cannot take upon myself to say that the land was required for the railway. That is a question for the jury.

Keating then addressed the jury.—The company thought twenty-six perches was as much as they wanted. On giving the proper notice for that quantity, Mr. Armistead said the "residue was less than half an acre, and the company must take it." They were not unwilling, and accordingly treated with Sir T. Boughey for his moiety, but eventually found that Mr. Armistead would not make an amicable arrangement for his. The land on each side was the company's, and although at present no use was made of it, it was absurd to suppose that having acquired the land on each side they would not require the intervening space. [CRESSWELL, J.—The point will not quite rest on that. If the company bought land on the east and west sides under a voluntary agreement, not necessary for the works, and merely in consequence of having that unnecessary land, it became necessary for them to have the intermediate ground, then it would not be necessary for the purposes of the railway.] Yes; but it is not likely that the company would buy land on the west side at a high rate per foot if not required for the purposes of the railway. The amount at which the land was valued was paid into the bank, and was there now, but Mr. Armistead was desirous of obtaining a larger sum, and would not take it. The company had done everything in their power; they had offered a jury or arbitrators, but Mr. Armistead would not take the offer. The company then proceeded before the magistrates, and did all the law required. They delivered a bond to Mr. Armistead and paid into the bank the amount of the valuation by the surveyor appointed by the justices. The company's compulsory powers expired at the end of three years, and the very day after Mr. Armistead brought his action.

Whateley, Q.C. objected to any statement respecting the former action, as it was not evidence in this.

CRESSWELL, J.—I think it some evidence. A judgment in ejectment may not be in some cases evidence in a subsequent action of ejectment, but it is a judgment that at that time the plaintiff is not entitled to possession. In this case the demise is the same day in both actions, otherwise I do not think it would be evidence. The judgment in the former action proceeded on the ground that the defendants had a right to go beyond the deviation line. It seems to have been taken for granted that the land was necessary for the railway.

Keating referred to the case of Sadd v. The Maldon, &c. Railway Company, 20 L.J. (N.S.) Ex. 102, in which the Court seemed to think that even if the land was not necessary, it was a question for a Court of Equity. Here, however, it would be shewn that the land was necessary. Mr. Ricardo's letter did not express an abandonment of the land, but merely stated that other arrangements would be made to obtain possession of it, in consequence of Mr. Armistead's refusal to adopt the proposed arrangement; and the only question is, whether the land was necessary. If it was unnecessary, and Mr. Armistead really wanted the land, he would have an opportunity, under the Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, to repurchase it at the end of ten years, as the company was then bound to sell all land obtained by them not wanted for the purposes of the line, and to offer it to the former owner.

Mr. Keary, the solicitor to the company, was then examined, and proved the proceedings taken under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act with reference to the land in question, and also that since the trial of the former action the company had proceeded to assess the value of the land before the coroner (the sheriff being an interested party) and a jury, under the 49th and 52nd sections of the same Act, in consequence of Mr. Armistead having refused to attend the arbitration.

Mr. Forsyth, the engineer of the railway, stated that the notice that Cat's Palate was required for the railway was given by his advice, and in his opinion it was necessary for the purposes of the railway. At the time this action was commenced he was having the land stripped previously to its being covered with an embankment. It was intended to lay down sidings and to erect buildings for carriages on it. The land on the east and west sides had been purchased from Sir Thomas Boughey. On the north it was bounded by the line of railway, and on the south by the Trent and Mersey Canal, the property of the railway company. The company had erected a large granary on the east side, and contemplated placing other buildings between the railway and the canal.

Whateley, Q. C. in reply.—The question is, whether the company has proved that the land is necessary for the line; not whether it is convenient, but whether it is necessary?

CRESSWELL, J.—Do you contend that it is necessary to shew that the land was absolutely necessary to carry on the railway?

Whateley.—The words of the Act are necessary for the purpose of the railway. It must be, therefore, shewn that the land was necessary for the railway. I say something more than mere convenience must be proved. For instance, if the company wanted it merely because they were also the owners of the canal adjoining, it would not be necessary within the words of the Act, for it must be required for the purposes of the railway.

CRESSWELL, J. to the jury.—The question you have to try is an extremely simple one. A great many points in this case have been decided by the Court of Q. B. I am bound by that decision, and I see no reason to differ from it. The Court has decided every point but the one, whether the land is necessary for the railway. The company has the right to take the land described in the book of reference, but has only power to take what is necessary for the railway. The word "necessary" does not mean that without which the railway cannot be constructed from A. to B. It extends to such land as is reasonably necessary for the advantageous use of the railway. For instance, houses, sidings, and standings for carriages are reasonably necessary, although not absolutely necessary. Therefore I advise you to consider the question with reference to what you think is reasonably required for the advantageous use of railways. This question cannot be judged of by a person who knows nothing of the intentions of the company, but the engineer tells you positively the land is required for sidings and buildings for carriages. It is true it has not been yet applied to those purposes, but the company had no sooner taken possession of the land than the action was commenced. That seems to me to be a clear answer why they have not hitherto used it. In conclusion, his Lordship said, the question you have to consider is, whether you think these two roods and six perches of land was land that the company would reasonably require for the use of their railway.

One of the jury inquired whether Mr. Ricardo's letter was to be taken into consideration?

CRESSWELL, J.—Undoubtedly it is part of the evidence as to whether the company really did require the land for the railway, but it does not alter the question for your consideration as to what, according to the judgment of a reasonable man, is necessary for the railway.

Verdict for the defendants.

Ecclesiastical Courts.

CONSISTORY COURT.

CHICHESTER.

Friday, Sept. 3.

(Before Dr. PHILLIMORE.)

RAWLISON v. MEDWIN and HURST.

Title to pew in parish church—Perturbation.

This was a suit brought by plaintiff against the defendants for molesting and disturbing him in the use of a seat in the parish church of Horsham.

Deane for the promoter.

Waddilove for the defendants.

The facts and arguments are sufficiently stated and reviewed in the judgment.

Dr. PHILLIMORE.—This is a suit brought by Mr. Rawlison, a parishioner and inhabitant of Horsham, in this diocese, against Mr. Medwin and Mr. Hurst, also parishioners and inhabitants of this parish, for molesting and disturbing him in the use and occupation of a seat in the parish church of Horsham. It appears by the evidence that Mr. Rawlison, the promoter of the suit, is a solicitor, and that Mr. Medwin, one of the defendants, is a solicitor, and the other (Mr. Hurst) is a barrister. At first the defendants conducted this cause in person, but subsequently both parties have availed themselves of the assistance and advice of advocates and practitioners in Doctors' Commons, by whom the Court has had the advantage of having its judgment informed today. The citation was taken out on the 15th of October, 1851. The libel, which was in the common form assigned by practice to suits of this description, and which contains no special matter, was given in on the 12th of November, 1851. Upon the court day no person appearing to sustain the opposition, the libel was admitted. From this admission an appeal was instituted on the 26th of November, pending which the jurisdiction of this Court was of course inhibited. The inhibition was served upon the Court on the 6th day of December, 1851. The result of the appeal was that the judgment of this Court was affirmed, and the cause remitted to it on the 2nd day of June, 1852. Upon that libel five witnesses have been examined in chief and interrogated. An allegation was asserted by the defendants, assigned for the 23rd, and brought in on the 30th of June, 1852. That plea was opposed, and the admissibility of it was argued before the Court. The Court was of opinion that, subject to certain informations directed to be made in it, it was admissible, but accompanied the expression of that opinion by an intimation to the counsel and proctor of the defendants, to which it will be necessary hereafter to refer. The libel pleaded that Mr. Rawlison had been a parishioner of Horsham since the month of April, 1837; that in the month of February, 1851, the churchwardens placed him and his family in a certain seat in the parish church; that the defendant, with his family, took possession of it; that they continued peaceably to occupy it until a Sunday happening on the 17th day of August, 1851; that on that day they were forcibly prevented from occupying it by the defendants, who had unlawfully intruded themselves therein, and refused upon due request being made to them, to retire therefrom. Before we consider whether these statements are supported by the evidence, and whether they are in any respect materially contravened by the counterplea of the defendants, it may be well to state briefly what is the law applicable to the distribution and occupation of seats in a parish church; and I am the more desirous of doing so, because a misconception on this subject appears to have prevailed among some of the parishioners of Horsham, which, perhaps, with respect to many of them is not surprising, but which with respect to the defendants, their legal character, the simplicity of the law upon this subject, the notoriety of the decisions upon being duly considered, appears to me, I must confess, so astonishing as to be scarcely credible. According to the common law ecclesiastical, both before and since the Reformation, the use of the church has been free to all parishioners. Since the Reformation, fixed seats have been introduced instead of moveable ones, which appear to have been in use previously, and to have been in some cases the subjects of private property; but with reference to the use of the church, no innovation was made upon this principle of the ancient law. At the period of the Reformation all seats in churches, with some peculiar exceptions (which it is not now necessary to advert to) are in the disposition of the ordinary, who exercises in the first instance his authority through the churchwardens, who are his officers as well as the officers of the parish, and who are subject to the supervision and control of the Consistorial Courts. The decisions of these courts, with the full concurrence of the authorities of the Common Law, have long ago decided the following points:—First—That according to the general law there can be no property in seats, and that the sale and lease of them is wholly illegal. Secondly—That all private rights in seats must be held by virtue of a decree of the Consistorial Court, technically called the faculty; or, thirdly, by prescription, which implies the previous grant of the faculty since lost. Fourthly—There is what is called a possessory right, accruing on the allotment of a seat to a parishioner by the churchwardens, or from their sanctioning his possession of the seat. This right is not good against the ordinary, who may, on cause being shewn to him, make a different arrangement, but is quite sufficient to enable the possessor to maintain a suit against a mere disturber. These axioms of this branch of the ecclesiastical law have been frequently laid down in a variety of reported cases, and have received the sanction of Lord Stowell and Sir John Nicoll and other ecclesiastical judges of high authority; they are, in fact, now to be found in almost every elementary work on the subject, and must have been, I should suppose, well known to the legal defendants in this case. Now, to apply these principles of law to the facts before me. Mr. Rawlison, the promoter of the suit, has been examined himself, and he swears that he was placed in his seat by Mr. Thorpe, "upon whom," he says, "the active duties of churchwarden appeared to devolve," and the description appears to be just, for Mr. Aldridge admits that he was disabled by ill-health from discharging his duties, and Mr. Lee, on the sixteenth interrogatory, says that he never had any applications made to him for seats. Mr. Thorpe has been examined, and he swears that he was appealed to by Mr. Rawlison, and consented to his occupation of the seat. The two other churchwardens (for it appears that there are three in this parish) have been examined by the defendants; the first of them (Mr. Aldridge) says that he was ill at the time, and that neither then nor since has he had anything whatever to do with the matter. The third and remaining churchwarden (Mr. Lee) swears that Mr. Rawlison did not consult him previously to occupying the seat, and that he objected to his doing so; that he expressed this objection to his brother churchwardens, and, to use his own expression, "to every one who spoke to him about it;" but he does not swear that he desired Mr. Rawlison to abandon his seat, or, indeed, that he spoke to him upon the subject till July 1851, when, it must be remembered, that he had ceased to be churchwarden. He swears that Mr. Thorpe declared that he had never given his consent to Mr. Rawlison and that Mr. Hodgson, the incumbent, admitted that he had seated Mr. Rawlison in the first instance, and Mr. Stapleton, another witness produced by the defendants, speaks also to Mr. Thorpe's denial; that is to say, of having originally consented, but admits that he subsequently sanctioned the occupation of the seat by Mr. Rawlison. On the other hand Mr. Thorpe himself swears positively to the contrary, so does Mr. Rawlison, so does the incumbent, though he is not quite sure whether the consent of the churchwardens was given after or before Mr. Rawlison's taking possession. I am clearly of opinion that the evidence is in favour of Mr. Rawlison upon this point. It is not my intention to ascribe perjury to Mr. Lee or to any other witness. It is very probable he is deposing with a strong conviction as to the truth of his statement, and nevertheless is under a mistake as to the seat which was the subject of his conversation with Mr. Thorpe; but in weighing his evidence I cannot shut my eyes to a fact which I observe with much regret, and which must, I think, be held as biassing, in some degree, Mr. Lee's testimony—I mean his illegal and very improper conduct when churchwarden. This gentleman swears that he had always understood that the parishioners had a prescriptive right to buy and sell pews, and to hand them down to their successors, and he appears by the exhibit No. 2, proved in this cause, to have taken an active part in July 1851, in carrying a proposition in vestry, which was directly at variance with the law of the land, and the duties of his former office. It does not, however, matter much for the purposes of this suit whether Mr. Rawlison was originally seated with the sanction of a churchwarden or not, for that he occupied the seat for several months with what must be legally, as well as morally, considered the implied sanction of the churchwardens, and without any attempt on the part of any of them to disturb him, is a fact not attempted to be controverted in the case; and here I may remark that the allotment of this pew, which was vacant at the time, appears to have been a perfectly proper and legal act, whether regard be had to the particular station of Mr. Rawlison in the parish, or to the general arrangement of seats in the parish church. Lastly, to close this part of the case, it is not denied that Mr. Rawlison was disturbed in the possession of the seat which he had so occupied for many months, by the defendants, at the time and in the manner laid in the libel, and which disturbance, but for the becoming conduct of Mr. Rawlison, would have led to a desecration of the sanctuary, and to a scene of brawling in the church, for which the defendants would have been unquestionably punishable in the Ecclesiastical Court. Now let us consider what is the defence set up upon the other side. The allegation pleaded that the seat in question had been occupied for a considerable time by the inhabitants of a particular mansion, which is now inhabited by a sister of Mr. Hurst, one of the parties in this cause, but it did not, and, indeed, could not plead, either substantially or in terms, that the seat was attached to the mansion either by faculty or by prescription, and the counsel for the defendant has expressly abandoned any such defence. It did not deny that Miss Smith, the person who inhabited the mansion previously to Miss Hurst, died in January 1851, when the seat became vacant, and was shortly afterwards occupied by Mr. Rawlison; nor is it pleaded that any attempt was made by Miss Hurst to take possession of it either by herself or by deputy until the month of August 1851, she having become only possessed of the mansion in the July preceding. The allegation further pleaded that Mr. Rawlison had never been seated with the knowledge or sanction of any of the churchwardens, that they had expressly refused their sanction, and that he had been seated by the vicar alone. The allegation, however, did not contain that averment, which it was most natural for the defendants it should have contained, that the defendants, the alleged intruders, had ousted Mr. Rawlison, and taken possession of the seat under the authority (supposing them to have possessed any) of the churchwardens. I must now mention more fully a circumstance happening in the progress of the cause, to which I have before alluded. When the allegation was debated, I expressed a very strong intimation of opinion, that inasmuch as it did not set up a title either by faculty or prescription, or possession in the defendants, that, in fact, it would be found to constitute no defence to the plaintiff's suit, while it would greatly augment the expenses of the litigation; nevertheless, as it did directly contradict a material averment in the libel, videlicet—that Mr Rawlison was originally seated by the authority of any of the churchwardens, and as I was much pressed on behalf of the defendants to admit the plea, I consented to do so if they still wished it, warning them, however, that they would be certainly condemned in the costs if they failed by it to establish their case. Thereupon the legal advisers of the defendants requested that time should be allowed them to consult with their clients, and to convey to them this intimation of my opinion. The time which they required was allowed them, and they finally determined to proceed with the suit, and to take evidence upon their allegation. Upon this allegation they have examined six witnesses, and their evidence constitutes by far the larger part of the depositions before me. I have already adverted to the evidence of Mr. Lee, Mr. Aldridge, and Mr. Stapleton, and expressed my opinion thereupon. Mr. Medwin and Mr. Hurst, the defendants, have not been examined themselves. The testimony of the witnesses produced by them, so far from aiding, is, in my opinion, detrimental to the case which they are produced to support. It appears from the cross-examination of all the witnesses, that there had been, and was at the time Mr. Rawlison began to occupy his seat, a practice prevalent at Horsham, [illegible] and selling seats in the parish church; so [illegible]y carried on, that a register was kept of the supposed value of the seats; that this illegal and discreditable traffic had been countenanced, I regret to say, by some vicars, and had been sanctioned and abetted by the churchwardens in direct violation of the duty which they had by solemn declaration bound themselves to fulfil, and it is not difficult to surmise that the real objection to Mr. Rawlison being seated arises from the fact of his being seated according to the Common Law of the land, and in defiance of the illegal custom referred to. I have read, therefore, without surprise, the following answer of Mr. Rawlison to an interrogation addressed to him:—"The proceedings in this cause are primarily at my own expense, that is, I am formally liable for them, but I am guaranteed by the bishop, whose right it is that is invaded, he having stated to me that it was his intention to vindicate the rights of the parishioners against those setting up claims to the pews, as private property, and to put down, as he said, the present practice of buying, selling, and letting pews in the parish." I think it my duty to take this opportunity of warning the churchwardens of Horsham, that if they continue to foster and abet an offence which they are bound to prevent and extirpate, and to disregard the solemn obligation to maintain the Ecclesiastical Law which they contract on their institution into their office, they may find that they have subjected themselves to criminal proceedings, and to punishment in this court, which I trust this admonition will induce them to avoid. Having alluded to the propriety of the allotment of the seat in question to Mr. Rawlison, I must now notice the extreme impropriety which would have attended its appropriation to Mr. Medwin and Mr. Hurst. First, as to Mr. Medwin, neither the pleading nor the evidence offers the slightest defence for his conduct; there is not the faintest pretence for alleging he had any title to the seat in question. It is not even suggested that it did or could in any way belong to him. The evidence shews that Mr. Medwin possessed two pews, independently of the one in question, in the parish church. Secondly, as to Hurst, he appears to be the very last person who ought to have played the part of an intruder into another person's seat. His own witness, Mr. Aldridge, the churchwarden, says upon the sixth interrogatory, "I have no idea how many pews, or parts of pews, Mr. Hurst, one of the parties in this suit, or his father or family lay claim to in the parish church of Horsham—a great many though, for he has five or six large pews in the chancel." Another witness also produced by the defendants, Sarah Thomas, on the sixth interrogatory, says, "Mr. Hurst had an immense number of pews and sittings in the church, in which his tenants used to sit, but whether or not he has or had two pews in the north aisle, I do not know." The Court, therefore, however scandalised, is not astonished to read the following evidence of the vicar, Mr. Hodgson:—"It is not the fact that there is more than sufficient pew accommodation for the parishioners in Horsham Church, for the churchwardens have now twenty applications for pews, which they are unable to provide; and yet, owing to the system of appropriation of pews now existing, I remember it was brought under my observation on Whit Sunday last, that there were only eight persons in as many pews, which would have conveniently held thirty-six persons." I have no hesitation in pronouncing that the promoter of this suit has succeeded in proof of the averments in the libel, and that he is entitled to the sentence of the Court in accordance with his prayer; and I hereby monish the defendants that they do refrain for the future from intruding themselves in the pew in question in this cause, and from disturbing Mr. Rawlison and his family in the quiet and peaceable possession of the same. And further, I think it would be a gross dereliction of my duty if I did not condemn them in the expenses of litigation, which their conduct originally provoked, and which their pleading has unnecessarily inflamed. I do hereby, therefore, condemn them in the costs of this suit.

PROCLAMATION FOR ASSEMBLING PARLIAMENT.—Yesterday Lord Brougham's Bill to shorten the time required for assembling Parliament after a dissolution was printed by order of the Lords. The following is the entire Bill after stating the title:—"Whereas on account of the increased facilities of communication which now exist, the time required by law to intervene between the date of the proclamation for assembling Parliament and the day appointed for the meeting thereof may be reasonably shortened. Be it enacted (in the usual manner) that so often as her Majesty shall by her Royal proclamation appoint a time for the first meeting of the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland after a dissolution thereof, the time so to be appointed may be any time less than fifty days after the date of such proclamation, the Act of the 5th of Queen Anne, c. 8, art. 22, or any other law or usage to the contrary, notwithstanding; provided that the time so appointed shall not be less than thirty-five days after the date of such proclamation."

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES CONSOLIDATION BILL.—This Bill, to continue and amend the Friendly Societies Act, which was passed last session, has been printed. It contains only three clauses. After providing for the renewal of the former Act, it proceeds to regulate the payment of the salaries and expenses of the registrars from the fees; and if there is any balance after these payments it is to be paid over to the Consolidated Fund, to meet any deficiencies that may arise in future years.

LEGACY, &C. DUTIES.—Mr. Hume has obtained his annual return as to legacy and other duties, which was printed on Saturday. In 1851 legacy duty was paid in Great Britain on a capital of 49,402,391l. 8s. 1d. varying from 1 to 10 per cent. The total amount on which such duty has been paid from the year 1797 is 1,610,511,719l. 16s. 4d. In Ireland, in the year ending the 5th of January last, the amount of capital on which legacy duty was paid was 2,435,228l. 17s. 5d. and the amount of duty was 58,444l. 8s. 4d. In Ireland, in 1851, the amount of duty on probates beyond the sum stated on legacies was 66,075l. In the year ended the 5th of January last the revenue derived from stamp duties on legacies in England and Wales was 1,160,080l. 16s. 5d.; in Scotland, 95,633l. 2s. 8d.; in Great Britain, 1,225,713l. 19s. 1d. and in Ireland, 59,566l. 18s. 4d.; while on probates, administrations, &c. the sums were respectively 926,019l. 1s. 6d. 71,314l. 997,326l. 1s. 6d. and 66,075l. Since the year 1797 the duty on legacies has been 47,502,446l. 14s. 9d. and on probates, administrations, and testamentary papers, 38,260,557l. 15s. 8¾d.

THE GROUPING OF PRIVATE BILLS.—Another report from the Committee of Selection—making the fourth—has been printed, shewing the grouping of various Private Bills before the House of Commons.

"CURSING" A MAGISTRATE BY A CLERGYMAN.—A most extraordinary, novel, and exciting scene was witnessed at the Flordon station, on Saturday evening. When the 5 o'clock train from Norwich arrived there, the passengers were much surprised at seeing the Rev. Mr. Moore, the curate of the parish, standing in the passage of the station-house, dressed in his canonicals. It was, however, soon understood that he was waiting there to "curse" a neighbouring magistrate, who was expected by the train, and who had given him some presumed offence. When the individual alluded to was giving up his ticket to the station master, the rev. gentleman thus addressed him:—"I inflict a curse upon this man. I curse you; I curse your wife; I curse your children; I curse all you have—may your children be fatherless and vagabonds, and beg their bread," &c. &c.; and thus he went on until the "cursed man" drove off. We understand that the matter has been laid before the bishop; and that the rev. gentleman, in default of finding sureties to keep the peace, was committed on Sunday night to the Castle, by Edward Howes, esq.

EXECUTION OF A BANKRUPT.—At noon, on the 10th inst. just as the Exchange at Hamburgh was crowded with merchants, and presented its busiest aspect, two drummers in the civic uniform came up and rolled their drums for the space of ten minutes, causing a great commotion both within and out of the Bourse. While this was going on, workmen were seen over the principal gateway of the building elevating a black board, on which was painted in white letters the name of a merchant of the city who had lately suspended payment and absconded with all his assets. When the name had been fairly set up, a bell, called the "schand glocke," or shame bell, only rung on such occasions, was sounded for two hours from a tower of the Bourse. This penalty of disgrace, called the "execution of a fraudulent bankrupt," is ordained by a law which can be traced to the fourteenth century, when the Hanseatic League was at the height of its greatness. At that period, however, the bankrupt's patent of citizenship, and his certificate as a merchant, were also burnt by the hangman.

LUNACY CASES IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY.—It is stated in a return to the House of Lords, just printed, that the number of petitions and matters in lunacy set down for hearing before the Lord Chancellor on the 2nd November, 1850, was 34. The number of petitions and matters in lunacy heard or otherwise disposed of by his Lordship between the 2nd November, 1850, and the 2nd November, 1851, was 416.

Sales by Auction and Private Contract.

COLCHESTER. Extensive and valuable Freehold Building Ground, adjoining the Eastern Counties Railway Station, and between it and the town, together with small Residence and Garden, offering most eligible investments and votes for the county.

MR. BEADEL has received directions to submit to PUBLIC SALE, at the THREE CUPS HOTEL, COLCHESTER, on TUESDAY, APRIL 20, at Twelve, in Fourteen Lots, the following desirable PROPERTY, comprising a convenient HOUSE and Offices and about El acres of most Valuable FREEHOLD LAND, close to the Colchester Station on the Eastern Counties Railway, singularly adapted for building purposes, divided into fourteen plots possessing capital frontages to good roads. The whole is land-tax redeemed, and possession may be had. Particulars, with lithographic maps attached, may be obtained of Messrs. Crowder and Maynard, Solicitors, 37, Coleman-street; at the Three Cup Hotel, Colchester, and at Mr Beadel's Offices, 25, Gresham street, London.

PERIODICAL SALES for 1852.—The Fiftieth Year of the establishment of Periodical Sales of Absolute Contingent Reversions, Life Interests, Annuities, Policies of Assurance, Advowsons, Next Presentations, Rent Charges in Lieu of Tithes, Post Obit Bonds, Tontines, Debentures, Ground Rents, Improved Rents, Shares in Docks, Canals, Mines, Railways, Insurance Companies, and all Public Undertakings, suggests the propriety of MESSRS SHUTTLEWORTH and SONS impressing upon the public the advantage of a system originating solely with themselves in 1803, and which now further recommends itself by the experience of half a century, acknowledged public convenience and great individual economy. The result of the past year has proved that Reversions of every description at present realise their full value. Life Policies in the Great Offices still command remunerative prices above the Office terms. Life Interests and Annuities are more in demand since the sustained advance in the value of Public Securities. Advowsons and Church property continue in request in the best localities, and Shares in Cemeteries, Gas and Water Companies have also experienced an upward impulse, and upon the whole, Messrs S. and Sons conclude that there never was a period more favourable to holders of such investments, to turn them into money than the present.

BEVERLEY, YORKSHIRE.—Fee-Farm Rents, amounting to 304*l* 11s per annum.

MESSRS. SHUTTLEWORTH and SONS have received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, in London, on FRIDAY, APRIL 16 at Twelve, in one Lot, a most desirable FREEHOLD INVESTMENT, consisting of all and every the fee farm and other rents, pensions, and annual payments, issuing and payable out of certain lands and tenements in the county of York, and known and distinguished by the name of the Beverley Collection, amounting in the whole to the sum of 304*l* 11s. per annum, subject to land-tax and other trifling charges.—Particulars may be obtained, 14 days previous to the sale, of Messrs. Frank Goodford, and Cholmley, Solicitors, 6, New-square, Lincoln's-inn; at the Mart; and of Messrs. Shuttleworth and Sons, 28, Poultry, London.

CORNHILL.—Important Freehold Property.

MESSRS. SHUTTLEWORTH and SONS have been favoured with instructions to announce for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, on FRIDAY, APRIL 16, at Twelve (unless an acceptable offer be previously made for the entire estate by private contract), a very important FREEHOLD ESTATE, exonerated from land-tax, commanding unquestionably the most valuable locality in the city of London, consisting of the three dwelling-houses, very extensive back premises, vaultage, and cellaring, Nos. 11, 12, and 13, Cornhill, with two passages of communication into Lombard-street, late in the occupation of Messrs. Grosvenor, Chater, and Co. at an old and low rental of 1,200*l*. per annum. May be viewed, and particulars, with plans annexed, obtained of John Clarke, Esq. Architect, 13, Stratford-place, Oxford-street; at the Mart; and of Messrs. Shuttleworth and Sons, 28, Poultry.

HAMPSHIRE.—Foxlease Park, adjacent to Cuffnells.

MESSRS. SHUTTLEWORTH and SONS have been favoured with instructions from the Trustees under the will of James M'Taggart, esq. deceased, to submit to public SALE, at the MART, on FRIDAY, MAY 21 (unless an acceptable offer by private treaty is previously received), a beautiful FREEHOLD ESTATE (exonerated from land-tax), distinguished as Foxlease Park, delightfully placed on the border of the high turnpike-road from Southampton to Lymington, in a fine sporting district of the county of Hants. The estate comprises altogether 188 acres of land, disposed in a park of 130 acres, beautifully undulated and richly timbered. The pleasure grounds and garden extend over about 16 acres, stored with rare and valuable indigenous and exotic shrubs in great variety and beauty; the remainder is disposed in convenient inclosures of pasturage and tillage land. The mansion is very spacious, and adapted for a large family. Coach-houses, stables, farm-house, cottages, and agricultural buildings, all abundantly supplied with excellent water.—May be viewed with tickets, which, with particulars and plans, may be obtained fourteen days previously to the sale, of Mr. Moody, at the park gate; of Messrs. Tatham, Upton, Johnson, and Upton, Solicitors, 24, Lincoln's-Inn Fields, and 20, Austinfriars; and of Messrs. Shuttleworth and Sons, 28, Poultry; particulars may also be obtained at the principal inns in the neighbouring towns, and at the Mart.

MESSRS. SHUTTLEWORTH and SONS respectfully inform the public, that the PERIODICAL SALES of REVERSIONARY INTERESTS, &c. will be held at the MART, the FIRST FRIDAY in EACH MONTH throughout 1852, as follows—

April 2	September 3
May 7	October 1
June 4	November 5
July 2	December 3.
August 6

Particulars may be had, ten days previous to each sale, at the Royal Hotel, Manchester; the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool; Dee's Royal Hotel, Birmingham; the Angel, Oxford; the Eagle and Child, Cambridge; at the Auction Mart; and of Messrs. Shuttleworth and Sons, 28, Poultry.

The LAW of PROPERTY. A Treatise on the Law of Property, as administered by the House of Lords. By Sir Edward Sugden. 1849. In royal 8vo. One Vol. price 1*l.* 11s. 6d. cloth boards.

EXTRACTS FROM THE PREFACE:

"This work is the first attempt which has been made to embody, in the form of a Treatise, the Decisions of the House of Lords on the Law of Property. The subjects are thus classed: 1st, are the cases on Contract Deeds and Settlements; 2ndly those on Testamentary Dispositions an important Division; 3rdly, the cases on Powers which are common to Dispositions as well by Deed as by Will; and, finally, the authorities bearing upon particular classes as Lessors and Lessees, Mortgagors and Mortgagees, Vendors and Purchasers. The Decisions on the Law of Husband and Wife are ranged under the head of 'Settlement'. ..The writer had at his command some materials which have greatly aided him in a portion of his work; whilst at the bar he retained all the printed cases on Appeals in which he was counsel, with his own notes and the notes of the arguments. From this source principally he has been enabled to add the cases not at present reported between 1821 and 1826."

PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

NEWCASTLE AND GATESHEAD LAW SOCIETY.

THE following excellent petition has been presented from this Society to the House of Commons.

To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled.

The Humble Petition of the Undersigned Attorneys and Solicitors in Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Gateshead, Sheweth,— That the principle of the Bill for the repeal of the annual tax on attorneys and solicitors' certificates to practise has been affirmed by your Honourable House on five successive divisions.

Your petitioners humbly submit that they are in fact subjected to treble taxation, namely,— 1stly, by the stamp of 120*l.* on their articles of clerkship and the stamp of 25*l.* upon their admission.

2ndly, by the annual certificate duty of 12*l.* in London, and 8*l.* in the country; and 3rdly, by the income-tax.

That your petitioners are of opinion that, on a fair and liberal calculation, the average of net professional income realised by attorneys and solicitors does not reach 200*l.* per annum for each individual, and estimating the annual interest of the 145*l.* required for the purchase of the stamps on articles of clerkship and admission at 5*l.* per cent. per annum, your petitioners are on those items alone severally subjected to an annual tax of 7*l.* 5s. per annum on capital actually sunk and irredeemable, and adding thereto the certificate duty of 8*l.* your petitioners are in fact taxed individually to the amount of 15*l.* 5s. per annum, being at the rate of 7*l.* 12s. 6d. per cent. upon the above mentioned average of professional income.

That the above are exclusive of the annual Income Tax of 2*l.* 18s. 4d. per centum charged upon the professional incomes of your petitioners, earned by them with great pains, much labour, infinite care, and anxiety, and at great personal responsibility and risk; that adding both descriptions of tax together, it follows that your petitioners are in consequence burdened with an annual ad valorem tax of 21*l.* 1s. 8d. on the above-mentioned average of professional incomes, being at the rate of 10*l.* 10s. 10d. per centum per annum.

That the professional incomes of your petitioners are contingent upon life and health, and necessarily terminate with either, leaving your petitioners and those dependent upon them destitute.

That on these grounds your petitioners once more appeal to the justice of your honourable House, and respectfully urge the repeal of an impost which they consider partial, unjust, and oppressive.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

(Signed by seventy-eight out of ninety-five practitioners in Newcastle and Gateshead.)

THE MERCHANTS' AND TRADESMEN'S MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—The fifth annual meeting was held on Thursday, the 18th of March, at the offices in Chatham-place, Blackfriars. John Macgregor, esq. M.P. presided. It appeared from the report that the number of policies for the year ending 31st of January last are 181, the amount assured 54,650*l.*; the premiums on which are 1,561*l.* 18s. 1d. Since the 31st of January last 61 proposals have been passed, amounting to 21,100*l.* the premiums on which are 720*l.* 1s. 11d.; and there are before the board 13 proposals, amounting to 6,900*l.* the premiums on which are 245*l.* 19s. 9d. now in progress of completion: making the total number of policies 736; the amount assured 216,432*l.*; the annual income of the society, 7,024*l.* 7s. 4d. Twenty-seven proposals for 14,150*l.* have been submitted to the board during the year which have been declined. The claims by death which have been discharged amount to 1,660*l.* and there is one small claim of 100*l.* which the directors cannot settle, in consequence of there being different claimants interested in the sum.

CASES AT THE MIDDLESEX SESSIONS. — On Saturday a return to the House of Commons was printed, shewing the operation of the late Act, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, giving additional business to the Middlesex Sessions. The commitments did not commence until September last. In 1850-51 the number of cases of felony or misdemeanours tried numbered 852, and, in 1851-2, to 1,265. A deputy sat on several occasions, through the illness of the assistant-judge. The Court has been divided, and two courts sitting, since the passing of the Act, seventeen days.

HIGHWAY RATES.—It is shewn by a return to the House of Commons, just published, that in England and Wales the receipts on account of highways in counties in the year ending March 25, 1850, were 1,040,645*l.* 18s. 3d. and the expenditure 1,026,504*l.* 12s. 8d. On account of the highways of the cities, boroughs, &c. in the counties the receipts were 861,358*l.* 18s. 4d. and the expenditure 824,383*l.* 3s. 2d.

PROCLAMATION FOR ASSEMBLING PARLIAMENT. —Lord Brougham's Bill as amended on report, to shorten the time required for assembling Parliament after a dissolution thereof, has been printed by order of the House of Lords. As it now stands it is, "that so often as Her Majesty shall by her royal proclamation appoint a time for the first meeting of the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland after a dissolution thereof, the time so to be appointed may be any time not less than thirty-five days after the date of such proclamation, the Act of the fifth year of Queen Anne, c. 8, or the Act of the 7th and 8th years of William III. c. 25, or any other law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

PUBLIC DEBT. — A Parliamentary paper has been printed, containing an account of the additions which have been made to the annual charge of the public debt, by the interest of any loans that have been made or annuities created in the last ten years. The last charge was made in 1848 of 69,339*l.* 11s. 6d.

The LAW of PROPERTY. A Treatise on the Law of Property, as administered by the House of Lords. By Sir EDWARD SUGDEN. 1849. In royal 8vo. One Vol. price 1*l*. 11s. 6d. cloth boards.

EXTRACTS FROM THE PREFACE:

"This work is the first attempt which has been made to embody, in the form of a Treatise, the Decisions of the House of Lords on the Law of Property... The subjects are thus classed: 1st, are the cases on Contract, Deeds and Settlements; 2ndly, those on Testamentary Dispositions—an important Division; 3rdly, the cases on Powers which are common to Dispositions as well by Deed as by Will; and, finally, the authorities bearing upon particular classes, as Lessors and Lessees, Mortgagors and Mortgagees, Vendors and Purchasers. The Decisions on the Law of Husband and Wife are ranged under the head of 'Settlement.' The writer had at his command some materials which have greatly aided him in a portion of his work; whilst at the bar he retained all the printed cases on Appeals in which he was counsel, with his own notes and the notes of the arguments. From this source principally he has been enabled to add the cases not at present reported between 1831 and 1838.

ASSESSORSHIP OF THE LIVERPOOL COURT OF PASSAGE.—The Liverpool town council have decided that the salary of Mr. Edward James, the recently appointed assessor to the Court of Passage, shall be 400*l.* per annum, instead of 500*l.* as heretofore. Since the extension of the County Court system the business of the assessor's court has greatly decreased.

POOR LAW BOARD CONTINUANCE.—By a Bill in the House of Commons, it is proposed to continue the Poor Law Board. The Act now in force will expire as to the appointment of the commissioners "at the end of the session of Parliament held next after the 23rd of July in the present year." The Poor Law Board is to be further continued to the 23rd of July, 1854, and thenceforth until the end of the then next session of Parliament.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently inflicts twofold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 10l. 10s. A first-rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for 30 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 4l.; tradesmen's, 6l., 8l. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 1l. 11s. 6d.; single horse, 1l. 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each.—City-road, next Bunhill-fields Burial-ground. Originated in 1842.

Established 1823.

SEYSSEL ASPHALTE.
LEGAL AND OTHER IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS CAN BE EFFECTUALLY PROTECTED FROM DAMP AND VERMIN.

DAMP AND GASEOUS EXHALATIONS.
SANITARY MEASURES.

MEMBERS of BOARDS of HEALTH are especially directed to the most EFFECTIVE MEANS which they can ADOPT to PREVENT the injurious and often FATAL EFFECTS upon the HEALTH of the COMMUNITY, arising from exhalations that are produced from moisture, decayed animal matter (as in grave-yards), stagnant water, and collections of fetid refuse, tending to produce a miasmatic state of atmosphere. In situations so affected, the impervious quality of the ASPHALTE of SEYSSEL renders it the most perfect PAVEMENT or COVERING that can be relied upon for hermetically closing, and thereby preventing the rising of moisture and the escape of noxious vapours. The present extensive application of this material for covering roofs, terraces, and arches, for preventing the percolation of wet, is strong evidence of its effectiveness for the above purposes.

 The exclusive supply of ASPHALTE from the MINES of PYRIMONT SEYSSEL is conceded to this COMPANY.

CHEAP AND DURABLE ROOFING

F. M'NEILL & CO.'S PATENT ASPHALTED ROOFING FELT.
[PRICE ONE PENNY PER SQUARE FOOT.]

As a roofing it is light durable and effective. Half the strength of timber used for slates or tiles only is necessary, and is particularly desirable for farm buildings, workshops, and emigrants' houses, supplied in long lengths by 32 inches wide, and easily applied by unpractised hands.

It is an excellent covering for Verandas, desirable to form light ceilings, and to place under slates tiles, or metal, to counteract the heat of the sun, and the wet and frost, to top rooms, and church roofs.

Also thick HAIR FELT for deadening sound under floors, and VERY THICK HAIR FELT for clothing the boilers and pipes of the steam engine, saving 20 per cent in fuel.

A WATERPROOF BITUMINOUS FELT, for lining damp walls, free from odour, and can be papered on or coloured, and is a very effective remedy Price One Penny per Square Foot.

Samples and full directions, with illustrations on the cheap construction of roofs (which any carpenter can follow), sent post free, and orders by post executed. Experienced workmen also sent out. Established thirteen years.

SIR JAMES MURRAY'S FLUID MAGNESIA. Prepared under the immediate care of the inventor, and established for upwards of thirty years by the profession, for REMOVING BILE, ACIDITIES, and INDIGESTION, restoring APPETITE, preserving a moderate state of the bowels, and dissolving uric acid in GRAVEL and GOUT; also as an easy remedy for SEA SICKNESS, and for the febrile affection incident to childhood, it is invaluable. On the value of Magnesia as a remedial agent it is unnecessary to enlarge; but the Fluid Preparation of Sir James Murray is now the most valued by the profession, as it entirely avoids the possibility of those dangerous concretions usually resulting from the use of the article in powder.

Sold by the sole consignee, Mr. WILLIAM BAILEY, of Wolverhampton; and by all wholesale and retail Druggists and Medicine Agents throughout the British Empire, in bottles, 1s., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 11s., and 21s. each.

☞ The Acidulated Syrup in Bottles, 2s. each.

N.B.—Be sure to ask for "Sir James Murray's Preparation," and to see that his name is stamped on each label in green ink, as follows:—"James Murray, Physician to the Lord Lieutenant."

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and PENETRATING HAIR-BRUSHES.—The tooth-brush performs the highly important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleaning in the most extraordinary manner,—hair never comes loose, 1s. Peculiarly penetrating hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia Bristles, which will not soften like common hair: improved clothes brush, that cleans harmlessly in one-third the usual time; the new Velvet Brush; and immense stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponge.

CAUTION.—Beware of the word "from" Metcalfe's, adopted by some houses.—Metcalfe's Alkaline Tooth Powder, 2s. per box.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.—On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr. Clarke, Cross street, Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London; 28, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street, Manchester; and Horseley-fields, Wolverhampton

MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence.

"Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-taming arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents Water, Steam, or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating the best non-conductors, constitute Milner's Fire-resisting Chambers See certificates of hundreds of tests and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22 No. 642, are removed to their London Depôt, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (adding the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Sample Safes, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire-resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

PRIZE MEDAL—GREAT EXHIBITION.

TRELOAR'S COCOA-NUT FIBRE MATTING is the best and most suitable for the Covering Floors of Offices, Board and Waiting-rooms, and all Places of great resort, combining, as it does, the most extraordinary durability with the comfort and neatness of a carpet. It is also well adapted for stairs, passages, and halls in private houses, and for this purpose a variety of appropriate patterns have been designed Besides the weaving of Cocoa-nut Fibre into textile fabrics, it is extensively used in a prepared state as a substitute for horsehair for stuffing mattresses and cushions Its availability for such a purpose will appear from the fact that it is clean, durable, and elastic, and so obnoxious to vermin that they will not live in it. Sizes and prices of mattresses may be had free on application Among the other articles made of Cocoa-nut Fibre, may be enumerated hearth-rugs, doors and carriage mats, netting for sheep-folds, nose-bags, cordage, scrubbing-brushes and brushes for stable use.

"For the apparel oft proclaims the man"—Hamlet

EVERY WELL-DRESSED MAN KNOWS how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its requirements with a well-cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently doomed to appear in clothes, however costly, that never can become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a deformity in costume, FREDERICK FOX adopts this means of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of its individual wearer, and the purposes it is intended to serve thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that regard for economy which the spirit of the age dictates. F FOX Practical Tailor, 73, Cornhill, same side of the way as the Royal Exchange.

CAUTION.—TO TRADESMEN, MERCHANTS, SHIPPERS, OUTFITTERS, &c.—Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK, this is to give notice, that I am the original and sole proprietor and manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, nor authorise any persons to represent themselves as coming from my establishment, for the purpose of selling the said ink. This Caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public and serious injury to myself.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S PATENT CONCENTRATED MILK.

"Supplies Fresh Milk at all times."—Times, September 16, 1850.

"It was almost (if not quite) equal in flavour and quality to Milk fresh from the Cow."—Captain H. [illegible] Austins, Commander of the Arctic Expedition. H.M.S. Resolute, 1st October, 1851.

"The Milk is most admirable; none should go to sea without it"—Captain Ommaney, H.M.S. Assistance, Arctic Expedition. 25th October, 1851

"The greatest comfort and blessing we had on board our ships in the Arctic Expedition."—Medical Officer's Report to the Lords of the Admiralty. November, 1851.

Preserved in hermetically sealed tins, each tin producing seven times the quantity of pure milk.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S COCOA and MILK, and CHOCOLATE and MILK, are combinations of the Concentrated Milk with the finest Trinidad Cocoa and the choicest French Chocolate, in hermetically sealed tins. These delicious preparations are wholly free from the admixtures so common in the packet Cocoas, and considering their quality are equally expensive; for example, a breakfast cup of Pure Cocoa, combined with milk and sugar, can be had at the cost of a penny, by merely adding boiling water.

THE PRIZE MEDAL at the GREAT EXHIBITION was awarded to these preparations for their Novelty, Utility, and Economy; and they were constantly used in the Refreshment Rooms of the Exhibition, giving universal satisfaction.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S INFANT'S FOOD, is a combination of the Concentrated Milk with pure Farina, and will be found a light and nourishing diet for Invalids as well as Infants, requiring only boiling water for its instant preparation.

The whole of the above are prepared under the immediate inspection of Mr Moore, the Patentee, who was for many years the ordinary medical attendant of the Royal Family in London.

The Finest FRENCH CHOCOLATES in every variety, made expressly for the subscribers by one of the first Paris manufacturers. These Chocolates, it may be observed, are REALLY FRENCH, and are greatly superior to those commonly sold as French, but which are in fact, generally speaking, of English manufacture.

MOORE and BUCKLEY, Ranton Abbey Farm and Works, Staffordshire, and 4, Upper East Smithfield, London; and sold retail by all respectable Grocers and Chemists, &c. in town and country.

BERDOE'S superior light OVERCOAT.—This well-known garment combines, with every quality essential to a really respectable article, that will ensure permanent satisfaction, the additional recommendation of being thoroughly impervious to rain, and has long been reputed one of the most convenient, economical, and valuable garments ever invented. Price 45s and 50s. Not waterproof, 8s. less. A very large Stock for Selection; also of Morning Coats, Shooting Jackets, &c.

96, New Bond street; and 69, Cornhill (only).

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are, beyond doubt, the most scientific and really useful improvement in the art of shirt-making Their superiority does not rest solely upon their being entirely different from all others, but upon the combination of perfect novelty of design with sound practical use, resulting from a study of scientific principles, making them, in fact, the only solid and thoroughly sensible alteration from the old shapes worthy of notice.

There are two qualities, in both of which the principle is strictly carried out, viz six for 40s.; second quality, six for 30s.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.

AS a GENERAL ELECTION is expected in a few weeks, Mr. CROCKFORD is desirous of avoiding the inconveniences experienced on the last occasion, through the influx, at the last moment, of orders for sets of the BOOKS and FORMS required by Agents and Returning Officers. He will therefore be much obliged by immediate intimation, from those who purpose again to use them, of the quantities of each which they are likely to require, that he may make his arrangements accordingly.

It will, however, be understood that such intimations will not be considered as positive orders, until further directions.

The BOOKS and FORMS constituting the series required for an election are as follow:—

Books and Forms for Committees and Agents of Candidates.

1. Canvas Books, strongly bound (counties and boroughs).
2. Committee Register Books (counties and boroughs), large size for central committees; smaller for district committees.
3. Return of Day's Canvas by district committee (counties and boroughs), in quires.
4. Inspector's Poll Books (counties and boroughs).
5. District Committee's Polls Return Books (counties and boroughs).
6. Central Committee's Polls Return Books (counties and boroughs).
7. Check Clerks' Books (counties and boroughs).

9. Committee Memorandum Books, with patent locks, if so ordered.
10. Committee Account Books, with patent locks, if so ordered.
11. Notice to Returning Officer of appointment of agent to prevent personation, in quires.
12. Demand of Bribery Oath, in quires.

For Returning Officers.

13. Poll Books (counties and boroughs).
14. Poll Clerks' Oath for counties; in quires.
15. Poll Clerk's Oath for cities and boroughs, in quires.
16. Instructions to Poll Clerks; in quires.
17. Questions and Oath of Identity (with memorandum for Poll Clerk and Returning Officer), in quires.
18. Bribery Oath (with like memorandum), in quires.
19. Returning Officer's Oath, on parchment.
20. Return of members in a city or borough, on parchment.
21. Return of members in a county, on parchment.

N.B.—The above books and forms are copyright.

The name of the county, city, or borough will be printed in the forms without additional charge, if not less than a week's notice be given.

Orders should state as nearly as possible the number of electors in the place for which the above books and forms are required that the size of the books may be proportioned accordingly; and they should be sent at the earliest period, to prevent disappointment in the supply, which will be unavoidable if great quantities be required at the latest moment.

Mr. Crockford has also just published the SIXTH EDITION of the LAW and PRACTICE of ELECTIONS and of REGISTRATION, by Edward W. Cox, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, containing all the Statutes and Cases decided down to Michaelmas Term, 1851, and a COMPLETE GUIDE to AGENTS for the MANAGEMENT of an ELECTION, and of REGISTRATION, with Precedents of all the Forms and Books required. "To the statutes and to the decisions (such as they are), including the decisions on those clauses in the Friendly Societies Acts, which, according to the latest authorities, are incorporated in the Building Societies Act, Mr. Thompson's book furnishes a guide, of which there was great need, notwithstanding the existence of a Government officer, appointed for the express purpose of keeping these and similar societies in the legal path."—Jurist.

"In the little book before us, Mr. Thompson has succeeded in fulfilling (which is not often done) the promise of the title-page, and has presented to the public a most complete work upon a most important subject."—Morning Chronicle.

"To the large class of persons interested in building and other societies, this is just the sort of book wanted. The complexities that were believed to exist in connection with transactions of this nature, disappear before the explicit treatment of the subject by the author. To his own judicious remarks are superadded explanatory practical statements from the writings and speeches of others. But the work bears the stamp of the highest legal authorities, upwards of one hundred cases and decisions in matters relating to such societies, and having a general bearing, will render the work a valuable auxiliary to shareholders, each of whom should possess a copy."—Globe.

CIRCULATION OF THE FLORIN.—Last Tuesday's Gazette contains a royal proclamation announcing the issue of a new coinage of florins, or tenths of a pound, and ordaining that these pieces of money shall be current and lawful money of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and shall pass as such by the name of florin throughout the kingdom. The new coin has for the obverse her Majesty's effigy crowned with the inscription "Victoria D.G.: Brit.: Reg. F.D.:" and the date of the year; and for the reverse the ensigns armorial of the United Kingdom contained in four shields crosswise, each shield surmounted by the royal crown, with the rose in the centre, and in the compartments between the shields the national emblems of the rose, thistle, and shamrock, surrounded with the words, "One Florin, one-tenth of a pound;" and with a milled graining round the edge.

URGLARIES. CHUBB'S LOCKS.—On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's churchyard, London; 28, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street, Manchester; and Horseley-fields, Wolverhampton.

MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence.

"Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-taming arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. Water, Steam, or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating the best non-conductors, constitute Milner's Fire-resisting Chambers. See certificates of hundreds of tests and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22 No 642, are removed to their London Depôt, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (adding the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Sample Safes, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

Milner's London Depôt, 47A, Moorgate-street, City, near the Bank of England. Milner's Safe Works (the most extensive in the world), Liverpool.

SHIRTS.—WHITELOCK and SON, 166, Strand, (opposite the church, near Somerset-house) invite the attention of gentlemen to the combination of novel improvements now perfecting their celebrated 6s. 6d. SHIRTS, unequalled for comfort, durability, and exact fit. A sample shirt forwarded upon receipt of a post-office order for the amount, with the tight measure of the neck, chest, and wrist of the wearer. They have just received their new patterns for coloured shirts 4s. 6d each, made in the best manner. Patterns sent per post to select from.

SHIRTS.—Patterns of the New Coloured Shirtings in every variety of colours. Upwards of 300 different styles for making FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS, sent per post (free) on receipt of six postage stamps. Price Twenty Shillings the Half-Dozen.

FORD'S REGISTERED SHIRT COLLARS are not sold by any hosiers or drapers. The Collars possess an improved method of fastening, which entirely dispenses with the use of strings, loops, or elastic contrivances—adapted to any size, suitable for once or twice round cravats. May be had in three different sizes, and either round or pointed. Price 11s. 6d per dozen. Two, as samples, sent post-free on receipt of twenty-eight postage stamps.

RICHARD FORD, 185, Strand, London.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION.—Valuable newly-invented very small powerful WAISTCOAT POCKET GLASS, the size of a walnut, to discern minute objects at a distance of from four to five miles, which is found to be invaluable to SPORTSMEN, GENTLEMEN, and GAMEKEEPERS. Price 1l 10s sent free.

TELESCOPES.—A new and most important INVENTION in TELESCOPES possessing such extraordinary powers, that some 3½ inches, with an extra eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double Stars. They supersede every other kind and are of all sizes, for the waistcoat pocket, Shooting, Military purposes, &c.

Opera and Race-course Glasses, with wonderful powers, a minute object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant.

Messrs. S. and B SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—The BEDFORD PANTECHNICON and STORE-ROOMS (late M Collard and Collard's Pianoforte Manufactory), 191, Tottenham-court-road, for the WAREHOUSING of FURNITURE, PIANOS, PAINTINGS, and every description of valuable property, are fitted up into separate and well-ventilated compartments so that each depositor can have his own lock and key, and from the great extent of the premises the Proprietor is enabled to charge much less than similar establishments. Estimates, including packing, removing, &c free of expense.

For terms and prospectus apply on the premises; or of the Proprietor, Mr W TINGEY, Polytechnic Silversmith Establishment, 312, Regent street. Advances made, if required, on very moderate terms.

PRIZE MEDAL—GREAT EXHIBITION.

TRELOAR'S COCOA-NUT FIBRE MATTING is the best and most suitable for the Covering Floors of Offices, Board and Waiting-rooms, and all Places of great resort, combining, as it does, the most extraordinary durability with the comfort and neatness of a carpet. It is also well adapted for stairs, passages, and halls in private houses, and for this purpose a variety of appropriate patterns have been designed. Besides the weaving of Cocoa-nut Fibre into textile fabrics, it is extensively used in a prepared state, as a substitute for horsehair for stuffing mattresses and cushions. Its availability for such a purpose will appear from the fact that it is clean, durable, and elastic, and so obnoxious to vermin that they will not live in it. Sizes and prices of mattresses may be had free, on application. Among the other articles made of Cocoa-nut Fibre, may be enumerated hearth-rugs, doors and carriage mats, netting for sheep-folds, nose-bags, cordage, scrubbing-brushes, and brushes for stable use.

T. TRELOAR MANUFACTURER 42, LUDGATE-HILL.

GOLD CHAINS BY WEIGHT AND WORKMANSHIP.

WATHERSTON and BROGDEN, MANUFACTURING GOLDSMITHS, Established A D. 1798, having been awarded a Prize Medal for their Diamond and Enamel Vase, at the Great Exhibition, beg to announce that obedience to the numerous calls made upon them, they have thrown open their Manufactory to the public at Manufacturers' Prices. The system of weighing Chains against sovereigns being one of the greatest frauds ever practised on the public, WATHERSTON and BROGDEN sell their Gold at its bullion value, their profit being made on the workmanship alone, which is charged with reference to the intricacy or simplicity of the pattern. A general assortment of Jewellery, all made on the premises.

Manufactory, 16, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London.

AWARDED A PRIZE MEDAL UNDER CLASS XIX

TO THE CARPET TRADE.—ROYAL VICTORIA FELT CARPETING.—The PATENT WOOLLEN CLOTH COMPANY beg to inform the Trade that their NEW PATTERNS in CARPETS and TABLE COVERS, for the present season are now out, and will be found far superior to any they have hitherto produced, both in style and variety. The public can be supplied at all respectable Carpet-houses in London and the country. The Company deem it necessary to caution the public against parties who are selling an inferior description of goods as Felted Carpets, which will not bear comparison with their manufacture, either in style or durability; and that the genuineness of the goods can always be tested by purchasers, as the Company's Carpets are all stamped at both ends of the piece, "Royal Victoria Carpeting, London," with the royal arms in the centre.

The Company's Manufactories are at Elmwood Mills, Leeds; and Borough-road, London. Wholesale Warehouses at 8, LOVE-LANE, WOOD-STREET, CHEAPSIDE.

LOAN and EXCHANGE OFFICE, No. 9, John-street, Adelphi, London.—Mr. HAINES renews his offer of services as Money Broker for the negociation of Loans on Note of Hand, Railway Shares, Bonds and Debentures, in suitable amounts, from 100l. to 10 000l. at 4 per cent. for periods not less than twelve months, or on the deposit of plate, jewels, or other valuables, and promises the most favourable terms current in relation to the security offered.

Communications per post will receive immediate attention, and held strictly private and confidential.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

At home from Ten till Five.

NO. 79, CHEAPSIDE, No. 79.—HAIR-DYE.— FREDK SACKER now offers to his Friends and the Public a DYE more permanent and produces (in one third of the time) a more beautiful black or brown head of hair than any dye ever used before. Whiskers dyed in a few minutes. Private rooms for dyeing. Sold only at SACKER'S Perfumery Warehouse and Hair-cutting Saloons. Cases, 3s. 6d, 5s 6d, 10s 6d and 21s. "For the apparel oft proclaims the man."—Hamlet.

EVERY WELL-DRESSED MAN KNOWS how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and ... requirements with a well-cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured. Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently doomed to appear in clothes, however costly, that never can become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a deformity in costume, FREDERICK FOX adopts this means of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years, always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of its individual wearer, and the purposes it is intended to serve, thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that regard for economy which the spirit of the age dictates.—F FOX, Practical Tailor, 73, Cornhill, same side of the way as the Royal Exchange.

FRUIT-TREES, FLOWER-BEDS, &c.— Garden Netting, for protecting ... and birds, or as a fence for fowls, pigeons, tulip and seed beds, can be had in any length or quantity, at 1½d one yard wide, 3d per yard, two yards wide, or 6d per yard, four yards wide, from JOHN KING FARLOW'S Fishing-rod and Net Manufactory, 5, Crooked-lane, London bridge. The above Netting being tanned, will stand exposure to the weather, and being made by hand, can be cut in any form or direction without running. Forwarded to any part of the kingdom on the receipt of post office order or reference in town.

The attention of Shippers and Merchants is respectfully called to the above article, now in large demand in the British Colonies and United States, where it commands always the highest prices. Shipping Orders executed in a superior manner, and on the shortest notice.

CAUTION.—TO TRADESMEN, MERCHANTS, SHIPPERS, OUTFITTERS, &c. Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK, this is to give notice, that I am the original and sole proprietor and manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller or authorise any persons to represent themselves as coming from my establishment, for the purpose of selling the said ink. This Caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public and serious injury to myself.

SIR JAMES MURRAY'S FLUID MAGNESIA. Prepared under the immediate care of the inventor, and established for upwards of thirty years by the profession, for REMOVING BILE, ACIDITIES and INDIGESTION, restoring APPETITE, preserving a moderate state of the bowels, and dissolving uric acid in GRAVEL and GOUT; also as an easy remedy for SEA SICKNESS, and for the febrile affection incident to childhood, it is invaluable. On the value of Magnesia as a remedial agent it is unnecessary to enlarge; but the Fluid Preparation of Sir James Murray is now the most valued by the profession, as it entirely avoids the possibility of those dangerous concretions usually resulting from the use of the article in powder.

Sold by the sole consignee, Mr WILLIAM BAILEY of Wolverhampton; and by all wholesale and retail Druggists and Medicine Agents throughout the British Empire, in bottles, 1s, 2s. 6d, 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 11s., and 21s. each.

BERDOE'S superior light OVERCOAT.—This well-known garment combines, with every quality essential to a really respectable article, that will ensure permanent satisfaction, the additional recommendation of being thoroughly impervious to rain, and has long been reputed one of the most convenient, economical, and valuable garments ever invented. Price 45s and 50s. Not waterproof, 8s. less. A very large stock for Selection; also of Morning Coats, Shooting Jackets, &c.

96, New Bond street; and 69, Cornhill (only).

PURE COCOA.—HANDFORD and DAVIES'S pure granulated COCOA, in 1 lb. packets, at 1s. per lb. being the best of the four samples pronounced by the Analytical Sanitary Commission to be genuine out of the whole of the samples tested (vide the Lancet, of May 31st, page 610); also their COMPO SOLUBLE COCOA, for parties to whom the full flavour of pure cocoa is unpalatable. It consists of fine arrowroot, cocoa, and sugar only, and is a very superior article of its kind. It is very readily prepared by pouring boiling water on to it. Price 1s 4d. per lb.

Finest Mocha Coffee, 1s. 8d.; finest Jamaica ditto 1s. 6d.; Java ditto, 1s. 4d.; Colombo ditto, 1s. 2d.; Costa Ricardo, 1s; Congo Tea, strong and useful, adapted for general family use, 3s. 8d. per lb.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S PATENT CONCENTRATED MILK.

"Supplies Fresh Milk at all times." Times, September 16, 1850.

"It was almost (if not quite) equal in flavour and quality to milk fresh from the Cow."—Captain H T Austin, Commander of the Arctic Expedition. H M S Resolute, 1st October, 1851.

"The Milk is most admirable; none should go to sea without it."—Captain Ommaney, H M.S. Assistance, Arctic Expedition, 25th October, 1851.

"The greatest comfort and blessing we had on board our ships in the Arctic Expedition."—Medical Officer's Report to the Lords of the Admiralty. November 1851.

Preserved in hermetically sealed tins, each tin producing seven times the quantity of pure milk.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S COCOA and MILK, and CHOCOLATE and MILK, are combinations of the Concentrated Milk with the finest Trinidad Cocoa and the choicest French Chocolate, in hermetically sealed tins. These delicious preparations are wholly free from the admixtures so common in the packet Cocoas, and considering their quality are equally expensive; for example, a breakfast cup of Pure Cocoa, combined with milk and sugar, can be had at the cost of a penny, by merely adding boiling water.

THE PRIZE MEDAL at the GREAT EXHIBITION was awarded to these preparations for their Novelty, Utility, and Economy; and they were constantly used in the Refreshment Rooms of the Exhibition, giving universal satisfaction.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S INFANT'S FOOD, is a combination of the Concentrated Milk with pure Farina, and will be found a light and nourishing diet for Invalids as well as Infants, requiring only boiling water for its instant preparation.

The whole of the above are prepared under the immediate inspection of Mr Moore, the Patentee, who was for many years the ordinary medical attendant of the Royal Family in London.

The Finest FRENCH CHOCOLATES in every variety, made expressly for the subscribers by one of the first Paris manufacturers. These Chocolates, it may be observed, are REALLY FRENCH, and are greatly superior to those commonly sold as French, but which are in fact, generally speaking, of English manufacture.

MOORE and BUCKLEY, Ranton Abbey Farm and Works, Staffordshire; and 4, Upper East Smithfield, London, and sold retail by all respectable Grocers and Chemists, &c in town and country.

DESCRIPTIVE PARTICULARS

The estates in the town and county of the town of Galway embrace a considerable portion of the most valuable part of the [illegible] and suburbs of Galway, including the well-known and important Salmon and Eel Fisheries.

The new Weirs and Cribs for the Salmon Fishery are now nearly completed by the Board of Works, who last year paid the Receiver 200l a compensation for the season, besides which the Eel Fishery was let for 60l for the season.

The extensive Drainage Works, now nearly completed by the Board of Works, have added considerably to the water-power of the [illegible]

The Docks [illegible] extensive, and vessels of large burden can discharge [illegible] at the quays. A Tidal Basin and new quay have been recently constructed.

The rents are principally ground-rents of premises of great value, embracing large Warehouses, Mills, Distillery, and Houses of a superior description in the best part of the town.

The lands comprising the county property are situate within moderate distances of the excellent market towns of Ballinasloe and Loughrea.

Those estates offer a most secure and advantageous investment for purchasers.

Proposals for the purchase of those estates, or any portion of them will be received up to the 10th of May next, by Mr Litton, the Solicitor having the carriage of this sale, who will submit same [to] the Commissioners, and if approved of deeds of conveyance, with a Parliamentary Title, can be at once obtained.

No proposal will be received after the 10th of May.

Dated this 2nd day of April, 1852.

HENRY CAREY, Secretary.

[illegible] acres of good arable and meadow land divided into compact farms, and let to a very respectable tenantry, with a slate quarry, let on lease, together with some very desirable building ground, most favourably situate on the shore, and in the town and borough of Pwllheli. The estate is situate within three miles of the town, and principally on the turnpike-road from thence to Carnarvon. A portion of the land offers delightful sites for the erection of a residence, being well sheltered, and commanding a grand and extensive view of the bay, and the Merionethshire and South Wales mountains. A trout stream runs through the property, the roads are good, and the Chester and Holyhead Railway, within sixteen miles will be shortly completed; there are at present two coaches passing the property. Particulars may be had of Mr. Green, Auctioneer and Estate Agent 28, Old Bond street.

In HAMPSHIRE, one mile and a quarter from Christchurch, and three hours journey from London.—The Whitehayes Estate, formerly the residence of the late Lord Keane.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has been favoured with instructions from the proprietor to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, MAY 12 (unless in the meantime disposed of), a much-admired and valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE; comprising the elegant family residence known as "Whitehayes," with its beautiful lawns, shrubberies, and plantations, productive gardens and orchard, and exceedingly rich grass land, the whole comprising nearly 18 acres, in a ring fence, and in the highest order, a very considerable sum having been lately judiciously expended on the property in draining the land, the erection of a very substantial and ornamental wall to inclose it from the high road, &c. Mr Green can, with the greatest confidence, recommend this property to any party seeking a really good [re]sidence in a healthful and fashionable locality.—Particulars [may be] had at the principal hotels and inns at Christchurch, Ringwood, Lyndhurst, Redbridge, Southampton, and Lymington; at Garraway's; and at the offices of Mr. Green, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond-street, where a cosmoramic view of the property may be seen.

QUEEN-SQUARE, BLOOMSBURY.—Freehold Residence, with Stabling.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, MAY 26, at One (if not in the meantime disposed of by private contract), the capital substantially built FREEHOLD FAMILY RESIDENCE, No. 22, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, in the best part of this desirable and central [situation, w]ith large garden in the rear, communicating with excellent leasehold stabling in Greville-mews, with spacious stable-yard: the whole premises being of the estimated value of 200l. per annum, and presenting a singularly desirable opportunity for residence or investment.—Particulars may be obtained at Garraway's; of Brooke Turner, Esq Solicitor, 1 Red Lion square; and of Mr. Green, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond street.

HAMPSHIRE.—The Botleigh Grange Estate, within five miles of Southampton.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16 (unless previously disposed of) the exceedingly desirable and important FREEHOLD ESTATE of Botleigh Grange, consisting of a most substantial and elegant Elizabethan mansion, with all the appendages for the residence of a first-rate family, surrounded by well-arranged gardens and pleasure-grounds, approached by carriage drives from the entrance lodges, and seated on a gentle eminence in the midst of a beautifully timbered and finely undulated park of about sixty acres, intersected by a trout stream, forming itself in the centre of the park into a large and ornamental sheet of water. In addition to the park there are several fields of rich arable, and the estate comprises altogether about 100 acres, remarkably compact and beautifully wooded. This desirable property combines many undeniable advantages and the situation is peculiarly favourable, being within five miles of Southampton, only a mile and a half from the Botleigh Station, and but two hours' journey from London.—Particulars may be obtained at Garraway's, and of Mr. Green, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond-street.

CHELTENHAM.—Important Freehold Property for Sale, comprising about twenty acres, situate close to the town of Cheltenham, and being part of the Park Estate, presenting very eligible sites for building purposes.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16 (unless in the meantime disposed of by private treaty), a most desirable PROPERTY, possessing great advantages for the investment of capital as a building speculation for twenty villa residences, or for the erection of a mansion, in the midst of delightful grounds, laid out with the greatest taste by an eminent landscape gardener, comprising a broad gravel esplanade, meandrous walks, well-grown flowering shrubs, ornamental timber, and a beautiful sheet of water, well sheltered by the distant hills, and almost in the heart of the fashionable town of Cheltenham, together with a small elegant Villa, of the Italian style of architecture at the entrance; and a substantial building, intended for stables, erected at a considerable outlay, and which might be easily converted into a residence. The attention of capitalists is specially invited to this property, which presents peculiar advantages, beyond the limits of an advertisement to describe, and will be more fully entered upon in the printed particulars, to be obtained in the course of a few days, of G. G. Payne, Esq. Tivoli, Cheltenham; Mr. Howard, Solicitor, Cheltenham; the principal hotels at the same place; at Garraway's; at Mr Green's Offices 28, Old Bond-street, and upon personal application at the Royal Insurance Company's Offices, Royal Insurance-buildings, Liverpool.

Apply by letter only, to "Y. Y." 129, Fenchurch-street, City.

Situations, Wanted and Vacant.

LAW.—The Advertiser, who has had many years' experience, is desirous of procuring a situation in a Solicitor's office in the country. He is competent to manage Stewardship, Office Accounts, and Bookkeeping; to draw Bills of Costs; and is fully conversant with the general routine of business. Satisfactory references will be given.

Address, "J. B." at Mr. Andrew Thomas's, Castle-street, Truro, Cornwall.

LAW.—Wanted, a Situation, in July next, by the Advertiser, who will then have been six years in a country office. He is competent to draw ordinary drafts, abstracts, &c. under the superintendence of the principal, and has a general knowledge of the business of the County Courts and Petty Sessions. References will be given.

Apply to "Y. T." Post-office, Christchurch, Hants.

LAW.—The Advertiser, aged twenty-five, wishes an immediate Engagement. He is acquainted with the routine of a country solicitor's office, and is competent to abstract and draw ordinary deeds, and to attend to magisterial and tax business in the absence of the principal. Salary moderate. Reference to employers, and testimonials of magistrates, to whom the advertiser has been assistant-clerk.

Address, "T. R." (No. 473), Law Times Office.

LAW.—Wanted, by an experienced Clerk, who will shortly be disengaged, a Situation in a Country Office. The advertiser understands preparing abstracts and common drafts, stewardship and other accounts, and would be found generally useful. Unexceptionable references to character and competency.

Address, "H." (No. 473), Law Times Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

LAW.—Wanted, a Re-engagement as Conveyancing and General Clerk, in an office either in town or country. The Advertiser was articled in the country, and has since been twelve months a pupil, and afterwards engaged in a Conveyancer's chambers in town, and for some months past has been engaged to supply the place of a junior partner in a firm in the country during his ill health. Admitted in Trinity Term. Age, 24.

Address, Mr. H. M. Robinson, Battle, Sussex.

LAW.—An efficient Managing Clerk wishes for Employment. He is qualified, with or without assistance, to draw all kinds of drafts, look into titles, and advise on abstracts, cases, &c. and is willing to make himself generally useful.

Address, "Z." (No. 473), Law Times Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

LAW.—A Gentleman, who has lately been admitted, wishes to undertake the management of the Conveyancing Department of some good office. The whole period of his articles was spent in a large Conveyancing Office in the Country, and the last twelve months in the chambers of an eminent Conveyancer. The best references will be given.

Address "H. F." Messrs. Swale and Wilson, Booksellers, 21, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

LAW.—A Solicitor, in good practice, has a Vacancy for a gentleman of respectability as an Articled Clerk. He would have the advantage of the best society, great opportunities of learning his profession, and also the use of a very extensive law library.

Apply by letter, to "G. C. B." Post-office, Cheltenham.

LAW.—Wanted, in a Country Office, a Conveyancing Clerk, competent to draw drafts commonly prepared in an Attorney's office. A gentleman who has passed a year with a conveyancer, and wishes to improve himself and gain experience, will find the situation to his mind. Salary, 120*l.* a year.

Apply by letter, post-paid, with references, which will be very carefully investigated, to "H. R." at Mr. Lowe's, Law Stationer, Bell-yard, Temple-bar, London.

LAW.—Wanted, a Clerk (who must be an admitted Attorney) of good abilities and address competent to conduct cases in the County Courts and before Magistrates, and to assist in the general business of an office of large and varied practice.

Apply, by letter, with full particulars and salary required, to Duignard and Hemmant, Solicitors, Walsall.

LAW.—Wanted, an experienced Conveyancing Clerk, about forty years of age, as Secretary to a private Gentleman. Salary 100*l.* a year, with other advantages.

Address, full particulars of age, former situations, when left, cause of leaving, salary required, length of character—no others will be noticed,—to "A. Y." Mr. Brooks, 209, Piccadilly.

WANTED, in a Gentleman's Family in London, a MAN-SERVANT, to do the usual work of a family where no other man-servant is kept.

Apply, with particulars, to "W. C." (No. 473), Law Times Office.

Practices, Wanted and for Sale.

LAW PRACTICE. — To be Disposed of, the business of a country practitioner in a mercantile town in the north. The office has been established upwards of 100 years.

Apply, by letter, to "A. B." No. 473, Law Times office.

Partnerships, Wanted and for Sale.

LAW PARTNERSHIP.—A Gentleman who has been admitted, and in active practice in the country for seven years, is desirous of entering into Partnership with a gentleman of established and increasing business. The advertiser is prepared to pay a moderate premium. Satisfactory references will be given and required.

Applications, from principals only, to be addressed to "M." at Mr. A. M'A. Low's, Solicitor, 65, Chancery-lane, London.

LAW PARTNERSHIP. — To Solicitors and Attorneys.—In consequence of the death of an eminent Attorney, in the first commercial seaport in the world, where he carried on an extensive business for upwards of 35 years, and realised an immense fortune, an opening now presents itself to any talented and strictly honourable Attorney, who would be able to practise in the various departments of the Superior and Local Courts. The Advertiser wishes to enter into Partnership, or otherwise, with a Gentleman who is in possession of the above requisites. There will not be any outlay required, as he is possessed of the lease, business, office, library, and extensive and lucrative connection, and an introduction to the present clients. This being an opportunity that seldom presents itself, most respectable references will be required and given. None need apply whose character will not bear the strictest investigation.

For further particulars, apply to Mr. John Williams, 54, Hanover-street, Liverpool.

LAW PARTNERSHIP.—A Gentleman who has been admitted, and in active practice in the country for nearly four years, is desirous of entering into Partnership with a gentleman of standing in the Profession, and having an old-established business who may wish to be relieved from close attention thereto. The most unexceptionable references will be given and required.

Address to "V. W." (No 473), Law Times Office.

IF GEORGE CARR, who is described in the Will of "Ann Pulleine, late of Market Weighton, in the county of York, widow," as "of the town and county of the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, gentleman," and Mary Carr, who is described in the same Will as "of Newcastle-upon-Tyne aforesaid, widow," apply to us, the undersigned, they will be informed of the interest they take under the said Will, and if dead, any person giving us information of their death and burial will be rewarded.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ESTATE AGENCY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—Auctioneers and estate agents monopolise much of the business relating to land and house property. Why should not the attorney and solicitor step into their provinces as part of his own? The one rule is qualification; and who so well qualified? Such a step would double the profits of many honest men. AN ATTORNEY.

The Limerick Chronicle says that Judge Perrin fined the sheriff of Dundalk 50*l*. for not having a dinner ready for him at the opening of the Assizes.

A COLONIAL JUDGE IN DIFFICULTIES.—The following extract from a private letter describes one of the effects of the gold discoveries in Australia:—"He (the judge) has no servants, his horses are turned out to grass, and, being an invalid, he is pushed to court in a bath-chair by his sons."

BURGLARIES. — CHUBB'S LOCKS.— On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the incipal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their ill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to de- ..t by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind ... the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr. Clarke, ..., Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight ...e ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endea- d to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they ...ce it open, but without avail. SHIRTS.—WHITELOCK and SON, 166, Strand (opposite the church, near Somerset-house) invite the atten tion of gentlemen to the combination of novel improvements now perfecting their celebrated 6s. 6d. SHIRTS, unequalled for com fort, durability, and exact fit. A sample shirt forwarded upon receipt of a post-office order for the amount, with the tight mea sure of the neck, chest, and wrist of the wearer. They have jus received their new patterns for coloured shirts 4s. 6d. each, made in the best manner. Patterns sent per post to select from.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are, beyond doubt the most scientific and really useful improvement in the ar of shirt-making. Their superiority does not rest solely upon thei being entirely different from all others, but upon the combinatio.. of perfect novelty of design with sound practical use, resulting from a study of scientific principles, making them, in fact, the only solid and thoroughly sensible alteration from the old shapes worthy of notice.

There are two qualities, in both of which the principle is strictl, carried out, viz. six for 40s.; second quality, six for 30s

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT, as shown in the Grea.. Exhibition, Class 20, No. 23, is a garment made entirely without gathers. These auxiliaries to the shirt have hitherto been considered indispensable, but, like everything else where the in genious mind is directed to getting rid of complication, simplicity is proved to be the attribute of perfection. It may be confidently eulogized for its nicety of fit and great ease and comfort.—From the Morning Herald.—At WILLIAM REID'S, 51, Conduit-street, Regent-street. PRIZE MEDAL.—GREAT EXHIBITION.

TRELOAR'S COCOA-NUT FIBRE MATTING is the best and most suitable for the Covering Floors of Offices, Board and Waiting-rooms, and all Places of great resort, combining, as it does, the most extraordinary durability with the comfort and neatness of a carpet. It is also well adapted for stairs, passages, and halls in private houses, and for this pur pose a variety of appropriate patterns have been designed. Besides the weaving of Cocoa-nut Fibre into textile fabrics, it is extensively used in a prepared state, as a substitute for horsehair, for stuffing mattresses and cushions. Its availability for such a purpose will appear from the fact that it is clean, durable, and elastic, and so obnoxious to vermin that they will not live in it. Sizes and prices of mattresses may be had free, on application. Among the other articles made of Cocoa-nut Fibre, may be enumerated hearth-rugs, doors and carriage mats, netting for sheep-folds, nose-bags, cordage, scrubbing-brushes, and brushes for stable use.

T. TRELOAR MANUFACTURER 42, LUDGATE-HILL

GOLD CHAINS BY TROY WEIGHT AND WORKMANSHIP.

WATHERSTON and BROGDEN, MANU-FACTURING GOLDSMITHS, Established A.D. 1798, having been awarded a Prize Medal for their Diamond and Enamel Vase, at the Great Exhibition, beg to announce that in obedience to the numerous calls made upon them, they have thrown open their Manufactory to the public at Manufacturers' Prices. The system of weighing Chains against sovereigns being one of the greatest frauds ever practised on the public, WATHERSTON and BROGDEN sell their Gold at its bullion value; their profit being made on the workmanship alone, which is charged with reference to the intricacy or simplicity of the pattern. A general assortment of Jewellery, all made on the premises.

Manufactory, 16, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London.

AWARDED A PRIZE MEDAL UNDER CLASS XIX.

TO THE CARPET TRADE. — ROYAL VICTORIA FELT CARPETING. — The PATENT WOOLLEN CLOTH COMPANY beg to inform the Trade that their NEW PATTERNS in CARPETS and TABLE COVERS, for the present season are now out, and will be found far superior to any they have hitherto produced, both in style and variety. The public can be supplied at all respectable Carpet-houses in London and the country. The Company deem it necessary to caution the public against parties who are selling an inferior description of goods as Felted Carpets, which will not bear comparison with their manufacture, either in style or durability; and that the genuine- ness of the goods can always be tested by purchasers, as the Com- pany's Carpets are all stamped at both ends of the piece, "Royal Victoria Carpeting, London," with the royal arms in the centre.

The Company's Manufactories are at Elmwood Mills, Leeds; and Borough-road, London. Wholesale Warehouses at 8, LOVE-LANE, WOOD-STREET, CHEAPSIDE.

"For the apparel oft proclaims the man."—Hamlet.

EVERY WELL-DRESSED MAN KNOWS how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly under- stands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its re- quirements with a well-cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured. Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently doomed to appear in clothes, however costly, that never can become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a deformity in costume, FREDERICK FOX adopts this means of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years, always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of its individual wearer, and the purposes it is intended to serve, thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that regard for economy which the spirit of the age dictates.—F. FOX, Practical Tailor, 73, Cornhill, same side of the way as the Royal Exchange.

NO. 79, CHEAPSIDE, No. 79.—HAIR-DYE.— FREDK. SACKER now offers to his Friends and the Public a DYE more permanent, and produces (in one-third of the time) a more beautiful black or brown head of hair than any dye ever used before. Adult Funeral, with handsome coffin, mutes, hearse and pair, coach and pair, plumes of feathers, velvets, pages, &c. complete		0	9
Adult Walking Funeral, with neat coffin, mutes, bearers, &c. complete		9	15
Child's Carriage Funeral	1	12	0

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the require- ments, and consequently inflicts twofold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 10l. 10s. A first- rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete fo 50 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 4l.; tradesmen's, 6l., 8l. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to a cemetery, with two horses, 1l. 11s. 6d.; single horse, 1l. 1s.; hea... or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each.—City-road, next Bunhill- fields Burial-ground. Originated in 1842.

SEYSSEL ASPHALTE.

LEGAL AND OTHER IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS CAN BE EFFECTUALLY PROTECTED FROM DAMP AND VERMIN.

DAMP AND GASEOUS EXHALATIONS.

SANITARY MEASURES

MEMBERS of BOARDS of HEALTH are especially directed to the most EFFECTIVE MEANS which they can ADOPT to PREVENT the injurious and often FATAL EFFECTS upon the HEALTH of the COMMUNITY, arising from exhalations that are produced from moisture, decayed animal matter (as in grave- yards), stagnant water, and collections of fetid refuse, tending to produce a miasmatic state of atmosphere. In situations so affected, the impervious quality of the ASPHALTE of SEYSSEL renders it the most perfect PAVEMENT or COVERING that can be relied upon for hermetically closing, and thereby preventing the rising of moisture and the escape of noxious vapours. The present exten- sive application of this material for covering roofs, terraces, and arches, for preventing the percolation of wet, is strong evidence of its effectiveness for the above purposes.

CHEAP AND DURABLE ROOFING.

F. M'NEILL & CO.'S PATENT ASPHALTED ROOFING FELT.

[PRICE ONE PENNY PER SQUARE FOOT.]

As a roofing it is light, durable and effective. Half the strength of timber used for slates or tiles only is necessary, and is par- ticularly desirable for farm buildings, workshops, and emigrants' houses; supplied in long lengths by 32 inches wide, and easily ap- plied by unpractised hands.

It is an excellent covering for Verandas, desirable to form light ceilings, and to place under slates, tiles, or metal, to counteract the heat of the sun, and the wet and frost, to top rooms, and church roofs.

Also thick HAIR FELT for deadening sound under floors, and VERY THICK HAIR FELT for clothing the boilers and pipes of the steam engine, saving 20 per cent. in fuel.

A WATERPROOF BITUMINOUS FELT, for lining damp walls, free from odour, and can be papered on or coloured, and is a very effective remedy. Price One Penny per Square Foot.

Samples and full directions, with illustrations on the cheap con- struction of roofs (which any carpenter can follow), sent post free, and orders by post executed. Experienced workmen also sent out. Established thirteen years.

A SUBSTITUTE for PAINT, and to PROMOTE CLEANLINESS, which at all times is necessarily conducive to HEALTH; and this, as well as economy, is greatly promoted by substituting, for the noxious process of painting with oil and white lead, STEPHENS'S ORIGINAL STAINS and DYES for WOOD, to resemble Oak, Mahogany, Satin, and Rose-wood. Every original invention, when known and established, attracts a host of imitators ready to seize on and profit by another's ingenuity. So in the case of these Stains and Dyes, several imitators have sprung up; but the original inventor begs to assure the public that the time he has bestowed upon these articles to render them perfect ensures against disappointment in their use; his well-known ex- perience in the preparation of colours enabling him to effect the most perfect imitations of the various ornamental woods, reflecting all the beauty of the natural grain. ... prepared and sold by HENRY STEPHENS, No. 54, ... street, Blackfriars-road, London, in bottles at 6d. and 1s. ... at 8s. per gallon. London: John Crockford, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

THE LAW RELATING TO MASTER AND SERVANT, comprising Domestic and Menial Servants and Clerks, Husbandmen, and Persons employed in the different [illegible] tions, all the Cases up to the present time, and a copious Index. By CHARLES J. B. HERTSLET, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s. 6d. boards; 8s. cloth; 9s. 6d half-calf; 10s 6d. calf.
"A little work on the Law relating to Master and Servant, by Mr. C. J. B. Hertslet, has just been issued, which will prove valuable to all classes, and is calculated to prevent wrongs and inconveniences which are often inflicted or submitted to on each side through ignorance of the actual nature of the responsibilities which exist. The various decisions in connection with the subject appear to have been digested with much care; and the author has collected those statutes which contain general regulations in reference to the contract between the employer and the employed, as well as those relating to particular occupations. By persons engaged in trade and manufactures, with large numbers of clerks and workmen, as well as ordinary servants, such a volume has long been wanted."—Times.

CAUTION.—TO TRADESMEN, MERCHANTS, SHIPPERS, OUTFITTERS, &c.—Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the trade and others a spurious article under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK, this is to give notice, that I am the original and sole proprietor and manufacturer of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, nor authorise any persons to represent themselves as coming from my establishment, for the purpose of selling the said ink. This Caution is published by me to prevent further imposition upon the public and serious injury to myself.

Situations, Wanted and Vacant.

TO SOLICITORS.—A Solicitor, who is a good conveyancer, having recently commenced practice in the country, desires to devote a portion of his leisure time just at present to the drawing ordinary draft deeds, perusing abstracts of title, advising in cases or the like from written instructions sent him by any respectable legal firm requiring temporary assistance in conveyancing. As an increase of connexions is desired, emolument will be deemed a secondary consideration.
Address "LEX," care of CHARLES WILKINSON, Esq. Solicitor, Kendal.

LAW.—Wanted, by the Advertiser, aged 26, a Situation in a Solicitor's Office, in town or country, as Copying and General Clerk, or in any other office where a good and expeditious writer is required. He would be found desirous of giving every satisfaction, and can give references as to character, &c.
Address "A. B." 4, Charles-place, York-road, Lambeth.

LAW.—Wanted, by a Gentleman, who was admitted last Hilary Term, and has been many years in the Profession in the country, a Situation, either as Managing or other Clerk, in an Attorney's office; the Advertiser is accustomed to Conveyancing and the general business of a country office. The highest testimonials as to respectability and attention to business can be given. Salary moderate.
Address, post-paid, "A. Z." (No. 474), LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

LAW.—A Gentleman of experience and competent to Manage the Conveyancing or General Business of a respectable Country Solicitor, is wishful for an Engagement. References highly respectable.
Address "W. B." (No. 474), LAW TIMES Office, Essex-street, Strand.

LAW.—A Managing Clerk, who is well acquainted with Conveyancing, Common Law, Assize, Sessions, and County Court Practice, wants a permanent Situation in the Country; the Advertiser having left his situation in consequence of his late Principal taking a partner. Not articled. Age thirty-five.
Address "LEX," Mr. JOHN COLBRAN's, Bookseller, High-street, Tunbridge-wells.

LAW.—A Young Man, aged 21, desires an Engagement generally to assist. Has been five years with a Solicitor in the City, and can have an unexceptionable character. Is fully acquainted with the general routine of an Attorney's office, and knows the public offices well. Salary, 1*l.* 5s. per week.
Address, pre-paid, A. TAYLOR, 79, King William street, City. Country not objected to.

LAW.—Wanted, a Situation as Conveyancing or Managing Clerk either in town or country. The Advertiser has been four years the managing clerk of the firm to whom he was articled; is an experienced draughtsman, and is well acquainted with Common Law and Equity, and the practice of the Courts. Salary not less than 150*l.*
Address, "R. J. W." (No 474), LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

LAW.—An experienced Managing Clerk, who has been a pupil of a Conveyancer, wishes for employment. He is qualified, with or without assistance, to manage the conveyancing department, is acquainted with the other branches of the Profession, and willing to make himself generally useful.
Address, "Z" Box Cottage, Totness, Devon.

LAW.—A Solicitor of long standing and respectability in London, is desirous of taking (in conjunction with his own practice), the Management of an Office there. To any Solicitor anxious to be relieved altogether, or partly, from the fatigues of business, the present is an eligible opportunity.
Refer to "H." Messrs. STEVENS and NORTON, 26, Bell-yard, Lincoln's-Inn.

LAW.—Wanted, a Clerk, to take the management of an office a few miles from town. He must be a married man, with a competent knowledge of conveyancing, poor laws, magisterial business, and otherwise acquainted with the routine of a country office. Salary 75*l.* with apartments rent free, which he must furnish.
Address "J. J. C." Post-office, Brentford.

LAW.—Wanted, in a Solicitor's Office in the Country, a Clerk, capable of keeping office books and accounts, and who has a general knowledge of country practice. Unexceptionable references will be required.
Address to "A. B." at Mr. WRIGHT's, 7, Cursitor-street, Chancery-lane.

LAW.—Wanted, a Common Law Managing Clerk, to conduct the business of an office without the superintendence of the principal. None need apply who have been articled, or whose practical knowledge, as well as character, will not bear strict investigation. Salary, 100*l.* a-year.
Apply by letter, stating full particulars, to Mr. NETTLETON, 16, Chester-terrace, Eaton-square.

MR. MURRAY, late of the Taxing-Master's Office, Staple Inn, begs to offer his services to Solicitors in making out and taxing Bills of Costs. Great losses are, Mr. Murray is convinced, sustained by the Profession from the imperfect attention which these matters receive, and he believes that his long and extensive experience would render his assistance valuable where books have been irregularly kept, arrears allowed to accumulate, or where, from the pressure of other matters or other causes, this important branch of business has been neglected.
No. 6, Staple Inn, January, 1852.

Partnerships, Wanted and for Sale.

LAW.—A Solicitor, of considerable practice in London, will be willing to treat for a Copartnership with a Gentleman, who would be able to relieve him of the conveyancing, and attend to the Chancery departments; the Advertiser has been in practice seventeen years. A Gentleman having a moneyed connection would be preferred.
Letters to be addressed to "J. W." care of Mr. TAYLOR, Law Stationer, Chancery-lane.

LAW PARTNERSHIP.—A Gentleman who has been admitted, and in active practice in the country for seven years, is desirous of entering into Partnership with a gentleman of established and increasing business. The advertiser is prepared to pay a moderate premium. Satisfactory references will be given and required.
Applications, from principals only, to be addressed to "M." at Mr. A. M'A. Low's, Solicitor, 65, Chancery-lane, London.

THE LONDON AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSURANCE SOCIETY.
Capital, One Million.

The Sixth Annual General Meeting of this Society was held at the Office, No. 32, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, on the 14th of April, 1852, when John Allan Powell, of Lincoln's-inn, esq. was elected a director, in the place of James Stephen Wickens, esq. resigned, upon his retirement from the Profession. Charles John Bloxham, of Lincoln's-inn-fields, esq. was also elected a director, in the place of Barnes Peacock, esq. resigned, upon his appointment to India; and John Kerby Hedges, esq. of Wallingford, was elected an auditor in the place of F. B. Beevor, esq. resigned.

The balance-sheet for the year ending the 31st of December, 1851, with a report from the directors, was read and unanimously approved. It appeared, as the fact was, that the income of the Society arising from dividends and interest on investments and from the premiums on existing policies (averaging above 1,000*l.* each, and assuring upwards of 433,000*l.*), amounted to nearly 18,000*l.* per annum; and that the sum invested in Government and on real securities, with the cash in hand, after discharging all claims and demands to that day, was nearly 80,000*l.*

This sum, with the known respectability and liability of the proprietors to the extent of the capital, must be a sufficient guarantee of the stability of the Society, as well as of the firm foundation upon which it was formed—namely, that all the profits should be accumulated for a period of ten years, and that at the expiration of that time, viz. on the 31st of December, 1855, a division should be made of four-fifths to the assured under policies (with profits) effected before the 31st of December, 1853, and of one fifth to the proprietors; thus forming a fund to answer any unforeseen calamity, and producing, over and above the paid-up capital, upwards of 40,000*l.* in six years, and which, without any increase of business, must be more than trebled in the ensuing four years.

All policies effected (with profits) before the 31st of December, 1853, will be entitled to participate in such division.

SWEETLAND, John, esq. for many years principal commissary at Gibraltar, and a magistrate for the county of Devon, at his residence, Hermosa, Teignmouth, on the 25th ult. aged 80.

THE NEW COURTS FOR THE VICE-CHANCELLORS.—The new courts provided for the Vice-Chancellors at the back of Westminster Hall are extremely inconvenient. The Nisi Prius Court of Common Pleas sits in one of the turrets of the new Houses of Parliament, and the intricacy of the ascending and descending steps baffles the wits not only of the gentlemen of the Bar and the subtlety of the solicitors, but creates confusion among the judges, and to suitors and witnesses causes insurmountable obstacles. The Vice-Chancellors have much difficulty in finding out the courts in which they are to sit. They have to ascend a number of flights of stairs, then to descend through innumerable passages and staircases, and afterwards to grope their way through various by-ways before they can obtain admission to their courts. The description by Mr. Charles Dickens of the ups and downs of the passages of "the Bleak House," complicated though they be, are not equal to the intricacies of the new courts. Even the difficulties and the delay, and the hard and expensive progress of a Chancery suit are surpassed by the approaches to the courts where equity is supposed to be administered; and after the judge, the counsel, and the attorneys get into court, they find nearly as much difficulty in getting out of it as suitors generally find to their cost to get out of the suits in which they are parties. It is to be hoped that the Woods and Forests will look to this matter, for it is one of some importance.

MASTERS IN CHANCERY.—The four Masters who retire under the provisions of the new Act are Master Farrer, Master Brougham, Sir W. Horne, and Master Senior, leaving five to conduct business; and the business in the offices of the Masters who retire will be distributed among the Masters who remain.

SHIRTS.—WHITELOCK and SON, 166, Strand, (opposite the church, near Somerset-house) invite the attention of gentlemen to the combination of novel improvements now perfecting their celebrated 6s. 6d. SHIRTS, unequalled for comfort, durability, and exact fit. A sample shirt forwarded upon receipt of a post-office order for the amount, with the tight measure of the neck, chest, and wrist of the wearer. They have just received their new patterns for coloured shirts 4s. 6d. each, made in the best manner. Patterns sent per post to select from.

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT, as shown in the Great Exhibition, Class 20, No. 23, is a garment made entirely without gathers. These auxiliaries to the shirt have hitherto been considered indispensable, but, like everything else where the ingenious mind is directed to getting rid of complication, simplicity is proved to be the attribute of perfection. It may be confidently eulogised for its nicety of fit and great ease and comfort.—From the Morning Herald.—At WILLIAM REID'S, 51, Conduit-street, Regent-street. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and hosiery in every variety.

CHEAP AND DURABLE ROOFING

F. M'NEILL & CO.'S PATENT ASPHALTED ROOFING FELT.

[PRICE ONE PENNY PER SQUARE FOOT.]

As a roofing it is light, durable and effective. Half the strength of timber used for slates or tiles only is necessary, and is particularly desirable for farm buildings, workshops, and emigrants' houses; supplied in long lengths by 32 inches wide, and easily applied by unpractised hands.

It is an excellent covering for Verandas, desirable to form light ceilings, and to place under slates, tiles, or metal, to counteract the heat of the sun, and the wet and frost, to top rooms, and church roofs.

Also thick HAIR FELT for deadening sound under floors, and VERY THICK HAIR FELT for clothing the boilers and pipes of the steam engine, saving 20 per cent. in fuel.

A WATERPROOF BITUMINOUS FELT, for lining damp walls, free from odour, and can be papered on or coloured, and is a very effective remedy. Price One Penny per Square Foot.

Samples and full directions, with illustrations on the cheap construction of roofs (which any carpenter can follow), sent post free, and orders by post executed. Experienced workmen also sent out. Established thirteen years.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY WORKS OF THE KIND IN LONDON.

GOLD CHAINS BY TROY WEIGHT AND WORKMANSHIP.

WATHERSTON and BROGDEN, MANUFACTURING GOLDSMITHS, Established A. D. 1798, having been awarded a Prize Medal for their Diamond and Enamel Vase, at the Great Exhibition, beg to announce that in obedience to the numerous calls made upon them, they have thrown open their Manufactory to the public at Manufacturers' Prices. The system of weighing Chains against sovereigns being one of the greatest frauds ever practised on the public, WATHERSTON and BROGDEN sell their Gold at its bullion value; their profit being made on the workmanship alone, which is charged with reference to the intricacy or simplicity of the pattern. A general assortment of Jewellery, all made on the premises.

Manufactory, 16, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London.

IF YOU DESIRE really WELL-POLISHED BOOTS, use BROWN'S ROYAL MELTONIAN BLACKING. It renders them beautifully soft, durable, and waterproof, while its lustre equals the most brilliant patent leather. Price the same as common blacking. Made only by E. BROWN, the inventor and sole manufacturer of the De Guiche Parisian Polish for dress boots and shoes, and waterproof varnish for hunting boots.

MANUFACTORY, 25, BROAD-STREET, GOLDEN-SQUARE.
Patronised by the Court and nobility, and to be had at all the principal shops throughout the kingdom.

AWARDED A PRIZE MEDAL UNDER CLASS XIX.

TO THE CARPET TRADE.—ROYAL VICTORIA FELT CARPETING.—The PATENT WOOLLEN CLOTH COMPANY beg to inform the Trade that their NEW PATTERNS in CARPETS and TABLE COVERS, for the present season are now out, and will be found far superior to any they have hitherto produced, both in style and variety. The public can be supplied at all respectable Carpet-houses in London and the country. The Company deem it necessary to caution the public against parties who are selling an inferior description of goods as Felted Carpets, which will not bear comparison with their manufacture, either in style or durability; and that the genuineness of the goods can always be tested by purchasers, as the Company's Carpets are all stamped at both ends of the piece, "Royal Victoria Carpeting, London," with the royal arms in the centre.

The Company's Manufactories are at Elmwood Mills, Leeds; and Borough-road, London. Wholesale Warehouse at 8, LOVE-LANE, WOOD-STREET, CHEAPSIDE.

"For the apparel oft proclaims the man."—Hamlet.

EVERY WELL-DRESSED MAN KNOWS how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its requirements with a well-cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured. Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently doomed to appear in clothes, however costly, that never can become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a deformity in costume, FREDERICK FOX adopts this means of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years, always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of its individual wearer, and the purposes it is intended to serve, thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that regard for economy which the spirit of the age dictates.—F. FOX, Practical Tailor, 73, Cornhill, same side of the way as the Royal Exchange.

NO. 79, CHEAPSIDE, No. 79.—HAIR-DYE.— FREDK SACKER now offers to his Friends and the Public a DYE more permanent, and produces (in one-third of the time) a more beautiful black or brown head of hair than any dye ever used before. Whiskers dyed in a few minutes. Private rooms for dyeing. Sold only at SACKER'S Perfumery Warehouse and Hair-cutting Saloons. Cases, 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 10s. 6d. and 21s. F. S. for many years the projector and perfecter of Wig-making, invites his friends and the public to inspect his magnificent assortment of ornamental hair. Wigs, 1l. 10s.; Scalps, 10s.; Ladies' Frontlets, 5s. 6d. Country orders punctually attended. Gentlemen's hair cut, charge, 6d.

WATER ONLY REQUIRED!

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S PATENT CONCENTRATED MILK.

"Supplies Fresh Milk at all times." Times, September 16, 1850.

"It was almost (if not quite) equal in flavour and quality to Milk fresh from the Cow." Captain H. T. Austins, Commander of the Arctic Expedition, H. M. S. Resolute, 1st October, 1851.

"The Milk is most admirable; none should go to sea without it."—Captain Ommaney, H.M.S. Assistance, Arctic Expedition, 25th October, 1851.

"The greatest comfort and blessing we had on board our ships in the Arctic Expedition."—Medical Officer's Report to the Lords of the Admiralty, November, 1851.

Preserved in hermetically sealed tins, each tin producing seven times the quantity of pure milk.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S COCOA and MILK, and CHOCOLATE and MILK, are combinations of the Concentrated Milk with the finest Trinidad Cocoa and the choicest French Chocolate, in hermetically sealed tins. These delicious preparations are wholly free from the admixtures so common in the packet Cocoas, and considering their quality are equally expensive; for example, a breakfast cup of Pure Cocoa, combined with milk and sugar, can be had at the cost of a penny, by merely adding boiling water.

THE PRIZE MEDAL at the GREAT EXHIBITION was awarded to these preparations for their Novelty, Utility, and Economy; and they were constantly used in the Refreshment Rooms of the Exhibition giving universal satisfaction.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S INFANT'S FOOD, is a combination of the Concentrated Milk with pure Farina, and will be found a light and nourishing diet for Invalids as well as Infants, requiring only boiling water for its instant preparation.

The whole of the above are prepared under the immediate inspection of Mr. Moore, the Patentee, who was for many years the ordinary medical attendant of the Royal Family in London.

The Finest FRENCH CHOCOLATES in every variety, made expressly for the subscribers by one of the first Paris manufacturers. These Chocolates, it may be observed, are REALLY FRENCH, and are greatly superior to those commonly sold as French, but which are in fact, generally speaking, of English manufacture.

MOORE and BUCKLEY, Ranton Abbey Farm and Works, Staffordshire; and 1, Upper East Smithfield, London, and sold retail by all respectable Grocers and Chemists, &c. in town and country.

THE PRIZE MEDAL, with "Honourable Mention," has been awarded for the GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, by the Jurors of the Exhibition of all Nations, and is now used in the Royal Laundry. Being thus doubly noticed for its "General Superiority" (a mark of distinction conferred on no other) by the Royal Commissioners and Jury, from amongst thirty or forty exhibitors, sets it far above every other of its competitors. The ladies are, therefore, respectfully requested to make a trial of the Glenfield Patent Double-refined Powder Starch, which, for domestic use, now stands unrivalled. See also testimonials from the laundress to Her Majesty, the Lady Mayoress of London; the lady of W. Chambers, Esq. of Glenormiston, one of the Publishers of Chambers's Edinburgh Journal; the laundresses of the Marchioness of Breadalbane; Countess of Eglinton; Countess of Dartmouth, &c.

Agents wanted: apply to Mr. R. Wotherspoon, 40, Dunlop-street, Glasgow.

The attention of Shippers and Merchants is respectfully called to the above article, now in large demand in the British Colonies and United States, where it commands always the highest prices. Shipping Orders executed in a superior manner, and on the shortest notice.

BERDOE'S superior light OVERCOAT.—This well known garment combines, with every quality essential to a really respectable article, that will ensure permanent satisfaction, the additional recommendation of being thoroughly impervious to rain, and has long been reputed one of the most convenient, economical, and valuable garments ever invented. Price 45s. and 50s. Not waterproof, 8s. less. A very large Stock for Selection; also of Morning Coats, Shooting Jackets, &c.

96, New Bond-street; and 69, Cornhill (only).

PURE COCOA.—HANDFORD and DAVIES'S pure granulated COCOA, in 1 lb packets, at 1s. per lb. being the best of the four samples pronounced by the Analytical Sanitary Commission to be genuine out of the whole of the samples tested (vide the Lancet, of May 21st, page 610); also their COMPO SOLUBLE COCOA, for parties to whom the full flavour of pure cocoa is unpalatable. It consists of fine arrowroot, cocoa, and sugar only, and is a very superior article of its kind. It is very readily prepared by pouring boiling water on to it. Price 1s. 4d. per lb.

Finest Mocha Coffee, 1s. 8d.; finest Jamaica ditto, 1s. 6d.; Java ditto, 1s. 4d.; Colombo ditto, 1s. 2d.; Costa Ricardo, 1s.; Congo Tea, strong and useful, adapted for general family use, 3s. 8d. per lb.

MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence.

"Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-taming arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. Water, Steam, or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books, Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating the best non-conductors, constitute Milner's Fire-resisting Chambers. See certificates of hundreds of tes's and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22 No. 642, are removed to their London Depôt, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (adding the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Sample Safes, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire-resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

Milner's London Depôt, 47A, Moorgate-street, City, near the Bank of England. Milner's Safe Works (the most extensive in the world), Liverpool.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.— On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr. Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London; 28, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street, Manchester; and Horseley-fields, Wolverhampton.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and PENETRATING HAIR-BRUSHES.—The tooth-brush performs the highly important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleaning in the most extraordinary manner,—hair never comes loose, 1s. Peculiarly penetrating hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia Bristles, which will not soften like common hair; improved clothes brush, that cleans harmlessly in one-third the usual time; the new Velvet-Brush; and immense stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponge.

At METCALFE, BINGLEY, and CO.'s only establishment, 130 B, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.

CAUTION.—Beware of the word "from" Metcalfe's, adopted by some houses.—Metcalfe's Alkaline Tooth Powder 2s. per box.

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—The BEDFORD PANTECHNICON and STORE-ROOMS (late Messrs. Collard and Collard's Pianoforte Manufactory), 194, Tottenham-court-road, for the WAREHOUSING of FURNITURE, PIANOS, PAINTINGS, and every description of valuable property, are fitted up into separate and well-ventilated compartments, so that each depositor can have his own lock and key, and from the great extent of the premises the Proprietor is enabled to charge much less than similar establishments. Estimates, including packing, removing, &c. free of expense.

For terms and prospectus apply on the premises; or of the Proprietor, Mr. W. TINGEY, Polytechnic Silversmith Establishment, 312, Regent-street. Advances made, if required, on very moderate terms.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer, they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet-street. At home from Ten till Five.

A SOVEREIGN REMEDY for BAD TEA.— A LEADEN PACKAGE, containing 5lbs. of fine, true, rich, ripe, rare SOUCHONG TEA (which will please everybody), sent, carriage free, to any part of England, on receipt of a post-office order for One Sovereign.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY, at the LAW INSTITUTION, CHANCERY-LANE.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION.

For Tuesday, May 4th, 1852. President—Mr. Galland.

74. Ought the case of Boosey v. Jefferys, 17 Law Times, 110, to be reversed on repeal?

Affirmative—Mr. Gregson and Mr. Dixon.
Negative—Mr. Girdlestone and Mr. Ward.

For Tuesday, May 11th, 1852. President—Mr. Warmington.

LIII. Should the British Colonies be permitted to send representatives to the Imperial Parliament?

Mr. G. C. Bompas is appointed to open the debate, and Messrs. Ackworth, Holmes, and Winearls, to speak upon the question.

For Tuesday, May 18th, 1852. President—Mr. Hayman.

76. By a sentence of the Court of Arches a clergyman was ordered to be deprived of all his Church preferment; but before any official notice of the sentence was received by the diocesan the defendant presented an appeal to the Privy Council. Pending the appeal, certain sums of rent-charge in lieu of tithes became payable in respect of a living held by the defendant. On the hearing of the appeal the original sentence was confirmed. Does the confirmation of the sentence date back to the time of the first judgment, so as to deprive the defendant of the rent-charge in favour of his successor in the living? (Hutton v. Cove, 1 Barn. & Adol. 538.)

Affirmative—Mr. Cotton and Mr. Murray.
Negative—Mr. Lowe and Mr. Walter.

For Tuesday, May 25th, 1852. President—Mr. Morris.

77. By a deed, executed in contemplation of marriage, a woman conveyed real estate to trustees upon trust for her own separate use for life, then for the intended husband for life, then for children, and, if none, for the husband in fee. By the same deed she assigned to the trustees certain household furniture, upon trust for her own separate use for life, without anticipation, but without creating any further trust whatever. The wife survived the husband, but has since died, there having been no children of the marriage. Are the representatives of the husband entitled to the furniture? (Jarman v. Woolloton, 3 Term Rep. 618; Newlands v. Paynter, 4 Myl. & C. 408.)

Affirmative—Mr. Boyce and Mr. Wright.
Negative—Mr. Trollope and Mr. Humphry.

J. W. HOWLETT, Secretary, 68, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TOUTING LAWYERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—You will confer an obligation on the respectable members of the legal profession, both here and elsewhere, if you will suggest some means by which touting lawyers can be made to feel the shame of their unprofessional practices.

There are a few of these gentlemen residing here, who, either by themselves or their myrmidons, regularly infest certain localities (especially the Police Courts), touting for prosecutions or defences. They generally prefer prosecutions, if they can get them, but if unsuccessful in that respect, off they rush to the prisoner, soliciting the honour of defending his innocence.

It is really marvellous to see how quickly these gentlemen become acquainted with the arrest of a prisoner, and the only solution of the wonder would seem to be that policemen's hearts and sympathies are not proof against the influence which the touters' pockets possess.

No sooner is a felony (or misdemeanor where costs are allowed) committed, than the prosecutor is besieged by the touting lawyers, or their jackals, and it is a common thing for a prosecutor to be first informed of the prisoner's arrest by the presence of one of these gentry soliciting the prosecution.

I should not be at all surprised at hearing again (as I once did) a prisoner, when called on to plead to the indictment against him, inquire for Mr. So and So, his attorney, who was absolutely conducting the prosecution.

Really, Mr. Editor, the public may well suspect the characters of lawyers, when such practices as the above are resorted to.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Gloucester, April 26, 1852. A. B.

[The subject has often occupied our thoughts, but we can devise no remedy for the mischief. Can any of our readers? We have a drawn Bill that will partially meet this, among other evils, and which we hope to be able to advance in the next Parliament.—ED. L. T.]

THE ATTORNEYS' TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—It seems hopeless to expect from the Chancellor of the Exchequer any relief from the iniquitous poll-tax levied on attorneys; and for an independent member to carry a measure for the purpose through all its parliamentary stages in the face of Government opposition is, as we have already experienced, too arduous a task to be undertaken with much probability of success. The tactics I would recommend for obtaining a measure of relief already suggested in your columns would be to move in committee on the Income-tax Bill a clause providing that every attorney, on producing his annual certificate to the collector of income-tax, should be entitled to credit for the amount of the certificate duty in payment, or part payment, as the case might be, of the duty assessed on his professional income, and that the collector should be allowed the amount in his schedule of discharges.

We have already seen that the sense of the House of Commons in favour of the repeal of the duty is sufficiently strong to carry it in an isolated division, and if it were once engrafted on the ministerial Income-tax Bill, it would be beyond the reach of most of the dangers to which a separate measure is subjected in its passage through Parliament.

I am, Sir, yours, &c. ONE, &c.

[The suggestion of our correspondent is ingenious, but he seems to forget that it would fail to relieve those who most require relief, the Attorneys whose incomes are less than 150*l.* a year, while it would exempt the men with large professional profits, who do not require relief, but only demand the repeal as an act of justice.—ED. L. T.]

THE SOLICITOR-GENERAL.—The Solicitor-General, Sir Fitzroy Kelly, has returned to London, but is expected to leave town again to-morrow, having been invited to become a candidate for the representation of the eastern division of Suffolk, in the room of Lord Rendlesham, deceased. No opposition is expected to the learned gentleman's return.—Standard, of Monday.

FEES IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY.—Fees in the Court of Chancery are likely to be shortly abolished. In a report on the subject, printed in a Parliamentary document, it is suggested that the fees should be reduced and the judges paid out of the Consolidated Fund. "These fees (it is stated) are now met with at every step of a suit, and are most burdensome."

CHANCERY REFORM.—On Friday week there was printed, by order of the House of Commons, a copy of a report received by her Majesty's Commissioners appointed to inquire into the process, practice, and system of pleading in the Court of Chancery, from the Incorporated Law Society, and of the correspondence between Mr. Barber, the secretary of the Commissioners, and the Society. Several practical suggestions are made in the report on Chancery Reform, particularly with reference to the Master's offices. The report states that to the Masters' offices, as at present constituted, is to be attributed a large portion of the delay. Further, the "machinery itself in the Masters' offices is in many cases uselessly expensive, and is not calculated to insure expedition, even when all parties do their utmost to promote it."

THE LONDON AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSURANCE SOCIETY
Capital, One Million.

The Sixth Annual General Meeting of this Society was held at the Office, No. 32, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, on the 14th of April, 1852, when John Allan Powell, of Lincoln's-inn, esq. was elected a director, in the place of James Stephen Wickens, esq resigned, upon his retirement from the Profession. Charles John Bloxam, of Lincoln's-inn-fields, esq. was also elected a director, in the place of Barnes Peacock, esq. resigned, upon his appointment to India; and John Kirby Hedges, esq of Wallingford, was elected an auditor in the place of F. B Beevor, esq. resigned.

The balance-sheet for the year ending the 31st of December, 1851, with a report from the directors, was read and unanimously approved. It appeared, as the fact was, that the income of the Society arising from dividends and interest on investments and from the premiums on existing policies (averaging above 1,000*l.* each, and assuring upwards of 432,000*l.*), amounted to nearly 18,000*l.* per annum; and that the sum invested in Government and on real securities, with the cash in hand, after discharging all claims and demands to that day, was nearly 80,000*l.*

This sum, with the known respectability and liability of the proprietors to the extent of the capital, must be a sufficient guarantee of the stability of the Society, as well as of the firm foundation upon which it was formed—namely, that all the profits should be accumulated for a period of ten years, and that at the expiration of that time, viz. on the 31st of December, 1855, a division should be made of four-fifths to the assured under policies (with profits) effected before the 31st of December, 1853, and of one fifth to the proprietors; thus forming a fund to answer any unforeseen calamity, and producing, over and above the paid-up capital, upwards of 40,000*l.* in six years, and which, without any increase of business, must be more than trebled in the ensuing four years.

All policies effected (with profits) before the 31st of December, 1853, will be entitled to participate in such division.
JOHN KNOWLES, Actuary and Secretary.

TUITION.—There are two Vacancies in an established first-class School for Young Ladies, situate in the best part of St. John's Wood; the domestic arrangements are liberal; the method and management, modern and enlightened. Terms vary, as Masters may be needed from 50 to 80 Guineas inclusive, per annum.
Address, "Z. Z." Post Office, Maida Hill.

SHAFTESBURY HOUSE, KENSINGTON. The BENEFICIAL LEASE and immediate possession of this CAPITAL RESIDENCE, with Pleasure Grounds and Gardens extending to Four Acres. Also the elegant FURNITURE, noble Glasses, Bronzes, Collection of valuable PICTURES, rare Porcelain, and Cellar of choice WINES.

MR. ROBINS is favoured with instructions from Mr. Serjeant Wilkins, whose professional duties require his constant residence in town, to SUBMIT to PUBLIC COMPETITION, on the Premises, on WEDNESDAY next, MAY 19, at One for Two precisely the beneficial LEASE of the elegant and well-arranged residence, known as SHAFTESBURY HOUSE, KENSINGTON, upon the completion of which a very large sum has been most judiciously expended, rendering the abode one of the most perfect that can be imagined, especially to those inclined to appreciate the skilful and alluring arrangements that have been made for the true enjoyment of life. There are seven bedchambers and a library on the upper floor. On the ground floor, capital dining-room and boudoir, fitted up with exquisite taste, whilst the drawing-rooms are of excellent proportions, opening into a conservatory extending the whole length, lending its charms to complete the coup d'œil, and leading by a flight of steps to a green-house and the pleasure-grounds, which appear interminable, extending from one to another and each surpassing the other in beauty and variety, ornamented by a fountain, clothed with a profusion of valuable shrubs and evergreens, and the walls covered with fruit-trees of the choicest kind. A farm yard in miniature, and poultry-ground screened from view, and an orchard abundantly planted, complete the domain, which extends to four acres, and which, be it remembered, is less than two miles from Hyde-park-corner. The lease has sixteen years unexpired, at a very low rent. Immediate possession will be given, and the purchaser may be accommodated with the excellent and appropriate furniture, noble glasses, valuable bronzes, porcelain, collection of pictures, and cellar of first-rate wines; or they will be Sold by Auction, on Wednesday, June 2, and following day.—May be viewed by tickets only, to be obtained, with full particulars, of Mr. ROBINS, Piazza, Covent-garden.

CHELTENHAM.—Important Freehold Property, comprising about twenty acres, situate close to the town of Cheltenham, and being part of the Park Estate, presenting very eligible sites for building purposes.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S COFFEE-HOUSE, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One (unless in the mean time disposed of), a most desirable PROPERTY, possessing great advantages for investment as a building speculation for twenty villa residences, or for the erection of a mansion, in the midst of delightful grounds, laid out with the greatest taste by eminent landscape gardener, comprising a broad gravel esplanade, meandrous walks, well grown flowering shrubs, ornamental timber, and a beautiful sheet of water, well sheltered by the distant hills, and almost in the heart of the fashionable town of Cheltenham, together with a small elegant Villa, of the Italian style of architecture at the entrance, and a substantial building, intended for stables, erected at a considerable outlay, and which might be easily converted into a residence. The attention of capitalists is specially invited to this property, which presents peculiar advantages.—Particulars may be obtained of G. G. PAYNE, Esq. Tivoli, Cheltenham; Mr. HOWARD, Solicitor, Cheltenham; the principal hotels at the same place; at Garraway's; at Mr. GREEN's Offices, 28, Old Bond-street; and upon personal application at the Royal Insurance Company's Offices, Royal Insurance-buildings, Liverpool.

HAMPSHIRE.—The Botleigh Grange Estate, within five miles of Southampton.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One (unless previously disposed of), the exceedingly desirable and important FREEHOLD ESTATE of Botleigh Grange, consisting of a most substantial and elegant Elizabethan mansion, with all the appendages for the residence of a first-rate family, surrounded by well arranged gardens and pleasure-grounds, approached by carriage-drives from the entrance lodges, and seated on a gentle eminence in the midst of a beautifully timbered and finely undulated park of about sixty acres, intersected by a trout-stream, forming itself in the centre of the park into a large and ornamental sheet of water. In addition to the park there are several fields of rich arable, and the estate comprises altogether about 190 acres, remarkably compact and beautifully wooded. This desirable property combines many undeniable advantages, and the situation is peculiarly favourable, being within five miles of Southampton, only a mile and a half from the Botleigh Station, and but two hours' journey from London.—Particulars may be obtained at Garraway's; and of Mr. GREEN, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond-street.

CHIGWELL, ESSEX.—Desirable small Copyhold Estate.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) will SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on TUESDAY, JUNE 8, at One (if not previously disposed of by private contract), a desirable small COPYHOLD PROPERTY, known as BROOM HILL COTTAGE, very pleasantly situate on the high road, at the entrance of the rural village of CHIGWELL, only eleven miles from town, with neat garden, a rich meadow, and a small slip of ground, containing altogether about two acres, commanding a very valuable and extensive frontage to the road.—Printed particulars may be obtained at the King's Head, Chigwell; at Garraway's; of R. BUCHANAN, Esq. Solicitor, 1, Walbrook-buildings, City; and, with cards to view, of Mr. GREEN, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond-street.

BRENT LODGE, FINCHLEY.—An elegant modern Residence, and nearly 25 acres of Pleasure-Grounds and park-like land, 5½ miles from the Regent's-park, 6 from the City, and 2½ from a Station on the Great Northern Railway.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One, (unless previously sold), the admired ESTATE of BRENT LODGE, most pleasingly situate in the salubrious and rural village of Finchley, and comprising one of the most perfect abodes for a family of taste and fortune within its distance of the metropolis. It was erected a few years since, under the superintendence of an eminent architect, and decorated in a remarkably chaste and elegant style. It is approached by two entrance lodges and carriage-drives, and is seated in very pleasingly arranged grounds and well timbered park like land, the whole amounting to about twenty-five acres, twelve being freehold, and the remainder leasehold, at a moderate rent. The offices, farm and outbuildings, are on the most approved plan, and the whole property is in the highest possible order.—Particulars may shortly be had of Messrs. EVANS and GOOD, Solicitors, 2, Gray's-inn square; of ANTHONY SALVIN, Esq. Architect, 30, Argyle-street, Regent street; at Garraway's; and of Mr. GREEN, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond-street.

CHIGWELL-ROW, on the borders of Hainault Forest.—Villa and Eight Acres.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has been favoured with instructions from Captain Reynell to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on TUESDAY, JUNE 8, at One, (if not previously disposed of by private contract), his admired RESIDENCE, at Chigwell-row; comprising an elegant villa, standing in the centre of tastefully-disposed lawns and pleasure-grounds, with an adjoining paddock of 6 acres. This delightful residence is most agreeably placed at a short distance from the road (from which it is effectually screened), and commands a most extensive view of the course of the river Thames, the Kent and Surrey hills, and the intervening country; is in the midst of rural and picturesque home scenery, and truly in one of the most delightful and healthy situations that can be found within so short a distance of London, being but eleven miles from the City, with omnibuses passing the entrance-gate, and only four miles from the Ilford and Romford Stations. The villa contains accommodation for a moderate-sized family, with conservatory, coach-house, stabling, brew-house, laundry, cow house, farm-yard, piggery, kitchen garden, and, in fact, every appendage that can possibly be desired upon a small and inexpensive scale, the whole property being remarkably compact, and comprising about 8 acres, held on lease for 25 years at a low rental. The furniture may be purchased by valuation, or it will be sold by auction, on the premises, on Thursday, June 10.—Printed particulars and cards to view may be obtained of Mr. ALFRED ..., Estate Agent, Chigwell; and of Mr. GREEN, 28, Old Bond-street.

QUEEN SQUARE, BLOOMSBURY.—Freehold Residence, with Stabling.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2, at One (if not in the meantime disposed of by private contract), the capital substantially built FREEHOLD FAMILY RESIDENCE, No. 22, Queen square, Bloomsbury, in the best part of this desirable and central situation, with large garden in the rear, communicating with excellent leasehold stabling in Greville-mews, with spacious stable-yard; the whole premises being of the estimated value of 200l. per annum, and presenting a singularly desirable opportunity for residence or investment.—Particulars may be obtained at Garraway's; of BROOKE TURNER, Esq. Solicitor, 1, Red Lion-square; and of Mr. GREEN, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond-street.

SHOREDITCH and DALSTON.—Eligible Leasehold Investments.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.—On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr. Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London; 28, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street, Manchester; and Horseley-fields, Wolverhampton.

MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence.
"Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-taming arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. Water, Steam, or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating the best non-conductors, constitute Milner's Fire-resisting Chambers. See certificates of hundreds of tests and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22, No. 649, are removed to their London Depôt, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (adding the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Sample Safes, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire-resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and PENETRATING HAIR-BRUSHES. The tooth-brush performs the highly important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleaning in the most extraordinary manner,—hair never comes loose, 1s. Peculiarly penetrating hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia Bristles, which will not soften like common hair; improved clothes brush, that cleans harmlessly in one-third the usual time; the new Velvet Brush; and immense stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponge.
At METCALFE, BINGLEY, and CO.'s only establishment, 130 B, Oxford street, one door from Holles-street.
CAUTION.—Beware of the word "from" Metcalfe's, adopted by some houses.—Metcalfe's Alkaline Tooth Powder 2s. per box.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.
52, Fleet street. At home from Ten till Five.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S PATENT CONCENTRATED MILK
"Supplies Fresh Milk at all times."—Times, September 16, 1850.
"It was almost (if not quite) equal in flavour and quality to Milk fresh from the Cow"—Captain H. T. Austins, Commander of the Arctic Expedition. H.M.S. Resolute, 1st October, 1851.
"The Milk is most admirable; none should go to sea without it"—Captain Ommaney, H.M.S. Assistance, Arctic Expedition, 25th October, 1851.
"The greatest comfort and blessing we had on board our ships in the Arctic Expedition." Medical Officer's Report to the Lords of the Admiralty November, 1851.
Preserved in hermetically sealed tins, each tin producing seven times the quantity of pure milk.
MOORE and BUCKLEY'S COCOA and MILK, and CHOCOLATE and MILK, are combinations of the Concentrated Milk with the finest Trinidad Cocoa and the choicest French Chocolate, in hermetically sealed tins. These delicious preparations are wholly free from the adulterations so common in the packet Cocoas, and considering their quality are equally expensive, for example, a breakfast cup of Pure Cocoa, combined with milk and sugar, can be had at the cost of a penny, by merely adding boiling water.
THE PRIZE MEDAL at the GREAT EXHIBITION was awarded to these preparations for their Novelty, Utility, and Economy; and they were constantly used in the Refreshment Rooms of the Exhibition, giving universal satisfaction.
MOORE and BUCKLEY'S INFANT'S FOOD, is a combination of the Concentrated Milk with pure Farina, and will be found a light and nourishing diet for Invalids as well as Infants, requiring only boiling water for its instant preparation.
The whole of the above are prepared under the immediate inspection of Mr. Moore, the Patentee, who was for many years the ordinary medical attendant of the Royal Family in London.
The Finest FRENCH CHOCOLATES in every variety, made expressly for the subscribers by one of the first Paris manufacturers. These Chocolates, it may be observed, are REALLY FRENCH, and are greatly superior to those commonly sold as French, but which are in fact, generally speaking, of English manufacture.
MOORE and BUCKLEY, Banton Abbey Farm and Works, Staffordshire, and 4, Upper East Smithfield, London; and sold retail by all respectable Grocers and Chemists, &c. in town and country.

PURE COCOA.—HANDFORD and DAVIES'S pure granulated COCOA, in 1 lb. packets, at 1s. per lb. being the best of the four samples pronounced by the Analytical Sanitary Commission to be genuine out of the whole of the samples tested (vide the Lancet, of May 21st, page 610); also their COMPO SOLUBLE COCOA, for parties to whom the full flavour of pure cocoa is unpalatable. It consists of fine arrowroot, cocoa, and sugar only, and is a very superior article of its kind. It is very readily prepared by pouring boiling water on to it. Price 1s. 4d. per lb.
Finest Mocha Coffee, 1s. 6d.; finest Jamaica ditto, 1s. 6d.; Java ditto, 1s. 4d.; Colombo ditto, 1s. 2d.; Costa Ricardo, 1s.; Congo Tea, strong and useful, adapted for general family use, 3s. 8d. per lb.

Sales by Auction and Private Contract.

Improved Rent of 100l. per annum, for 32½ years, well secured. A desirable Investment.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY will SELL by AUCTION, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One, at the MART, a PROFIT RENT of 100l. per annum, well secured on an improving property, comprising 21 houses, situate in New-street and Regent-street, Limehouse, close to the railway station. Held for 32½ years from March, 1852, and let for the whole term, less 15 days, at a net improved rent of 100l. per annum, secured by a rack rental of upwards of 350l. per annum. May be viewed and particulars had at the Mart; of Messrs. J. and W. GALSWORTHY, Solicitors, 9, Charlotte-row, Mansion house; and at CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY's offices, 28, Regent street, Waterloo-place.

THE CEDARS.—PUTNEY.—Delightful Freehold Villa Residence, with immediate possession, seated in its own grounds, on an elevated bank of the Thames, surrounded by about 6½ acres of Land: also several outlying pieces of Common Land, near the same, and valuable rights belonging thereto.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY have the honour to announce they have received instructions from the Council of Civil Engineers to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One, the truly delightful FREEHOLD VILLA, known and justly admired as the Cedars, adapted for the occupation of a family of rank. It is approached by a drive, with lodge entrance, and contains an elegant suite of reception-rooms fronting the river, and overlooking the grounds of Ranelagh House on the opposite bank; spacious library, numerous bed-rooms, bath-room, and offices, excellent stabling and coach-houses, productive walled kitchen gardens, lawns, and pleasure grounds, adorned with stately cedars feathering to the ground, fountains and retreats, with land adjoining; the whole being about 6½ acres. Also, in separate lots, several pieces of allotment Land, with the valuable rights belonging thereto, situate close to the Cedars. The property may be viewed, and particulars had of Messrs. WHITE and BORRETT, Solicitors, 10, Whitehall-place, of Messrs. PICKERING and SMITH, Land Surveyors, 14, Whitehall place; at the Mart; and at Messrs. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY's Auction and Land Offices, 28, Regent-street, Waterloo-place.

WIMBLEDON-PARK ESTATE adjoining the Common.—Valuable Freehold Building Sites for Villa Residences.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY are instructed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, JUNE 24, at One, numerous PLOTS of FREEHOLD BUILDING LAND, some of which are villa sites of the most charming description, having extensive views over the richly diversified scenery of the park, with its beautiful lake, the Surrey hills, Wimbledon Common, and a vast extent of country. The plots vary in quantity from one acre upwards, and are approached by roads from Wimbledon Common, within easy access of the heart of London by rail both from Putney and Wimbledon, and offering a desirable opportunity to gentlemen desirous to build for occupation, and to builders for speculation.—Particulars and plans will be published early, and may be obtained at the Mart; of WILLIAM BATTY, Esq. Solicitor, 26, Charles-street, St. James's-square; and of Messrs. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY, 28, Regent-street, Waterloo-place.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, JUNE 3, by direction of the Mortgagee, a REVERSIONARY INTEREST, which falls in on the decease of a lady, aged upwards of sixty, to the following valuable PROPERTIES, viz.: The entirety of Three Freehold Houses, 2, 3, and 4, Princes street, Barbican, and Leasehold House and Tenement, 9, Wells-street, Oxford-street; to the Moiety of Five Freehold Houses, 9 to 13, Princes-street, Barbican, Moiety of Nine Leasehold Houses in Brook-street, Lambeth; ditto of Leasehold House, King-street, Lambeth, ditto of Leasehold House and Stables, Duncan place, City road; ditto of Two Leasehold Houses, 7 and 8, Hornsey-road; ditto of Two ditto, 4 and 5, Canonbury-lane, Islington—producing about 900l. per annum; also a Moiety of Improved Rents, well secured, amounting to 60l. per annum, Moiety of an Annuity of 45l. per annum, with policy in the Equitable, effected in 1801, for 200l., and the large bonuses thereto, amounting altogether to 660l.; also in the entirety of Two Policies, 1,000l. and 499l., effected in 1833 and 1835, in the Union and Economic Associations, with the bonuses thereto. Particulars may be obtained at the Mart; of Messrs. JAS. TAYLOR and MASON, Solicitors, 15, Furnival's-inn, Holborn; and at Messrs. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY's Offices, 28, Regent street, Waterloo-place.

SUFFOLK.—Valuable Freehold and Copyhold Estates, comprising Mansion-house and Park of 40 acres, several capital Farms, with good homesteads, numerous Cottages, well-preserved Manor, valuable Manorial Rights, &c., comprising in the aggregate about 778 acres of land, and producing a rental of 1,184l. per annum—in two lots.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY have received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the Mart, London, in the month of JUNE next, TWO very valuable FREEHOLD and COPYHOLD ESTATES, situate close to the village of Walsham le-Willows, and in the adjoining parishes of Hepworth, Stanton, and Badwell Ash, being only five miles from the Elmswell Station of the Eastern Union Railway, and 10 from Bury St. Edmund's, comprising an excellent family mansion, known as the Lawn, containing great accommodation, and fit for immediate occupation, with extensive outbuildings, excellent gardens, stabling, &c., seated in a finely timbered park of 40 acres. The lands are of superior quality, and in a high state of cultivation, divided into the following convenient farms, viz.:—Church Farm, 149a.; Home Farm, 119a.; West Street Farm, 112a.; Four Ashes, 176a; Scace's-hole Farm, 142a.—each having excellent farm-houses, homesteads, several good cottages, &c. The farms are let on short leases, and the whole in the occupation of a good tenantry at fair rents, producing, with the estimated value of the mansion, a rental of 1,184l. per annum.—Particulars with plans may be obtained at the Mart, London; of Messrs. VALLANCE and VALLANCE, Solicitors, 20, Essex-street, Strand; Messrs. FLADGATE and CLARKE, Solicitors, 43, Craven-street, Strand; Mr. PARKER, at Badwell Ash; of Messrs. GOULDING and SON, Solicitors, Walsham-le-Willows; and at Messrs. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY's Auction and Land Offices, 28, Regent-street, London.

IMPORTANT BUILDING SITE.—Wimbledon-park, Surrey, comprising a beautiful undulating park enclosure of about 20 acres, in one lot.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY beg to call the attention of gentlemen desirous of building for occupation, and of the public generally, to this FREEHOLD BUILDING SITE comprising a park enclosure of about 20 acres which will be OFFERED for PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, JUNE 24, at One. It forms a portion of Wimbledon-park, and is approached from the Merton-road by a new road, with lodge entrance, which runs through the park to the Wimbledon entrance, bounded on the south and east by the noble park avenue, a mile and a half in length. The land is of rich quality, and, being studded with some fine stately timber, it has a beautiful park like appearance. Its position is most healthful, sheltered from the north by rising ground and a belt of woodland, having a southern aspect, and it commands an unequalled prospect over a large extent of highly picturesque scenery, extending to the Surrey hills. It will be offered in one lot, being most admirably adapted for the erection of a first class residence, a collegiate establishment, or public institution. It offers also to builders and others a desirable speculation, as it is equally well adapted for small villas, the access from London being most convenient. Particulars and plans may be obtained at the Mart; of W. BATTY, Esq. Solicitor, 26, Charles-street, St. James's-square; and of Messrs. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY, 28, Regent-street, Waterloo place.

WEST-HILL and WIMBLEDON-PARK ESTATES.—To Builders, &c.—Valuable Freehold Building Plots, close to Wandsworth; also several Plots fronting the Merton-road, adapted for shops.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY are directed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, JUNE 24, at One, numerous valuable PLOTS of FREEHOLD BUILDING LAND, comprising the principal part of the South Fields portion of the Wimbledon and West-hill Estates, which, from the large number of plots already disposed of, and the numerous interests consequently brought to bear upon the property, from the great building operations now going on, is improving daily in value. Some of the plots adapted for villas, command remarkably picturesque views of the richly diversified scenery of the park, and others are equally desirable for terraces, small villas, and shops. The situation being close to Wandsworth, it is within easy access of London by the Richmond Railway; and the locality, from its dry gravelly soil, is universally acknowledged one of the most healthful near the metropolis.—Plans and particulars may be obtained at the Mart; of W. BATTY, Esq. Solicitor, 26, Charles-street, St. James's-square; and at Messrs. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY's Offices, 28, Regent-street, Waterloo-place.

ISLINGTON.—Eligible Leasehold Investment, producing a profit rent of 80l. 18s. per annum, held for 58 years unexpired.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One, the excellent LEASEHOLD corner PREMISES, 6, Lloyd's-row, facing Green-terrace, New River Head, a spot well known as including the celebrated Spa of Islington; also two Houses adjoining, being 1 and 2, Spa Cottages, together with the Ground Rents arising from the cottages Nos. 3 to 18, inclusive, which are re-let for the whole term, securing the ground rent for the whole, and leaving a net income of 80l. 18s. per annum, held for 58 years unexpired.—May be viewed, and particulars had at the Mart; of W. L. HANLEY, Esq. Solicitor, 34, Wilson-street, Finsbury-square; and at CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY's Offices, 28, Regent-street, Waterloo-place.

WANDSWORTH.—Valuable Leasehold Estate, comprising two delightful Villas, a Cottage, and a Plot of Building Land, with a frontage of 400 feet: the whole commanding a beautiful prospect of the banks of the Thames—held for 88 years.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One, a very eligible LEASEHOLD ESTATE, known as NORTH FIELDS VILLAS, WANDSWORTH; comprising two well-built villa residences, each containing 10 rooms, and having coach-houses and stabling; a cottage, held at a pepper-corn; a very desirable plot of building ground, with a frontage of 400 feet to a private road, having the sewers formed, and a depth of 160 feet for pleasure grounds. The whole estate has a delightful south west aspect, and commands a most attractive prospect of the banks of the Thames, extending to the Cedars at Putney. One villa is let at 55l. per annum, the other is in hand, thus affording a compact estate both for investment and occupation, with an excellent opportunity for a safe building speculation.—May be viewed, and particulars had on the premises; at the Mart; of Mr. PARSONS, upholsterer, Battersea-rise; and at CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY's offices, 28, Regent-street, Waterloo-place.

PUTNEY COLLEGE ESTATE.—Important to Capitalists, Builders, Speculators, &c.—The desirable Freehold Property comprising the site of Putney College, about 11 acres, with the excellent and valuable river frontage thereto, being the only spot from London to Richmond of its character, on the south bank of the Thames, without a towing path, also an Inclosure of 2½ acres of Freehold Building Land, lying on the opposite side of the road.

MESSRS. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY have the honour to announce that they are directed by the Council of the College of Civil Engineers to offer this valuable FREEHOLD PROPERTY to the competition of the public, at the AUCTION MART on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One, comprising the beautiful site of the establishment known as Putney College, a plot of land containing nearly 11 acres, bounded by the high road from London and sloping to the banks of the Thames, adorned with forest trees of extraordinary beauty and stately growth, with the truly valuable and only river frontage of the character, obtainable from London to Richmond, free from the rights of the towing-path, and from its elevated position, its compact form, and its many other advantages, offers to capitalists, builders, and others, an unusual opportunity for a desirable high class building speculation, affording numerous frontages for villas, crescents, or terraces, with the beautiful river prospect and pleasing views of the nobility's seats on the opposite bank; also an Enclosure of Freehold Building Land, lying on the opposite side of the road, about 2½ acres, with valuable frontages thereto, adapted for small villas, which are in much request in this locality.—Plans and particulars may be obtained at the Mart; of Messrs. WHITE and BORRETT, Solicitors, 10, Whitehall-place; of Messrs. PICKERING and SMITH, Land Surveyors, 14, Whitehall-place; and at Messrs. CHINNOCK and GALSWORTHY's Auction and Land Offices, 28, Regent-street.

LAW PROPERTY ASSURANCE and TRUST SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand, London, May 1
Notice is hereby given, that the SECOND ANNUAL GE MEETING of the SHAREHOLDERS of this Society will be held at the Society's Offices, DAY, the 28th MAY instant, at Twelve o'clock precisely.— of the Board of Directors,
W. NEISON, Actuary and Sec.

THE LONDON AND PROVINCIAL LAW ASSURANCE SOCIETY.
Capital, One Million.
The Sixth Annual General Meeting of this Society was held at the Office, No. 22, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, on the 14th of April, 1852, when John Allan Powell, of Lincoln's-inn, esq. was elected a director, in the place of James Stephen Wickens, esq. resigned, upon his retirement from the Profession. Charles John Bloxam, of Lincoln's-inn-fields, esq. was also elected a director, in the place of Barnes Peacock, esq. resigned, upon his appointment to India; and John Kirby Hedges, esq. of Wallingford, was elected an auditor in the place of F. B. Beevor, esq. resigned.
The balance sheet for the year ending the 31st of December, 1851, with a report from the directors, was read and unanimously approved. It appeared, as the fact was, that the income of the Society arising from dividends and interest on investments, and from the premiums on existing policies (averaging above 1,000*l.* each, and assuring upwards of 433,000*l.*), amounted to nearly 18,000*l.* per annum; and that the sum invested in Government and on real securities, with the cash in hand, after discharging all claims and demands to that day, was nearly 80,000*l.*
This sum, with the known respectability and liability of the proprietors to the extent of the capital, must be a sufficient guarantee of the stability of the Society, as well as of the firm foundation upon which it was formed—namely, that all the profits should be accumulated for a period of ten years, and that at the expiration of that time, viz. on the 31st of December, 1855, a division should be made of four-fifths to the assured under policies (with profits) effected before the 31st of December, 1853, and of one-fifth to the proprietors; thus forming a fund to answer any unforeseen calamity, and producing, over and above the paid-up capital, upwards of 40,000*l.* in six years, and which, without any increase of business, must be more than trebled in the ensuing four years.
All policies effected (with profits) before the 31st of December, 1853, will be entitled to participate in such division.
JOHN I Actuary and Secretary.

FRENCH.—Mons. M. DE BEAUVOISIN'S CLASS ROOMS, 17, KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY.—NEW ELEMENTARY and CONVERSATION CLASSES are now being formed on M. MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence. "Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-resisting arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered, with dry, non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. Water, Steam, or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books, Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating the best non-conductors, constitute Milner's Fire-resisting Chambers. See certificates of hundreds of tests and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22, No. 642, are removed to their London Depôt, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (adding the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Sample Safes, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire-resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.—

On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr. Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's churchyard, London; 28, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street, Manchester; and Horseley-fields, Wolverhampton.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and PENETRATING HAIR-BRUSHES.—The tooth-brush performs the highly important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleaning in the most extraordinary manner,—hair never comes loose, 1s. Peculiarly penetrating hair-brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia Bristles, which will not soften like common hair; improved clothes brush, that cleans harmlessly in one-third the usual time; the new Velvet-Brush; and immense stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponge.

At METCALFE, BINGLEY, and CO.'s only establishment, 130 B, Oxford street, one door from Holles-street.

CAUTION.—Beware of the word "from" Metcalfe's, adopted by some houses. Metcalfe's Alkaline Tooth Powder 2s. per box.

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS (6 & 7 Vic. cap. 65), an elegant light walking Over Coat, or may be worn without another. This delightful spring and summer garment is made principally of the finest Australian Wool—it has been honoured with the distinguished patronage of the elite of the Empire, and is correctly pronounced to be the most economical, graceful, and gentlemanly Over Coat of the season. Price with silk sleeve linings, TWO GUINEAS. Also, the REGISTERED CANTAB, a new morning coat, of the same cloth, 38s.

The Pardessus d'Eté, for dust, heat, &c. the same price as their improved Guinea Trousers.

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT, as shown in the Great Exhibition, Class 20, No. 23, is a garment made entirely without gathers. These auxiliaries to the shirt have hitherto been considered indispensable, but, like everything else where the ingenious mind is directed to getting rid of complication, simplicity is proved to be the attribute of perfection. It may be confidently eulogized for its nicety of fit and great ease and comfort.—From the Morning Herald.—At WILLIAM REID'S, 51, Conduit-street, Regent-street. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and hosiery in every variety.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S PATENT CONCENTRATED MILK.

"Supplies Fresh Milk at all times."—Times, September 16, 1850.

"It was almost (if not quite) equal in flavour and quality to Milk fresh from the Cow."—Captain H. T. Austin, Commander of the Arctic Expedition. H.M.S. Resolute. 1st October, 1851.

"The Milk is most admirable; none should go to sea without it."—Captain Ommaney, H.M.S. Assistance, Arctic Expedition, 25th October, 1851.

"The greatest comfort and blessing we had on board our ships in the Arctic Expedition."—Medical Officer's Report to the Lords of the Admiralty. November, 1851.

Preserved in hermetically sealed tins, each tin producing seven times the quantity of pure milk.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S COCOA and MILK, and CHOCOLATE and MILK, are combinations of the Concentrated Milk with the finest Trinidad Cocoa and the choicest French Chocolate, in hermetically sealed tins. These delicious preparations are wholly free from the admixtures so common in the packet Cocoas, and considering their quality are equally expensive; for example, a breakfast cup of Pure Cocoa, combined with milk and sugar, can be had at the cost of a penny, by merely adding boiling water.

THE PRIZE MEDAL at the GREAT EXHIBITION was awarded to these preparations for their Novelty, Utility, and Economy; and they were constantly used in the Refreshment Rooms of the Exhibition, giving universal satisfaction.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S INFANT'S FOOD, is a combination of the Concentrated Milk with pure Farina, and will be found a light and nourishing diet for Invalids as well as Infants, requiring only boiling water for its instant preparation.

The whole of the above are prepared under the immediate inspection of Mr Moore, the Patentee, who was for many years the ordinary medical attendant of the Royal Family in London.

The Finest FRENCH CHOCOLATES in every variety, made expressly for the subscribers by one of the first Paris manufacturers. These Chocolates, it may be observed, are REALLY FRENCH, and are greatly superior to those commonly sold as French, but which are in fact, generally speaking, of English manufacture.

MOORE and BUCKLEY, Ranton Abbey Farm and Works, Staffordshire; and 4, Upper East Smithfield, London, and sold retail by all respectable Grocers and Chemists, &c. in town and country.

THE PRIZE MEDAL, with "Honourable Mention," has been awarded for the GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, by the Jurors of the Exhibition of all Nations, and is now used in the Royal Laundry. Being thus doubly noticed for its "General Superiority" (a mark of distinction conferred on no other) by the Royal Commissioners and Jury, from amongst thirty or forty exhibitors, sets it far above every other of its competitors. The ladies are, therefore, respectfully requested to make a trial of the Glenfield Patent Double-refined Powder Starch, which, for domestic use, now stands unrivalled. See also testimonials from the laundress to Her Majesty; the Lady Mayoress of London; the lady of W. Chambers, Esq. of Glenormiston, one of the Publishers of Chambers's Edinburgh Journal, the laundresses of the Marchioness of Breadalbane, Countess of Eglinton, Countess of Dartmouth, &c.

The attention of Shippers and Merchants is respectfully called to the above article, now in large demand in the British Colonies and United States, where it commands always the highest prices. Shipping Orders executed in a superior manner, and on the shortest notice.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently inflicts twofold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 10l. 10s. A first-rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for 30 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 4l., tradesmen's, 6l., 8l. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 1l. 11s. 6d., single horse, 1l. 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each. City-road, next Bunhill-fields Burial-ground. Originated in 1842.

CHEAP AND DURABLE ROOFING.

F. M'NEILL & CO.'S PATENT ASPHALTED ROOFING FELT.

[PRICE ONE PENNY PER SQUARE FOOT.]

As a roofing it is light, durable and effective. Half the strength of timber used for slates or tiles only is necessary, and is particularly desirable for farm buildings, workshops, and emigrants' houses; supplied in long lengths by 32 inches wide, and easily applied by unpractised hands.

It is an excellent covering for Verandas, desirable to form light ceilings, and to place under slates, tiles, or metal, to counteract the heat of the sun, and the wet and frost, to top rooms, and church roofs.

Also thick HAIR FELT for deadening sound under floors, and VERY THICK HAIR FELT for clothing the boilers and pipes of the steam engine, saving 30 per cent. in fuel.

A WATERPROOF BITUMINOUS FELT, for lining damp walls, free from odour, and can be papered on or coloured, and is a very effective remedy. Price One Penny per Square Foot.

Samples and full directions, with illustrations on the cheap construction of roofs (which any carpenter can follow), sent post free, and orders by post executed. Experienced workmen also sent out. Established thirteen years.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY WORKS OF THE KIND IN LONDON.

SEYSSEL ASPHALTE.

LEGAL AND OTHER IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS CAN BE EFFECTUALLY PROTECTED FROM DAMP AND VERMIN.

DAMP AND GASEOUS EXHALATIONS.

SANITARY MEASURES.

MEMBERS of BOARDS of HEALTH are especially directed to the most EFFECTIVE MEANS which they can ADOPT to PREVENT the injurious and often FATAL EFFECTS upon the HEALTH of the COMMUNITY, arising from exhalations that are produced from moisture, decayed animal matter (as in graveyards), stagnant water, and collections of fetid refuse, tending to produce a miasmatic state of atmosphere. In situations so affected, the impervious quality of the ASPHALTE of SEYSSEL renders it the most perfect PAVEMENT or COVERING that can be relied upon for hermetically closing, and thereby preventing the rising of moisture and the escape of noxious vapours. The present extensive application of this material for covering roofs, terraces, and arches, for preventing the percolation of wet, is strong evidence of its effectiveness for the above purposes.

 The exclusive supply of ASPHALTE from the MINES of PYRIMONT SEYSSEL is conceded to this COMPANY.

A SUBSTITUTE for PAINT, and to PROMOTE CLEANLINESS, which at all times is necessarily conducive to HEALTH, and this, as well as economy, is greatly promoted by substituting, for the noxious process of painting with oil and white lead, STEPHENS'S ORIGINAL STAINS and DYES for WOOD, to resemble Oak, Mahogany, Satin, and Rose-wood. Every original invention, when known and established, attracts a host of imitators ready to seize on and profit by another's ingenuity. So in the case of these Stains and Dyes, several imitators have sprung up, but the original inventor begs to assure the public that the time he has bestowed upon these articles to render them perfect ensures against disappointment in their use; his well-known experience in the preparation of colours enabling him to effect the most perfect imitations of the various ornamental woods, reflecting all the beauty of the natural grain. They are prepared and sold by HENRY STEPHENS, No. 54, Stamford-street, Blackfriars-road, London, in bottles at 6d. and 1s. each, and at 8s. per gallon. They may be obtained in powder at 8s. per lb. which dissolves in water to form the liquid, and one pound will make one gallon of stain, and cover about 120 square yards.

N. B. The trade supplied, and a discount allowed. Where also may be obtained STEPHENS'S well-known WRITING FLUIDS.

"For the apparel oft proclaims the man."—Hamlet.

EVERY WELL-DRESSED MAN KNOWS how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its requirements with a well-cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured. Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently doomed to appear in clothes, however costly, that never can become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a deformity in costume, FREDERICK FOX adopts this means of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years, always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of its individual wearer, and the purposes it is intended to serve, thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that regard for economy which the spirit of the age dictates.—F. FOX, Practical Tailor, 73, Cornhill, same side of the way as the Royal Exchange.

SCHWEPPE'S SODA, POTASS, and MAGNESIA WATERS and AERATED LEMONADE continue to be manufactured upon the largest scale at their several Establishments in London, Liverpool, Bristol, and Derby. The celebrity of these well-known waters, and the preference they universally command, are evidences that their original superior quality over all others is well sustained. Every bottle is protected by a label with the name of their firm, without which none is genuine, and it may be had of nearly all respectable chemists throughout the kingdom. Importers of the German Selters Water, direct from the springs, as for the last twenty years.—51, Berners-street, London.

Sales by Auction and Private Contract.

Valuable Freehold Property, West Cheam, in the county of Surrey, distance about three miles from Epsom, and within five minutes' walk of the Cheam Station on the Epsom direct line. A delightful Freehold Estate, situate in this charming, picturesque, and healthy village, by which the property is surrounded.

MR. J. CAIN is favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, by order of the proprietor (unless previously disposed of by private contract), at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, at Twelve for One, all that truly valuable and important ESTATE, known as CHEAM HOUSE. This eligible property is surrounded by a ring fence, every portion of which presents a road frontage, thus affording a rare and almost unequalled opportunity for building speculation in a locality where villas are so much desired and sought for, but not to be obtained. The small capitalist or spirited purchaser can here insure a safe investment. To mercantile gentlemen, whose avocations call their daily attendance in London, and, above all, the great advantage of locating their families in a pure and healthy air, blended with the very easy access to the metropolis, the village of Cheam must be acknowledged as a highly favoured spot. The substantial mansion is well calculated for the reception of a family of distinction, one wing of which has, within a very few years, been built at a great outlay, under the direction of a first-rate architect. The residence contains, on the upper floor, six good bed-chambers; on the first floor are two noble bow bed-rooms, each 25 feet by 18 feet, three others, severally 23 feet by 15 feet, 19 feet by 12 feet, and 16 feet by 15 feet, three other rooms of less magnitude, two dressing rooms, large nursery bed-room, water-closet, and morning drawing-room. On the ground floor will be found a noble entrance-hall, large dining-room, 28 feet by 17 feet; octagon drawing-room, 20 feet by 20 feet, ante drawing-room, 27 feet by 18 feet, study or breakfast-room, and a small sitting-room. The principal reception-room communicates with the extensive and beautifully timbered lawn by a flight of stone steps. The offices are numerous, and judiciously arranged for every possible domestic comfort and convenience; a detached stable-yard, with coach houses for three carriages, and excellent stabling for five horses, with lofts, three rooms, and one sitting-room over. The grounds comprehend extensive walled kitchen gardens, well cropped and stocked, a beautiful verdant lawn, tastefully adorned with splendid timber and flowering shrubs, and a fancy meadow—in all averaging nearly seven acres, all parts of which are well adapted for building purposes, and affording to each villa an adequate proportion of ground. Plans and particulars are in preparation, which may be had of Messrs. Gregson and Kewell, Solicitors, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street, J. B. Watson, Esq., Surveyor, 39, Manchester-street, Manchester-square; on the premises, West Cheam; at the Mart; at the principal inns; and at the Auctioneer's Estate Offices, Richmond, Surrey. The estate may be viewed at any time on application to Mr. Brown, the gardener, on the premises.

Important and Valuable Sale of Freehold Property, at Richmond, in Ten Lots (unless previously disposed of by private contract).

MR. JAMES CAIN is honoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the GREYHOUND INN, RICHMOND, on TUESDAY, the 29th JUNE, 1852, at One for Two o'clock, by order of the proprietors, TEN SEMI-DETACHED ELEGANT FREEHOLD VILLA RESIDENCES, of handsome modern elevation, designed, and erected (regardless of expense), in the most substantial, ornamental, and architectural manner. The whole are most respectably tenanted, at the following rentals—Two at 95l. per annum, two at 87l.; four at 70l., one at 100l.; and one at 120l. thus producing a net rental of 894l. per annum. The above are situate on the most retired and sunny side of Richmond-green, known as the High Walks, and abutting upon and commanding extensive views over the Royal Park, fine pure air and gravelly soil. These delightful villas are approached by front gardens and portico entrances, with ornamental flower-gardens in the rear, within four minutes' walk of the Richmond Railway Station, being within twenty minutes' communication with London.—Plans and particulars are preparing, and may shortly be had at the Auction Mart, London; of Messrs. Birchan, Dalrymple, and Drake, Solicitors, 46, Parliament-street, Westminster; Messrs. Nicholson and Son, Surveyors and Builders, Wandsworth; at the principal inns in the neighbourhood; and at the Auctioneer's Estate Agency Office, Kink-street, Richmond, Surrey.

Policy of Assurance, on a life of 87, in the Law Life Assurance Company, and Three Shares in the same prosperous establishment, a 100l. Share in Drury-lane Theatre; and Shares in Coupland's Patent for Improvements in Furnaces by the Consumption of Smoke. By Mr. JURY, at the AUCTION ROOMS, 28, Chancery-lane, on THURSDAY, JUNE 10, at 12 for 1, by directions of the Executors of John Close, Esq. deceased, in lots.

HAMPSHIRE.—The Botleigh Grange Estate, within five miles of Southampton.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One (unless previously disposed of), the exceedingly desirable and important FREEHOLD ESTATE of Botleigh Grange, consisting of a most substantial and elegant Elizabethan mansion, with all the appendages for the residence of a first-rate family, surrounded by well-arranged gardens and pleasure-grounds, approached by carriage-drives from the entrance lodges, and seated on a gentle eminence in the midst of a beautifully timbered and finely undulated park of about sixty acres, intersected by a trout-stream, forming itself in the centre of the park into a large and ornamental sheet of water. In addition to the park there are several fields of rich arable, and the estate comprises altogether about 190 acres, remarkably compact and beautifully wooded. This desirable property combines many undeniable advantages, and the situation is peculiarly favourable, being within five miles of Southampton, only a mile and a half from the Botleigh Station, and but two hours' journey from London.—Particulars may be obtained at Garraway's; and of Mr. Green, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond street.

CHELTENHAM.—Important Freehold Property, comprising about twenty acres, situate close to the town of Cheltenham, and being part of the Park Estate, presenting very eligible sites for building purposes.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S COFFEE-HOUSE, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One (unless in the mean time disposed of), a most desirable PROPERTY, possessing great advantages for investment as a building speculation for twenty villa residences, or for the erection of a mansion, in the midst of delightful grounds, laid out with the greatest taste by an eminent landscape gardener, comprising a broad gravel esplanade, meandrous walks, well-grown flowering shrubs, ornamental timber, and a beautiful sheet of water, well sheltered by the distant hills, and almost in the heart of the fashionable town of Cheltenham, together with a small elegant Villa of the Italian style of architecture at the entrance, and a substantial building, intended for stables, erected at a considerable outlay, and which might be easily converted into a residence. The attention of capitalists is specially invited to this property, which presents peculiar advantages.—Particulars may be obtained of G. O. Payne, Esq. Tivoli, Cheltenham; Mr. Howard, Solicitor, Cheltenham; the principal hotels at the same place; at Garraway's; at Mr. Green's Offices, 28, Old Bond-street, and upon personal application at the Royal Insurance Company's Offices, Royal Insurance-buildings, Liverpool.

BRENT LODGE, FINCHLEY.—An elegant modern Residence, and nearly 25 acres of Pleasure-Grounds and park-like Land, 5½ miles from the Regent's-park, 8 from the City, and 2½ from a Station on the Great Northern Railway.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, at One (unless previously sold), the admired ESTATE of BRENT LODGE, most pleasingly situate in the salubrious and rural village of Finchley, and comprising one of the most recherché abodes for a family of taste and fortune within its distance of the metropolis. It was erected a few years since, under the superintendence of an eminent architect, and decorated in a remarkably chaste and elegant style. It is approached by two entrance lodges and carriage-drives, and is seated in very pleasingly arranged grounds and well timbered park-like land, the whole amounting to about twenty-five acres, twelve being freehold, and the remainder leasehold, at a moderate rent. The offices farm, and outbuildings, are on the most approved plan, and the whole property is in the highest possible order. Particulars may shortly be had of Messrs. Evans and Clode, Solicitors, 2, Gray's-inn-square; of Anthony Salvin, Esq. Architect, 30, Argyle-street, Regent street; at Garraway's; and of Mr. Green, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond-street.

CHIGWELL, ESSEX.—Desirable small Copyhold Estate.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) will SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on TUESDAY, JUNE 8, at One (if not previously disposed of by private contract), a desirable small COPYHOLD PROPERTY, known as BROOM HILL COTTAGE, very pleasantly situate on the high road, at the entrance of the rural village of CHIGWELL, only eleven miles from town; with neat garden, a rich meadow, and a small slip of ground, containing altogether about two acres, commanding a very valuable and extensive frontage to the road.—Printed particulars may be obtained at the King's Head, Chigwell; at Garraway's, of R. Buchanan, Esq. Solicitor, 1, Walbrook-buildings, City; and, with cards to view, of Mr. Green, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond street.

QUEEN-SQUARE, BLOOMSBURY.—Freehold Residence, with Stabling.

MR. GREEN (28, Old Bond-street) has been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2, at One (if not in the meantime disposed of by private contract), the capital substantially built FREEHOLD FAMILY RESIDENCE, No. 23, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, in the best part of this desirable and central situation, with large garden in the rear, communicating with excellent leasehold stabling in Greville-mews, with spacious stable-yard: the whole premises being of the estimated value of 300l. per annum, and presenting a singularly desirable opportunity for residence or investment.—Particulars may be obtained at Garraway's; of Brooke Turner, Esq. Solicitor, 1, Red Lion square; and of Mr. Green, Estate Agent and Auctioneer, 28, Old Bond-street.

WATER ONLY REQUIRED!

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S PATENT CONCENTRATED MILK.

Supplies Fresh Milk at all times." Times, September 16, 1850

"It was almost (if not quite) equal in flavour and quality to Milk fresh from the Cow." Captain H. T. Austins, Commander of the Arctic Expedition. H.M.S. Resolute, 1st October, 1851.

"The Milk is most admirable; none should go to sea without it."—Captain Ommaney, H.M.S. Assistance, Arctic Expedition, 25th October, 1851.

"The greatest comfort and blessing we had on board our ships in the Arctic Expedition."—Medical Officer's Report to the Lords of the Admiralty, November, 1851.

Preserved in hermetically sealed tins, each tin producing seven times the quantity of pure milk.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S COCOA and MILK, and CHOCOLATE and MILK, are combinations of the Concentrated Milk with the finest Trinidad Cocoa and the choicest French Chocolate, in hermetically sealed tins. These delicious preparations are wholly free from the admixtures so common in the packet Cocoas, and considering their quality are equally expensive; for example, a breakfast cup of Pure Cocoa, combined with milk and sugar, can be had at the cost of a penny, by merely adding boiling water.

THE PRIZE MEDAL at the GREAT EXHIBITION was awarded to these preparations for their Novelty, Utility, and Economy; and they were constantly used in the Refreshment Rooms of the Exhibition, giving universal satisfaction.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S INFANT'S FOOD, is a combination of the Concentrated Milk with pure Farina, and will be found a light and nourishing diet for Invalids as well as Infants, requiring only boiling water for its instant preparation.

The whole of the above are prepared under the immediate inspection of Mr Moore, the Patentee, who was for many years the ordinary medical attendant of the Royal Family in London.

The Finest FRENCH CHOCOLATES in every variety made expressly for the subscribers by one of the first Paris manufacturers. These Chocolates it may be observed, are REALLY FRENCH, and are greatly superior to those commonly sold as French, but which are in fact, generally speaking, of English manufacture.

MOORE and BUCKLEY, Banton Abbey Farm and Works, Staffordshire, and 4, Upper East Smithfield, London, and sold retail by all respectable Grocers and Chemists, &c. in town and country.

THE PRIZE MEDAL, with "Honourable

Mention," has been awarded for the GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, by the Jurors of the Exhibition of all Nations, and is now used in the Royal Laundry. Being thus doubly noticed for its "General Superiority" (a mark of distinction conferred on no other) by the Royal Commissioners and Jury, from amongst thirty or forty exhibitors, sets it far above every other of its competitors. The ladies are, therefore, respectfully requested to make a trial of the Glenfield Patent Double-refined Powder Starch, which, for domestic use, now stands unrivalled. See also testimonials from the laundress to Her Majesty; the Lady Mayoress of London, the lady of W. Chambers, Esq. of Glenormiston, one of the Publishers of Chambers's Edinburgh Journal; the laundresses of the Marchioness of Breadalbane; Countess of Eglinton; Countess of Dartmouth, &c.

"For the apparel oft proclaims the man."—Hamlet.

EVERY WELL-DRESSED MAN KNOWS

how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its requirements with a well-cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured. Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently doomed to appear in clothes, however costly, that never can become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a deformity in costume, FREDERICK FOX adopts this means of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years, always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of its individual wearer and the purposes it is intended to serve, thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that regard for economy which the spirit of the age dictates.—F. FOX, Practical Tailor, 73, Cornhill, same side of the way as the Royal Exchange.

SCHWEPPE'S SODA, POTASS, and MAGNESIA WATERS and AERATED LEMONADE continue to be manufactured upon the largest scale at their several Establishments in London, Liverpool, Bristol, and Derby. The celebrity of these well-known waters, and the preference they universally command, are evidences that their original superior quality over all others is well sustained. Every bottle is protected by a label with the name of their firm, without which none is genuine, and it may be had of nearly all respectable chemists throughout the kingdom. Importers of the German Seltzers Water, direct from the springs, as for the last twenty years.—51, Berners-street, London.

SEYSSEL ASPHALTE.

LEGAL AND OTHER IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS CAN BE EFFECTUALLY PROTECTED FROM DAMP AND VERMIN.

DAMP AND GASEOUS EXHALATIONS.

SANITARY MEASURES.

MEMBERS of BOARDS of HEALTH are especially directed to the most EFFECTIVE MEANS which they can ADOPT to PREVENT the injurious and often FATAL EFFECTS upon the HEALTH of the COMMUNITY, arising from exhalations that are produced from moisture, decayed animal matter (as in grave-yards), stagnant water, and collections of fetid refuse, tending to produce a miasmatic state of atmosphere. In situations so affected, the impervious quality of the ASPHALTE of SEYSSEL renders it the most perfect PAVEMENT or COVERING that can be relied upon for hermetically closing, and thereby preventing the rising of moisture and the escape of noxious vapours. The present extensive application of this material for covering roofs, terraces, and arches, for preventing the percolation of wet, is strong evidence of its effectiveness for the above purposes.

MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards

in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence.

"Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-taming arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. Water, Steam, or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books, Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating the best non-conductors, constitute Milner's Fire-resisting Chambers. See certificates of hundreds of tests and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22, No. 612, are removed to their London Depôt, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (adding the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Sample Safes, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire-resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.—

On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the sec[illegible] this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars. THE SANS-PLI SHIRT, as shown in the Great Exhibition, Class 20, No. 23, is a garment made entirely without gathers. The auxiliaries to the shirt have hitherto been [illegible]dered indispensable, but, like everything else where the ingenious mind is directed to getting rid of complication, simplicity is proved to be the attribute of perfection. It may be confidently eulogized for its nicety of fit and great ease and comfort. From the Morning Herald.—At WILLIAM REID'S, 51, Conduit-street, Regent-street. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and hosiery in every variety.

BERDOE'S superior light OVERCOAT.—This well-known garment combines, with every quality essential to a really respectable article, that will ensure permanent satisfaction, th[illegible] additional recommendation of being thoroughly impervious to [illegible]in, and has long been reputed one of the most convenient, economical, and valuable garments ever invented. THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale and obvious saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently makes a twofold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall and every necessary article, is only 10l. 10s. A first-rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings complete for 30 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 4l., tradesmen's, 6l., 8l. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses 1l. 11s. 6d., single horse 1l. 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each.—City-road, next Bunhill-fields Burial-ground. Originated in 1842.

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT.—The INFALLIBLE TROUSER,

price One Guinea, or two pairs for forty shillings. These trousers being cut upon pure scientific principles, give every satisfaction to all purchasers; for elegance of form and correct fit they cannot be equalled. Morning coats in every variety. THE LAW and PRACTICE of BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETIES, Terminating and Permanent, and of FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETIES, with all the Cases decided to this time, Rules, Forms of Mortgages, Pleadings, and other Matters and Instructions. By JOHN THOMPSON, Esq. Barrister-at-law. Price 7s 6d. boards; 8s. cloth; 9s. 6d. half-calf; 10s. 6d. calf; and 1s. extra for interleaved copies.

"To the statutes and to the decisions (such as they are), including the decisions on those clauses in the Friendly Societies Acts, which, according to the latest authorities, are incorporated in the Building Societies Act, Mr Thompson's book furnishes a guide of which there was great need, notwithstanding the existence of a Government officer, appointed for the express purpose of keeping these and similar societies in the legal path."—Jurist.

"In the little book before us, Mr Thompson has succeeded in fulfilling (which is not often done) the promise of the title-page, and has presented to the public a most complete work upon a most important subject."—Morning Chronicle.

"To the large class of persons interested in building and other societies, this is just the sort of book wanted. The complexities that were believed to exist in connection with transactions of this nature, disappear before the explicit treatment of the subject by the author. To his own judicious remarks are superadded explanatory practical statements from the writings and speeches of others. But the work bears the stamp of the highest legal authorities; upwards of one hundred cases and decisions in matters relating to such societies, and having a general bearing, will render the work a valuable auxiliary to shareholders, each of whom should possess a copy."—Globe.

[illegible]luable Freehold Property, West Cheam, in the county of Surrey, distance about three miles from Epsom, and within five minutes' walk of the Cheam Station on the Epsom direct line. A delightful Freehold Estate, situate in this charming, picturesque, and healthy village, by which the property is surrounded.

MR. J. CAIN is favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, by order of the proprietor (unless previously disposed of by private contract), at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, at Twelve for One, all that truly valuable and important ESTATE, known as CHEAM HOUSE. This eligible property is surrounded by a ring fence, every portion of which presents a road frontage, thus affording a rare and almost unequalled opportunity for building speculation in a locality where villas are so much desired and sought for, but not to be obtained. The small capitalist or spirited purchaser can here insure a safe investment. To mercantile gentlemen, whose avocations call their daily attendance in London, and, above all, the great advantage of locating their families in a pure and healthy air, blended with the very easy access to the metropolis, the village of Cheam must be acknowledged as a highly favoured spot. The substantial mansion is well calculated for the reception of a family of distinction, one wing of which has, within a very few years, been built at a great outlay, under the direction of a first rate architect. The residence contains, on the upper floor, six good bed-chambers; on the first floor are two noble bow bed-rooms, each 25 feet by 18 feet, three others, severally 23 feet by 15 feet, 19 feet by 12 feet, and 16 feet by 15 feet, three other rooms of less magnitude, two dressing-rooms, large nursery bed-room, water-closet, and morning drawing room. On the ground floor will be found a noble entrance hall, large dining-room, 28 feet by 17 feet, octagon drawing room, 20 feet by 20 feet, ante drawing-room, 25 feet by 18 feet, study or breakfast room, and a small sitting-room. The principal reception-room communicates with the extensive and beautifully timbered lawn by a flight of stone steps. The offices are numerous, and judiciously arranged for every possible domestic comfort and convenience, a detached stable-yard, with coach houses for three carriages, and excellent stabling for five horses, with lofts, three bed-rooms, and one sitting-room [illegible]. The grounds comprehend [e]xtensive walled kitchen-garden [w]ell cropped and stocked, a beautiful verdant lawn, tastefully adorned with splendid [timber] and flowering shrubs, and a fancy meadow—in all averaging nearly seven acres, all parts of which are well adapted for building purposes, and affording to each villa an adequate proportion of ground.

Plans and particulars are in preparation, which may be had of Messrs. Gregson and Kewell, Solicitors, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street; J. B. Watson, Esq. Surveyor, 39, Manchester street, Manchester-square; on the premises, West Cheam; at the Mart; at the principal inns; and at the Auctioneer's Estate Offices, Richmond, Surrey. The estate may be viewed at any time on application to Mr. Brown, the gardener, on the premises.

Five Dwelling Houses, situate at Stepney, Mile-end, and Walworth; each House a lot suitable for occupation.

MR. MOORE will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, JUNE 10, at Twelve, a 7-roomed House, No. 40, King-street, Stepney, let at 24l.; term, 60 years; ground-rent, 4l. Two 7-roomed Houses, Skidmore-street, Mile-end, let at 20l. each; term 61 years, ground-rent, 2l. 10s. Two Houses, 12 and 13, Beresford-terrace, Beresford street, Walworth-road, let at 23l. each; term 51 years; ground-rent, 3l.—May be viewed, and particulars had at the Inns near the Properties; of Messrs. Sheffield, 68, Old Broad-street; at Mercers' Hall; at the Mart; and at the Auctioneer's Offices, Mile-end-road.

Seven Leasehold Estates, producing 768l. per annum, in ten lots, admirably adapted for the profitable investment of capital.

MR. MOORE will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, JUNE 10, at Twelve, Ten Houses, in the Grove, Homerton; let at 132l.; term, 71 years, ground-rent, 22l. 10s.; also Twenty Houses, Butcher-row, Old King-street, Deptford; let at 180l. per annum; term, 12 years; ground-rent, 45l. 10s.; Four Houses, Margaret street [illegible]; let at 86l.; term, 42 years; ground-rent, 13l. Four Houses, William-street, Mile-end; let at 73l.; term, 93 years; ground-rent, 11l. Eleven Houses (two with shops), Morpeth-road, Victoria park; let at 183l., term, 74 years; ground-rent, 20l. 15s. Nine Brick-built Cottages, Wanstead-flats, Forest-gate; let at 94l.; term, 90 years; ground-rent, 21l. and an Improved Rent of 10l. 13s. 9d. well secured on a house in Alfred-street, Stepney, for 20 years, and reversion of 40 years, remainder of term.—May be viewed and particulars had at the inns near the properties; of Messrs. Madox and Wyatt, 30, Clement's-lane, City; at the Mart; and at the Auctioneer's Offices, Mile-end-road.

BEDFORDSHIRE. Important and valuable Freehold Estate, known as Sandy place, comprising a substantial brick-built Mansion, with Park, Pleasure grounds, and Offices, capital Water Corn-mill, with Residence, [se]veral Farms and Homesteads, [illegible] Houses and Cottages in the village of Sandy, eligible and beautiful Building Sites, and valuable Garden and Accommodation Lands, the whole including about 1,500 acres of most fertile land, in a fine sporting country.

MR. BEADEL has been favoured with instructions to SELL BY AUCTION, at the MART, LONDON, [on] TUESDAY, JUNE 29, in forty lots, the highly important FREEHOLD and MANORIAL ESTATE of SANDY PLACE, situate at Sandy, in the county of Bedford, where there is a station on the Great Northern Railway, within eight miles of the town of Bedford, three of Biggleswade, fourteen of Huntingdon, and little more than one hour's ride from the metropolis. This property includes a fine old family mansion, with offices, pleasure-grounds, and gardens, most delightfully placed in a park studded with noble tre[es], close to the church and village of Sandy, but completely [enc]losed and screened by belt[s] of plantatio[n], and partially bounded by a branch of the river Ivel, also a valuable corn-mill, with excellent head of water, stone built residence and offices, comprising altogether about 85 acres. Several farms, with homesteads and agricultural buildings, extensive covers, ornamental plantations, and woods, containing about 1,000 acres, and forming a first-rate landed investment. Detached fields and accommodation lands surrounding the village, several houses and cottages, the Stone Axe Inn, and various plots of eligible building ground. The whole is freehold, and all tithe free excepting about 40 acres, which are subject to a corn rent.

This estate offers in[illegible]ections to [illegible] [ge]ntleman fond [illegible] [illegible] Oakle[y] [illegible] of Mr. Race's celebrated pack of harriers. The covers [and] plantations on the estate afford first rate partridge and pheasant shooting, and the game has been carefully preserved. The [p]rivate stream, which partly bounds the park, and the river Ivel, both well stocked with fish, afford ample opportunity for boating, fishing, and other aquatic sports. On part of the estate are quar[ries of] stone obtained from which is suited for building purposes and has been used in erecting churches and bridges in the neighbourhood. The quality of the soil is superior, a large portion being garden ground, which has long been celebrated for supplying the metropolis and manufacturing districts with cucumbers and every description of vegetable produce, for the transit of which the railway offers great facilities. Particulars may be obtained of Messrs. J. C. and H. Freshfield, New Bank-buildings, Lothbury; of Messrs. Wordsworth and Dunn, 32, Threadneedle street; of Messrs. Cole, Adelphi terrace, London; of Messrs. Blood and Douglas, Witham, Essex; of Mr. Tilcock, at Sandy; and of Mr. Beadel, 25, Gresham-street, London, where alone cards to view may be had.

GROUND-RENT. Capital Leasehold Investments, and a Reversion to a sum of 2,000l.

MR. W. H. HEWITT has received instructions from the Executors of the late Mr. DAVIS to SELL by AUCTION, at the Mart, on THURSDAY, JUNE 10, 1852, at Twelve o'Clock, in four Lots,—A FREEHOLD GROUND RENT, of 40l. per annum, secured upon Houses adjoining Wilson-street, Finsbury; a capital LEASEHOLD RESIDENCE, being No. 16, Westbourne place, Eaton-square, held for a long term, at a small ground-rent, and let to an excellent tenant, for a period of which upwards of three years are unexpired, at a rent of 70l. per annum; TWO SEMI-DETACHED RESIDENCES, being Nos. 27 and 28, North Bank, Regent's-park, held for a long term, at a low ground-rent, and let at rents amounting together to 70l. per annum; and the ABSOLUTE REVERSION to the sum of 2,000l. receivable on the death of a gentleman now in his 64th year.—Particulars and conditions of sale may be had at the Mart; of Charles Berkeley, Esq. 52, Lincoln's-inn fields; and at Mr. Hewitt's Offices, 11, Hart-street, Bloomsbury-square, London.

GROVE-HOUSE, LYMINGTON, HANTS.—Freehold Family Residence, with Pleasure Grounds, Garden, rich Meadow Land; with possession; admirably adapted for a gentleman fond of yachting.

MESSRS. MANSELL and ELLIOTT are instructed to SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, London, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, a highly desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE, comprising an excellent and most substantial family residence, known as Grove-house (late the residence of Lady Hussey Bickerton, deceased), very beautifully situate close to the town of Lymington, having a southern aspect, and commanding very charming and extensive views of the Solent Sea and the Isle of Wight, with excellent four stall stables, coach-houses, and other outbuildings, very productive gardens, greenhouse, shrubberies, and very superior meadow land, altogether about 4½ acres. The residence is in first-rate state of repair, is approached by a handsome portico, and contains spacious dining, drawing, and breakfast rooms, library, twelve good bedchambers, water-closets, and convenient servants' offices. The premises are admirably arranged, and abundantly supplied with excellent water. The locality is the most salubrious on the western coast, abounding with charming drives, is in the midst of first-rate society, and from its proximity to the Solent Sea (affording safe anchorage for yachts in all weathers), is peculiarly adapted for the abode of a gentleman fond of yachting.—For printed descriptive particulars and orders to view, apply to Messrs. Moore and St. Barbe, Solicitors, Lymington; J. A. M. Pinniger, Esq. 5, Raymond's-buildings, Gray's-inn; and to Messrs. Mansell and Elliott, Auctioneers and Land Agents, 13 a, Belgrave square, London, where a view of the residence may be [seen].

HAMPSHIRE. The Bramshaw Hill Estate, one of the most delightful Residential Properties in the New Forest (on the borders of Wilts), within four hours' journey of London.

MESSRS. MANSELL and ELLIOTT are favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, London, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9 (unless acceptable offer shall be previously made by private treaty), the [val]uable FREEHOLD ESTATE, lying in a ring fence, most delightfully situate, near the picturesque village of Bramshaw, close to, and with rights in, the New Forest, and comprising an excellent gentlemanly residence (which is a substantial and uniform structure), with superior and well-arranged stabling, offices, and out-buildings of every description, bailiff's cottage, an abundant supply of water, pleasure-grounds, lawn, shrubberies, extensive walks, walled gardens, hot-house and green-house, with vines in full bearing, and orangery, the whole surrounded by a park of 65 acres of pasture-land, beautifully adorned by choice and stately timber, and bounded on one side by the high road from Southampton to Salisbury. The residence, which is well placed on an eminence with a south aspect, in the centre of the estate, commanding varied and extensive scenery, is approached through the park by a carriage drive, with lodge entrance. It is surrounded by good roads, a beautiful and healthy neighbourhood, and excellent society, and is in the centre of the meets of hounds, and there is a church and post office near. It is distant from Lyndhurst five miles, Redbridge six, Southampton ten miles, and within a pleasant drive of the Redbridge and Romsey Railway Stations.—Printed particulars, with plans, may be had, in due time, of F. Dowding, Esq. Solicitor, 15, Vineyards, Bath; at the Dolphin Hotel, Southampton; Angel Hotel, Lymington; King's Arms, Dorchester; White Hart, Salisbury; at the Auction Mart; and at the offices of Messrs. Mansell and Elliott, Land-agents, Auctioneers, and Surveyors, 13 a, Belgrave-square, London, where orders to view may be had, and a view, with plan, can be seen.

EALING PARK, MIDDLESEX.—Long Leasehold Villas, for investment or occupation, in this much-admired and healthy locality, only twenty minutes from town by rail.

MESSRS. BULLOCK will SELL, at the AUCTION MART, on THURSDAY, the 17th inst. at Twelve for One o'clock, in two lots (unless previously disposed of), PARK VILLAS, EAST and WEST, a pair of gentlemanly semi-detached residences, charmingly situate, with front and back gardens, well drained, and abundantly supplied with hard and soft water. The title is most clear and simple, the premises being held by separate leases direct from the freeholder, for ninety-seven years unexpired, at ground-rents of 6l. 16s. 10d. each, land tax redeemed. May be viewed by permission. Particulars of Messrs. Bullock, 211, High Holborn; Mr. Steele, 1, Lincoln's-inn-fields; and Messrs. Murray, Rymer, and Murray, 7, Whitehall-place, Solicitors; also of Mr. Amor, and of Mr. Webb, plumber, at Ealing.

Eligible long Leasehold Investment, Camberwell, Surrey.

MESSRS. BULLOCK are directed by the Trustees to SELL at the AUCTION MART, on THURSDAY, the 17th inst. at Twelve for One o'clock, in one Lot, A PAIR of BRICK-BUILT GENTEEL SMALL RESIDENCES, conveniently arranged, and abundantly supplied with water, with Gardens and Forecourts, Nos. 1 and 2, Durham Cottages, Leipsic-road, a few minutes' walk from the Camberwell high road; now and for the last five years occupied by Mr. Schroeder and Mr. Ackrill, yearly tenants, at 26l. per annum each. Held for fifty-four years unexpired at Midsummer next, at an apportioned rent of 6l. Land-tax redeemed.—May be viewed by permission. Particulars at the Mart; of Messrs. Bullock, 211, High Holborn; and of Mr. Ralph Docker, Solicitor, Birmingham.

IMPORTANT LANDED PROPERTY.—Upwards of 1,000 Acres.—FELTWELL, NORFOLK. TO BE SOLD by PRIVATE CONTRACT, a most desirable FREEHOLD and LEASEHOLD ESTATE, late the property of Mr. Wm. Nurse, deceased, comprising about 584 acres of capital land, principally arable, with two respectable freehold farmhouses, barns, stables, and outbuildings, and 488 acres of excellent fen land (the greater part of which has been clayed) under a complete drainage, with house and necessary farm-buildings. The leasehold is held under a reasonable lease from the Master and Fellows of Christ's College, Cambridge, twenty years of which were unexpired at Michaelmas last. Also, the Manor of East Hall, in Feltwell, with the rights and privileges to the same belonging. [The]re is excellent shooting over the above property, the neighbourhood abounding with game, and the Estate is situate within three miles of the Lakenheath, and five miles of the Brandon Station, on the Eastern Counties and Norfolk Railway.—For further particulars apply to Mr. Geo. Nurse, the Lodge, Feltwell; Messrs. Manson and Tattersall, Land Agents, Clare and Newmarket; or to Mr. Edmund Tattersall, Hyde-park-corner, London.

A SUBSTITUTE for PAINT, and to PROMOTE CLEANLINESS, which at all times is necessarily conducive to HEALTH; and this, as well as economy, is greatly promoted by substituting, for the noxious process of painting with oil and white lead, STEPHENS'S ORIGINAL STAINS and DYES for WOOD, to resemble Oak, Mahogany, Satin, and Rose-wood. Every original invention, when known and established, attracts a host of imitators ready to seize on and profit by another's ingenuity. So in the case of those Stains and Dyes, several imitators have sprung up; but the original inventor begs to assure the public that the time he has bestowed upon those articles to render them perfect ensures against disappointment in their use; his well-known experience in the preparation of colours enabling him to effect the most perfect imitations of the various ornamental woods, reflecting all the beauty of the natural grain. They are prepared and sold by HENRY STEPHENS, No. 54, Stamford-street, Blackfriars-road, London, in bottles at 6d. and 1s. each, and at 8s. per gallon. They may be obtained in powder at 8s. per lb. which dissolves in water to form the liquid, and one pound will make one gallon of stain, and cover about 120 square yards.

N.B. The trade supplied, and a discount allowed. Where also may be obtained STEPHENS'S well-known WRITING FLUIDS.

DRIVER have been instructed, pursuant to an order of the High Court of Chancery, made in the above cause, to offer to public COMPETITION, at the AUCTION MART, on TUESDAY, the 29th of JUNE, at Twelve o'clock, in the first instance in one lot, but should it not then be sold it will be immediately afterwards offered in four lots, the above important and highly valuable FREEHOLD LANDED PROPERTY, lying within a ring fence, most eligibly situate in the parishes of Lower Beeding and Slaugham, in the preferable part of the county of Sussex, and only about three miles from the capital market town of Horsham, where there is a station on the London and Brighton Railway. The estate is situate in a fine sporting country, within a short distance of the kennel of the Crawley and Horsham fox hounds. It is surrounded with excellent roads, abounds with game, and adjoins the properties of Sir Charles Burrell, Robt Aldridge, Esq and other large landed proprietors. It comprises a stone built mansion suitable for the residence of a family of the highest respectability, situate upon an eminence commanding most delightful views of its own picturesque woods and plantations and the surrounding varied scenery, with extensive park, beautifully undulated and studded with fine stately timber, with a highly ornamental lake affording abundant fishing, in view of the mansion, and from which it is a prominent feature: together with the following farms, viz.—Park Farm, containing about 600 acres; Eastland's Farm, 160 acres; and Freechase Farm, 183 acres, with suitable homesteads to each and all necessary agricultural buildings, and about 700 acres of wood and thriving plantations and other lands, making, in the whole, nearly 2,000 acres of productive arable, pasture, meadow, and wood lands, including about 80 acres of orchards, producing rents of the estimated annual value of 1,500*l*. The estate being principally in hand, immediate possession may be had. It is admirably adapted either for occupation or investment, and abounds with stone quarries.—To be viewed on application to Mr. KAY, the Bailiff, residing on the estate. Printed particulars, with plans, may be had at the King's Head, Horsham; Star, Lewes; Old Ship, Brighton; White Hart, Guildford; of Messrs FIELDER, JOHNSON, and MASTER, Solicitors, 22, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square; Messrs. ROBINSON and HAYNES Solicitors, 17, Orchard-street, Portman-square; Messrs. NORRIS, ALLEN, and SIMPSON, Solicitors, Bedford-row; Messrs. BELL, STEWARD, and LLOYD, 59, Lincoln's-inn-fields, at the Auction Mart, and of Messrs. DRIVER, Surveyors and Land Agents, 5, Whitehall.

ORLEANS HOUSE, TWICKENHAM.—A noble and distinguished Freehold Mansion, Park, and extensive Pleasure-grounds, on the banks of the Thames, comprising in the whole about Thirty Acres.

MESSRS. DRIVER have been favoured with instructions to offer to PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the MART, on TUESDAY, JUNE 29, at Twelve (unless an acceptable offer should in the mean time be made by private contract), with immediate possession on the completion of the purchase, the above highly valuable and very distinguished FREEHOLD PROPERTY, most beautifully and delightfully situate on the banks of the Thames, and less than ten minutes' walk from the Twickenham Railway Station, and only one mile from that at Richmond, comprising a noble and elegant mansion, in most perfect order and repair, both ornamental and substantial, and replete with every accommodation for any family of distinction; containing fifteen bed-rooms and dressing-rooms; also all requisite reception rooms en suite, comprising dining and drawing rooms, library, boudoir, breakfast-room, bath-room, spacious halls, two staircases; likewise a magnificent conservatory in two compartments, a statuary room and picture-gallery. In the basement are all requisite domestic offices, and capital cellaring. The mansion is delightfully seated on a beautiful sloping lawn, and no expense has been spared to render it as complete as possible, at the same time combining substantial durability and convenience with embellishment of a most pure and classic style. The pleasure grounds are very extensive, laid out with acknowledged taste and judgment, ornamented with all kinds of luxuriant American and flowering shrubs, gravel and shaded walks, parterres, ornamental waters, fully stocked with gold-fish, and fountains, temples, and summer-houses. The park is encircled with gravel walks and belt plantations, and studded with stately elms and other timber. The carriage-drive is through the centre of the park, and the house is approached under a handsome stone portico. There are two lodges, likewise orangery, hot-houses, graperies, pinery, melon and forcing pits, greenhouses, two capital walled kitchen gardens, well stocked, and clothed with choice fruit-trees, gardener's house, cottages for labourers, a well-arranged farm yard, ice-house and pheasantry. An artesian well supplies the house, ponds, fountains, and premises with water. A spacious enclosed yard, with capital stabling, coach-house, with men-servants' apartments and lofts over. The property is nearly enclosed by brick walls.—To be viewed with cards only on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, after the 1st of June, between eleven and five o'clock, giving one day's previous notice, which may then be had of Messrs. DRIVER, Surveyors and Land Agents, 5, Whitehall, together with printed specifications and plan of the property. Printed specifications and plans may also be had of — WILLIAMS, Esq. 62, Lincoln's-inn-fields; and at the Mart.

QUEEN'S HOTEL, CHELTENHAM.—In the matter of the Joint Stock Companies' Winding-up Act, 1848, and of the Cheltenham Hotel Company.

MESSRS. DRIVER beg respectfully to inform the public that they have received directions from the official manager acting in pursuance of an order of Wm Brougham, esq. one of the Masters of the High Court of Chancery, to OFFER the following remarkably valuable and highly important PROPERTY for SALE by PUBLIC AUCTION, at the QUEEN HOTEL, CHELTENHAM, on SATURDAY, the 19th of JUNE inst at Twelve for One o'clock precisely, in One Lot, together with all the fixtures in and about the premises, and by direction of the said Master, will be put up at the sum of 8,000*l*. and there will be no reserved bidding. This property is equal to freehold, being copyhold of inheritance, and subject to merely a fixed nominal fine and quit rent not amounting in the whole to 1s.; most eligibly situate in and forming one side of Imperial-square, in the preferable part of Cheltenham, comprising the Queen's Hotel, of imposing elevation, with grand portico entrance overlooking the gardens in the square and the Imperial Promenade, and commanding extensive views in the distance. This hotel was built in the year 1837, at a cost of upwards of 40,000*l* and comprises on the principal and upper floors 58 best bedchambers, 46 servants' sleeping apartments, 16 elegant sitting rooms, richly embellished, and 2 excellent suites of apartments. On the ground floor is a noble entrance-hall and principal staircase, besides secondary staircases, spacious coffee-room, about 50 feet by 25 feet; two elegant drawing rooms, a suite of four handsome apartments, billiard room, and all requisite domestic offices for any establishment of the greatest magnitude, with excellent cellarage, and other accommodation in the basement; and excellent Tap, called the "Queen's;" a capital enclosed yard, with stabling for seventy horses, besides numerous loose boxes and lock-up coach-houses. This valuable property is capable of being divided so that a portion of the hotel can be appropriated as private dwelling-houses, with or without shops, at the same time thereby reducing the size of the hotel, as to render it a most desirable investment, and the lawn and grounds would form very valuable sites for building purposes. The whole of the household furniture and appendages, paintings, plate, plated articles, linen, china, glass, wines, carriages, horses, and numerous miscellaneous effects will be sold by auction on the premises shortly after the sale of the hotel. An inventory of the fixtures, which will be included in the property submitted for sale, may be inspected at Messrs DRIVER'S Offices, and also at the Queen's Hotel, Cheltenham. Printed particulars and plans of the property may be had on application to the official manager, JAMES HUTTON, Esq 46, Moorgate-street; of Messrs. RIXON and SON, King William-street, London, Solicitors to such manager; Messrs. BURR and Messrs. WILLIAMS and GRIFFITHS, Solicitors, and Mr. DANGERFIELD, Architect, Cheltenham; of Messrs. DAWES and SONS, Solicitors, Angel court, Throgmorton-street; Messrs. NEW and PRANCE, Solicitors, Evesham, Worcestershire; at the Queen's Hotel, Cheltenham; at the Auction Mart; and of Messrs. DRIVER, Surveyors and Land Agents, 5, Whitehall, London.

DORSETSHIRE.—Valuable Freehold Estate, called the Upton and East Ringstead Farms, comprising upwards of 492 acres of productive arable, pasture, and meadow lands, most eligibly situate, in the parish of Osmington, about five miles from Weymouth and seven from Dorchester, both capital market towns.

MESSRS. DRIVER have been favoured with instructions to offer to PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the AUCTION MART, on TUESDAY, JUNE 29th, at Twelve, in one lot, a very valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, exonerated from land-tax, well adapted for investment, most eligibly situate in the parish of, and within about a mile of the picturesque and rural village of Osmington, in the county of Dorset, about seven miles from Dorchester, thirteen from Wareham, and abutting south on the Ringstead Bay of the English Channel, opposite the delightful watering-place of Weymouth, from which it is distant about five miles, comprising Upton and East Ringstead Farms, lying very compact, and containing together upwards of 492 acres of highly productive arable, pasture, and meadow lands, with farm-house, homestead, and all necessary agricultural buildings, and sundry cottages dispersed over the estate; in the occupation of Mr. Richard Andrews, a highly respectable tenant, on lease, which will expire at Michaelmas next, at the net annual rent of 400*l*. when possession may be had. The property is situate within a few miles of three stations on the Southampton and Dorchester branch of the South-Western Railway, being only seven miles from the Dorchester station, eight from Wool, and four and a-half from Moreton.—Printed specifications, with plans annexed, may be had, after the 31st of May, at Luce's Hotel, Weymouth; King's Arms, Dorchester; Red Lion, Wareham; Radley's Hotel, Southampton; of Messrs. BRAY, WARRENS, and HARDING, Solicitors, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury; at the Auction Mart; and of Messrs. DRIVER, Surveyors and Land Agents, 5, Whitehall, London.

Important and Valuable Sale of Freehold Property at Richmond, in Ten Lots (unless previously disposed of by private contract).

MR. JAMES CAIN is honoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the GREYHOUND INN, RICHMOND, on TUESDAY, JUNE 29, at One for Two, by order of the Proprietor, TEN semi detached elegant FREEHOLD VILLA RESIDENCES, of handsome modern elevation, designed and executed regardless of expense, in the most substantial, ornamental, and architectural manner. The whole are most respectably tenanted at the following rentals: two at 95*l*. per annum; two at 97*l*; four at 70*l*; one at 110*l* and one at 120*l*.; thus producing a net rental of 804*l*. per annum. The above are situate on the most retired and sunny side of Richmond-green, known as the "High Walks," and abutting upon and commanding extensive views over the Royal Park, fine pure air, and gravelly soil. These delightful Villas are approached by front gardens and portico entrances, with ornamental flower-gardens in the rear, within four minutes' walk of the Richmond Railway Station being within twenty minutes' communication with London.—Plans and particulars are preparing, and may shortly be had, at the Auction Mart, London; of Messrs. BIRCHAM, DALRYMPLE, and DRAKE, solicitors, 46, Parliament-street, Westminster; Messrs NICHOLSON and SON, Surveyors and Builders, Wandsworth, at the principal Inns in the neighbourhood; and at the Auctioneer's Estate Agency Offices, King-street, Richmond, Surrey.

Valuable Freehold Property, West Cheam, in the county of Surrey, distance about three miles from Epsom, and within five minutes' walk of the Cheam Station on the Epsom direct line. A delightful Freehold Estate, situate in this charming, picturesque, and healthy village, by which the property is surrounded.

MR. J. CAIN is favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, by order of the proprietor (unless previously disposed of by private contract), at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, at Twelve for One, all that truly valuable and important ESTATE, known as CHEAM HOUSE. This eligible property is surrounded by a ring fence, every portion of which presents a road frontage, thus affording a rare and almost unequalled opportunity for building speculation in a locality where villas are so much desired and sought for, but not to be obtained. The small capitalist or spirited purchaser can here insure a safe investment. To mercantile gentlemen, whose avocations call their daily attendance in London, and, above all, the great advantage of locating their families in a pure and healthy air, blended with the very easy access to the metropolis, the village of Cheam must be acknowledged as a highly favoured spot. The substantial mansion is well calculated for the reception of a family of distinction, one wing of which has, within a very few years, been built at a great outlay, under the direction of a first-rate architect. The residence contains, on the upper floor, six good bed-chambers; on the first floor are two noble bow bed-rooms, each 25 feet by 18 feet; three others, severally 23 feet by 15 feet, 19 feet by 12 feet, and 16 feet by 15 feet, three other rooms of less magnitude, two dressing-rooms, large nursery bed room, water-closet, and morning drawing-room. On the ground floor will be found a noble entrance-hall, large dining-room, 26 feet by 17 feet; octagon drawing-room, 20 feet by 20 feet; ante drawing-room, 20 feet by 18 feet, study or breakfast-room, and a small sitting-room. The principal reception-room communicates with the extensive and beautifully timbered lawn by a flight of stone steps. The offices are numerous, and judiciously arranged for every possible domestic comfort and convenience; a detached stable-yard, with coach-houses for three carriages, and excellent stabling for five horses, with lofts, three bed rooms, and one sitting-room over. The grounds comprehend extensive walled kitchen gardens, well cropped and stocked, a beautiful verdant lawn, tastefully adorned with splendid timber and flowering shrubs, and a fancy meadow—in all averaging nearly seven acres, all parts of which are well adapted for building purposes, and affording to each villa an adequate proportion of ground.—Plans and particulars are in preparation, which may be had of Messrs GREGORY and KEW, Solicitors, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street; J. L. WATSON, Esq Surveyor, 39, Manchester-street, Manchester-square; on the premises, West Cheam; at the Mart, at the principal inns; and at the Auctioneer's Estate Offices, Richmond, Surrey. The estate may be viewed at any time on application to Mr. BROWN, the gardener, on the premises.

BEDFORDSHIRE.—Important and valuable Freehold Estate, known as Sandy place, comprising a substantial brick built Mansion, with Park, Pleasure-grounds, and Offices, capital Water Corn-mill, with Residence, several Farms and Homesteads, numerous Houses and Cottages in the village of Sandy, eligible and beautiful Building Sites, and valuable Garden and Accommodation Lands; the whole including about 1,500 acres of most fertile land, in a fine sporting country.

MR. BEADEL has been favoured with instructions to SELL BY AUCTION, at the MART, LONDON, on TUESDAY, JUNE 29, in forty lots, the highly important FREEHOLD and MANORIAL ESTATE of SANDY-PLACE, situate at Sandy, in the county of Bedford, where there is a station on the Great Northern Railway, within eight miles of the town of Bedford, three of Biggleswade, fourteen of Huntingdon, and little more than one hour's ride from the metropolis. This property includes a fine old family mansion, with offices, pleasure-grounds, and gardens, most delightfully placed in a park studded with noble trees, close to the church and village of Sandy, but completely inclosed and screened by belts of plantations, and partially bounded by a branch of the river Ivel; also a valuable corn-mill, with excellent head of water, stone-built residence and offices, comprising altogether about 85 acres. Several farms, with homesteads and agricultural buildings, extensive covers, ornamental plantations, and woods, containing about 1,000 acres, and forming a first-rate landed investment. Detached fields and accommodation lands surrounding the village; several houses and cottages; the Stone Axe Inn; and various plots of eligible building ground. The whole is freehold, and all tithe-free excepting about 418 acres, which are subject to a corn rent.

This estate offers unusual attractions to any gentleman fond of field sports, being in the immediate neighbourhood of the Oakley hounds, within three miles of the Cambridgeshire kennel, and a like distance of Mr Race's celebrated pack of harriers. The covers and plantations on the estate afford first-rate partridge and pheasant shooting, and the game has been carefully preserved. The private stream, which partly bounds the park, and the river Ivel, both well stocked with fish, afford ample opportunity for boating, fishing, and other aquatic sports. On part of the estate are quarries, the stone obtained from which is suited for building purposes, and has been used in erecting churches and bridges in the neighbourhood. The quality of the soil is superior, a large portion being garden ground, which has long been celebrated for supplying the metropolis and manufacturing districts with cucumbers and every description of vegetable produce, for the transit of which the railway offers great facilities.—Particulars may be obtained of Messrs. J. C. and H. FRESHFIELD, New Bank-buildings, Lothbury; of Messrs WORDSWORTH and DUNN, 32, Threadneedle street; of Messrs. COLE, Adelphi-terrace, London; of Messrs. BLOOD and DOUGLAS, Witham, Essex; of Mr. TILCOCK, at Sandy; and of Mr. BEADEL, 25, Gresham-street, London, where alone cards to view may be had.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.

AS a GENERAL ELECTION is expected in a few weeks, Mr. CROCKFORD is desirous of avoiding the inconveniences experienced on the last occasion, through the influx, at the last moment, of orders for sets of the BOOKS and FORMS required by AGENTS and RETURNING OFFICERS. He will therefore be much obliged by immediate intimation, from those who purpose acting to use them, of the quantities of each which they are likely to require, that he may make his arrangements accordingly.

It will, however, be understood that such intimations will not be considered as positive orders, until further directions.

The BOOKS and FORMS constituting the series required for an election ...

Books and Forms for Committees and Agents of Candidates.

1. Canvass Books, strongly bound (counties and boroughs).
2. Committee Register Books (counties and boroughs), large size for central committees, smaller for district committees.
3. Return of Day's Canvass by district committee (counties and boroughs), in quires.
4. Inspector's Poll Books (counties and boroughs).
5. District Committee's Polls Return Books (counties and boroughs).
6. Central Committee's Polls Return Books (counties and boroughs).
7. Check Clerks' Books (counties and boroughs).
8. List of Out-Voters (counties and boroughs), in quires.
9. Committee Memorandum Books, with patent locks, if so ordered.
10. Committee Account Books, with patent locks, if so ordered.
11. Notice to Returning Officer of appointment of agent to prevent personation; in quires.
12. Demand of Bribery Oath; in quires.

For Returning Officers.

13. Poll Books (counties and boroughs).
14. Poll Clerks' Oath for counties in quires.
15. Poll Clerks' Oaths for cities and boroughs in quires.
16. Instructions to Poll Clerks; in quires.
17. Questions and Oath of Identity (with memorandum for Poll Clerk and Returning Officer); in quires.
18. Bribery Oath (with like memorandum) in quires.
19. Returning Officer's Oath, on parchment.
20. Return of members in a city or borough, on parchment.
21. Return of members in a county, on parchment.

N.B. The above Books and Forms are copyright.

The name of the county, city, or borough will be printed in the Forms without additional charge, if not less than a week's notice be given.

Orders should state as nearly as possible the number of electors in the place for which the above books and forms are required that the size of the books may be proportioned accordingly, and they should be sent at the earliest period, to prevent disappointment in the supply, which will be unavoidable if great quantities be required at the latest moment.

Mr. CROCKFORD has also just published the SIXTH EDITION of the LAW and PRACTICE of ELECTIONS and of REGISTRATION, by EDWARD W. COX, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, containing all the Statutes and Cases decided down to Michaelmas Term, 1851, and a COMPLETE GUIDE to AGENTS for the MANAGEMENT of an ELECTION, and of REGISTRATION, with Precedents of all the Forms and Books required, Plan of Polling-booth, &c. Price 8s. 6d. cloth; 10s. half-bound, 12s. bound.

CROCKFORD, LAW TIMES Office, Essex-street, Strand.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently inflicts twofold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 10l. 10s. A first-rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for 30 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 4l.; tradesmen's, 6l., 8l. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 1l. 11s. 6d.; single horse, 1l. 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each.—City-road, next Bunhill-fields Burial-ground. Originated in 1842.

BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT.—The INFALLIBLE TROUSER, price One Guinea, or two pairs for forty shillings. These trousers being cut upon pure scientific principles, give every satisfaction to all purchasers; for elegance of form and correct fit they cannot be equalled. Morning coats in every variety. Frock and dress coats, ladies' riding-habits, youth's clothing, liveries, &c.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S PATENT CONCENTRATED MILK.

"Supplies Fresh Milk at all times."—Times, September 13, 1850.

"It was almost (if not quite) equal in flavour and quality to Milk fresh from the Cow."—Captain H. T. Austine, Commander of the Arctic Expedition, H.M.S. Resolute, 1st October, 1851.

"The Milk is most admirable; none should go to sea without it."—Captain Ommaney, H.M.S. Assistance, Arctic Expedition, 25th October, 1851.

"The greatest comfort and blessing we had on board our ships in the Arctic Expedition."—Medical Officer's Report to the Lords of the Admiralty, November 1851.

Preserved in hermetically sealed tins, each tin producing seven times the quantity of pure milk.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S COCOA and MILK, and CHOCOLATE and MILK, are combinations of the Concentrated Milk with the finest Trinidad Cocoa and the choicest French Chocolate, in hermetically sealed tins. These delicious preparations are wholly free from the admixtures so common in the packet Cocoas, and considering their quality are equally expensive: for example, a breakfast cup of Pure Cocoa, combined with milk and sugar, can be had at the cost of a penny, by merely adding boiling water.

THE PRIZE MEDAL at the GREAT EXHIBITION was awarded to these preparations for their Novelty, Utility, and Economy, and they were constantly used in the Refreshment Rooms of the Exhibition, giving universal satisfaction.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S INFANT'S FOOD is a combination of the Concentrated Milk with pure Farina, and will be found a light and nourishing diet for Invalids as well as Infants, requiring only boiling water for its instant preparation.

The whole of the above are prepared under the immediate inspection of Mr. Moore, the Patentee, who was for many years the ordinary medical attendant of the Royal Family in London.

The Finest FRENCH CHOCOLATES in every variety, made expressly for the subscribers by one of the first Paris manufacturers. These Chocolates, it may be observed, are REALLY FRENCH, and are greatly superior to those commonly sold as French, but which are in fact, generally speaking, of English manufacture.

MOORE and BUCKLEY, Ranton Abbey Farm and Works, Staffordshire; and 4, Upper East Smithfield, London; and sold retail by all respectable Grocers and Chemists, &c. in town and country.

PURE SOUCHONG TEA, perfectly free from dye, scent, or any deleterious matter with which the ordinary Black Teas abound. Medical gentlemen desirous of ordering tea for invalids may secure the above genuine and wholesome beverage in its native purity at SPARROW'S, 372, Oxford-street (sixteen doors east of the Pantheon), at 4s., 4s. 4d. and 4s. 8d. Price List of Teas, Coffees, and Family Grocery, sent post-free on application, and parcels of 2l. value and upwards carriage paid to any part of the kingdom.

CHEAP TEA and CHEAP COFFEE.— Although we sell Black Tea at 3s. per lb. and good Black Tea at 3s. 4d.; Strong Coffee at 10d. and Fine Coffee at 1s. per lb. we still say to all who study economy, that "The Best is the Cheapest," particularly when the best can be obtained from us at the following prices:—

The Best Congou Tea	3s. 8d.	per lb.
The Best Souchong Tea	4s. 4d.	"
The Best Gunpowder Tea	5s. 8d.	"
The Best Old Mocha Coffee	1s. 4d.	"
The Best West India Coffee	1s. 4d.	"
The Fine True Ripe Rich Rare Souchong Tea now only	4s. 0d.	"
The Pure, Rich, Rare Gunpowder	5s. 0d.	"

Tea or Coffee, to the value of 40s. sent carriage free to any part of England by PHILLIPS and Co. Tea Merchants, No. 8, King William-street, City.

THE PRIZE MEDAL, with "Honourable Mention," has been awarded for the GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, by the Jurors of the Exhibition of all Nations, and is now used in the Royal Laundry. Being thus doubly noticed for its "General Superiority" (a mark of distinction conferred on no other) by the Royal Commissioners and Jury, from amongst thirty or forty exhibitors, sets it far above every other of its competitors. The ladies are, therefore, respectfully requested to make a trial of the Glenfield Patent Double-refined Powder Starch, which, for domestic use, now stands unrivalled. See also testimonials from the laundress to Her Majesty; the Lady Mayoress of London; the lady of W. Chambers, Esq. of Glenormiston, one of the Publishers of Chambers's Edinburgh Journal; the laundresses of the Marchioness of Breadalbane; Countess of Eglinton, Countess of Dartmouth, &c.

Sold Wholesale in London by Messrs. Pantin and Turner, Hooper, Brothers; Batty and Feast, Croft and Innocent; Petty, Wood, and Co.; Twelvetrees, Brothers; R. Letchford and Co.; John Yates and Co., Yates, Walton, and Turner; Clayton, Bland, and Co.; Field, Roberts, and Barber; A. Braden and Co., Hicks, Brothers; C. B. Agents wanted: apply to Mr. R. Wotherspoon, 40, Dunlop-street, Glasgow.

The attention of Shippers and Merchants is respectfully called to the above article, now in large demand in the British Colonies and United States, where it commands always the highest prices. Shipping Orders executed in a superior manner, and on the shortest notice.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION.—Valuable newly-invented very small powerful WAISTCOAT POCKET GLASS, the size of a walnut, to discern minute objects at a distance of from four to five miles, which is found to be invaluable to SPORTSMEN, GENTLEMEN, and GAMEKEEPERS. Price 1l. 10s. sent free.

TELESCOPES.—A new and most important INVENTION TELESCOPES, possessing such extraordinary powers, that some 3½ inches, with an extra eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double Stars. They supersede every other kind, and are of all sizes, for the waistcoat pocket, Shooting, Military purposes, &c.

Opera and Race-course Glasses, with wonderful powers; a minute object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant.

Messrs. S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians and Aurists, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence.

"Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-taming arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. Water, Steam, or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books, Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating the best non-cond... Milner's Fire-resisting Chambers. See certificates of hundreds of tests and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22, No. 642, are removed to their London Depôt, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (adding the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Sample Safes, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire-resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

Milner's London Depôt, 47A, Moorgate-street, City, near the Bank of England. Milner's Safe Works (the most extensive in the world), Liverpool.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.

On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr. Clarke, C... street, Manchester, was broken into, the thieves picked eight l... of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's churchyard, London; 28, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street, Manchester; and Horseley-fields, Wolverhampton.

"For the apparel oft proclaims the man."—Hamlet.

EVERY WELL-DRESSED MAN KNOWS how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its requirements with a well-cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured. Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently ...ed to appear in clothes, however costly, th... in become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a defor... costume FREDERICK FOX adopts this m... of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years, always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of its individual wearer, and the purposes it ...tended to serve, thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that re...rd for economy which the spirit of the ...dictates.—F. FOX, Practical Tailor, 73, Cornhill, same side of way as the Royal Exchange.

MESSRS. POULSON and COMPANY'S REGISTERED PARDESSUS (6 & 7 Vic. cap. 65), an elegant light walking Over Coat, or may be worn without another. This delightful spring and summer garment is made principally of the finest Australian Wool—it has been honoured with the distinguished patronage of the elite of the Empire, and is correctly pronounced to be the most economical, graceful, and gentlemanly Over Coat of the season. Price with silk sleeve linings, TWO GUINEAS. Also, the REGISTERED CANTAB, a new morning coat, of the same cloth, 18s.

The Pardessus d'Eté, for dust, heat, &c. the same price as their improved Guinea Trousers.

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT, as shown in the Great Exhibition, Class 20, No. 23, is a garment made entirely without gathers. These auxiliaries to the shirt have hitherto been considered indispensable, but, like everything else where the ingenious mind is directed to getting rid of complication, simplicity is proved to be the attribute of perfection. It may be confidently eulogized for its nicety of fit and great ease and comfort.—From the Morning Herald.—At WILLIAM REID'S, 51, Conduit-street, Regent-street. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and hosiery in every variety.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are, beyond doubt, the most scientific and really useful improvement in the art of shirt-making. Their superiority does not rest solely upon their being entirely different from all others but upon the combination of perfect novelty of design with sound practical use, resulting from a study of scientific principles, making them, in fact, the only solid and thoroughly sensible alteration from the old shapes worth of notice.

There are two qualities, in both of which the principle is strictly carried out, viz. six for 40s.; second quality, six for 30s.

DAMP AND GASEOUS EXHALATIONS.

SANITARY MEASURES.

MEMBERS of BOARDS of HEALTH are especially directed to the most EFFECTIVE MEANS which they can ADOPT to PREVENT the injurious and often FATAL EFFECTS upon the HEALTH of the COMMUNITY, arising from exhalations that are produced from moisture, decayed animal matter (as in grave-yards), stagnant water, and collections of fetid refuse, tending to produce a miasmatic state of atmosphere. In situations so affected, the impervious quality of the ASPHALTE of SEYSSEL render it the most perfect PAVEMENT or COVERING that can be relied upon for hermetically closing, and thereby preventing the rising of moisture and the escape of noxious vapours. The present extensive application of this material for covering roofs, terraces, and arches, for preventing the percolation of wet, is strong evidence of its effectiveness for the above purposes.

IN CHANCERY.—Perry and Another v. Beauclerk and Others—Sussex.—The St Leonard's Forest Estate, near Horsham, a remarkably fine Freehold Domain of nearly 2,000 acres, with a capital stone-built Mansion, extensive Park, beautifully undulated Woods, Plantations, 80 acres of productive Orchard, and several capital Farms.

MESSRS. DRIVER have been instructed, pursuant to an order of the High Court of Chancery, made in the above cause, to offer to public COMPETITION, at the AUCTION MART, on TUESDAY, the 29th of JUNE, at Twelve o'clock, in the first instance in one lot, but should it not then be sold it will be immediately afterwards offered in four lots, the above important and highly valuable FREEHOLD LANDED PROPERTY, lying within a ring fence, most eligibly situate in the parishes of Lower Beeding and Slaugham, in the preferable part of the county of Sussex, and only about three miles from the capital market town of Horsham, where there is a station on the London and Brighton Railway. The estate is situate in a fine sporting country, within a short distance of the kennel of the Crawley and Horsham fox-hounds. It is surrounded with excellent roads, abounds with game, and adjoins the properties of Sir Charles Burrell, Robt. Aldridge, Esq and other large landed proprietors. It comprises a stone built mansion suitable for the residence of a family of the highest respectability, situate upon an eminence commanding most delightful views of its own picturesque woods and plantations and the surrounding varied scenery, with extensive park beautifully undulated and studded with fine stately timber, with a highly ornamental lake affording abundant fishing, in view of the mansion and from which it is a prominent feature: together with the following farms, viz.—Park Farm, containing about 600 acres, Eastland's Farm, 168 acres; and Freechase Farm, 183 acres, with suitable homesteads to each and all necessary agricultural buildings, and about 700 acres of wood and thriving plantations and other lands, making, in the whole, nearly 2,000 acres of productive arable, pasture, meadow, and wood lands, including about 80 acres of orchards, producing rents of the estimated annual value of 1,500l. The estate being principally in hand, immediate possession may be had. It is admirably adapted either for occupation or investment, and abounds with stone quarries.—To be viewed on application to Mr KAY, the Bailiff, residing on the estate. Printed particulars, with plans, may be had at the King's Head, Horsham; Star, Lewes; Old Ship, Brighton; White Hart, Guildford; of Messrs FIELDER, JOHNSON, and MASTER Solicitors, 23, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square; Messrs. ORLEANS HOUSE, TWICKENHAM.—A noble and distinguished Freehold Mansion, Park, and extensive Pleasure-grounds, on the banks of the Thames, comprising in the whole about Thirty Acres.

MESSRS. DRIVER have been favoured with instructions to offer to PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the MART, on TUESDAY, JUNE 29, at Twelve (unless an acceptable offer should in the mean time be made by private contract), with immediate possession on the completion of the purchase, the above highly valuable and very distinguished FREEHOLD PROPERTY, most beautifully and delightfully situate on the banks of the Thames, and less than ten minutes' walk from the Twickenham Railway Station, and only one mile from that at Richmond, comprising a noble and elegant mansion, in most perfect order and repair, both ornamental and substantial, and replete with every accommodation for any family of distinction; containing fifteen bed-rooms and dressing rooms, also all requisite reception-rooms en suite, comprising dining and drawing rooms, library, boudoir, breakfast room, bath room, spacious halls, two staircases, likewise a magnificent conservatory in two compartments, a statuary room and picture-gallery. In the basement are all requisite domestic offices, and capital cellaring. The mansion is delightfully seated on a beautiful sloping lawn, and no expense has been spared to render it as complete as possible, at the same time combining substantial durability and convenience with embellishment of a most pure and classic style. The pleasure grounds are very extensive, laid out with acknowledged taste and judgment, ornamented with all kinds of luxuriant American and flowering shrubs, gravel and shaded walks, parterres, ornamental waters, fully stocked with gold-fish, and fountains, temples, and summer houses. The park is encircled with gravel walks and belt plantations, and studded with stately elms and other timber. The carriage drive is through the centre of the park, and the house is approached under a handsome stone portico. There are two lodges, likewise orangery, hot-houses, graperies, pinery, melon and forcing pits, greenhouses, two capital walled kitchen gardens, well stocked, and clothed with choice fruit-trees, gardener's house, cottages for labourers, a well-arranged farm yard, ice-house and pheasantry. An artesian well supplies the house, ponds, fountains, and premises with water. A spacious enclosed yard, with capital stabling, coach house, with men-servants' apartments and lofts over. The property is nearly enclosed by brick walls. To be viewed with cards only on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, after the 1st of June, between eleven and five o'clock, giving one day's previous notice, which may then be had of Messrs DRIVER, Surveyors and Land Agents, 5, Whitehall, together with printed specifications and plan of the property. Printed specifications and plans may also be had of C. R. W[illegible]s, Esq 13, Lincoln's-inn fields, and at the Mart.

DORSETSHIRE.—Valuable Freehold Estate, called the Upton and East Ringstead Farms, comprising upwards of 492 acres of productive arable pasture, and meadow lands most eligibly situate, in the parish of Osmington about five miles from Weymouth and seven from Dorchester, both capital market towns.

MESSRS. DRIVER have been favoured with instructions to offer to PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the AUCTION MART, on TUESDAY JUNE 29th, at Twelve, in one lot, a very valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, exonerated from land-tax, well adapted for investment, most eligibly situate in the parish of, and within about a mile of the picturesque and rural village of Osmington, in the county of Dorset, about seven miles from Dorchester, thirteen from Wareham, and abutting south on the Ringstead Bay of the English Channel, opposite the delightful watering place of Weymouth, from which it is distant about five miles, comprising Upton and East Ringstead Farms, lying very compact, and containing together upwards of 492 acres of highly productive arable, pasture, and meadow lands, with farm house, homestead, and all necessary agricultural buildings, and sundry cottages dispersed over the estate; in the occupation of Mr Richard Andrews, a highly respectable tenant, on lease, which will expire at Michaelmas next, at the net annual rent of 400l when possession may be had. The property is situate within a few miles of three stations on the Southampton and Dorchester branch of the South-Western Railway, being only seven miles from the Dorchester station, eight from Wool, and four and a-half from Moreton.—Printed specifications, with plans annexed, may be had, after the 31st of May, at Luce's Hotel, Weymouth; King's Arms, Dorchester; Red Lion, Wareham; Radley's Hotel, Southampton; of Messrs BRAY, WARRENS, and HARDING, Solicitors, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury; at the Auction Mart; and of Messrs. DRIVER, Surveyors and Land Agents, 5, Whitehall, London.

Valuable Freehold Property, West Cheam, in the county of Surrey, distance about three miles from Epsom, and within five minutes' walk of the Cheam Station on the Epsom direct line. A delightful Freehold Estate, situate in this charming, picturesque, and healthy village, by which the property is surrounded.

MR. J. CAIN is favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, by order of the proprietor (unless previously disposed of by private contract), at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, at Twelve for One, all that truly valuable and important ESTATE, known as CHEAM HOUSE. This eligible property is surrounded by a ring fence, every portion of which presents a road frontage, thus affording a rare and almost unequalled opportunity for building speculation in a locality where villas are so much desired and sought for, but not to be obtained. The small capitalist or spirited purchaser can here [illegible] a safe investment. To mercantile gentlemen, whose avocations call their daily attendance in London, and, above all, the great advantage of locating their families in a pure and healthy air, blended with the very easy access to the metropolis, the village of Cheam must be acknowledged as a highly favoured spot. The substantial mansion is well calculated for the reception of a family of distinction, one wing of which has, within a very few years, been built at a great outlay, under the direction of a first-rate architect. The residence contains, on the upper floor, six good bed-chambers; on the first floor are two noble bow bed-rooms, each 25 feet by 18 feet; three others, severally 23 feet by 15 feet, 19 feet by 12 feet, and 16 feet by 15 feet; three other rooms of less magnitude, two dressing rooms, large nursery bed-room, water-closet, and morning drawing-room. On the ground floor will be found a noble entrance-hall, large dining-room, 26 feet by 17 feet; octagon drawing-room, 20 feet by 20 feet; ante drawing-room, 25 feet by 18 feet, study or breakfast-room, and a small sitting-room. The principal reception-room communicates with the extensive and beautifully timbered lawn by a flight of stone steps. The offices are numerous, and judiciously arranged for every possible domestic comfort and convenience; a detached stable-yard, with coach-houses for three carriages, and excellent stabling for five horses, with lofts, three bed-rooms, and one sitting-room over. The grounds comprehend extensive walled kitchen-gardens, well cropped and stocked, a beautiful verdant lawn, tastefully adorned with splendid timber and flowering shrubs, and a fancy meadow—in all averaging nearly seven acres, all parts of which are well adapted for building purposes, and affording to each villa an adequate proportion of ground. —Plans and particulars are in preparation, which may be had of Messrs. GREGSON and KEWELL, Solicitors, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street; J. B. WATSON, Esq. Surveyor, 39, Manchester-street, Manchester-square; on the premises, West Cheam; at the Mart; at the principal Inns; and at the Auctioneer's Estate Offices, Richmond, Surrey. The estate may be viewed at any time on application to Mr. BROWN, the gardener, on the premises.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.

AS a GENERAL ELECTION is expected in a few weeks, Mr. CROCKFORD is desirous of avoiding the inconveniences experienced on the last occasion, through the influx, at the last moment, of orders for sets of the BOOKS and FORMS required by AGENTS and RETURNING OFFICERS He will therefore be much obliged by immediate intimation, from those who purpose again to use them, of the quantities of each which they are likely to require, that he may make his arrangements accordingly.

It will, however, be understood that such intimations will not be considered as positive orders, until further directions

The BOOKS and FORMS constituting the series required for an election are as follow:—

Books and Forms for Committees and Agents of Candidates.

1. Canvas Books, strongly bound (counties and boroughs).
2. Committee Register Books (counties and boroughs), large size for central committees, smaller for district committees.
3. Return of Day's Canvas by district committee (counties and boroughs); in quires.
4. Inspector's Poll Books (counties and boroughs)
5. District Committee's Polls Return Books (counties and boroughs).
6. Central Committee's Polls Return Books (counties and boroughs).
7. Check Clerks' Books (counties and boroughs)
8. List of Out-Voters (counties and boroughs); in quires.
9. Committee Memorandum Books, with patent locks, if so ordered.
10. Committee Account Books, with patent locks, if so ordered.
11. Notice to Returning Officer of appointment of agent to prevent personation; in quires.
12. Demand of Bribery Oath; in quires.

For Returning Officers.

13. Poll Books (counties and boroughs).
14. Poll Clerks' Oath for counties, in quires.
15. Poll Clerks' Oaths for cities and boroughs; in quires.
16. Instructions to Poll Clerks; in quires.
17. Questions and Oath of Identity (with memorandum for Poll Clerk and Returning Officer); in quires.
18. Bribery Oath (with like memorandum) in quires.
19. Returning Officer's Oath, on parchment.
20. Return of members in a city or borough, on parchment.
21. Return of members in a county, on parchment

N. B. The above Books and Forms are copyright.

The name of the county, city, or borough will be printed in the Forms without additional charge, if not less than a week's notice be given.

Orders should state as nearly as possible the number of electors in the place for which the above books and forms are required that the size of the books may be proportioned accordingly, and they should be sent at the earliest period, to prevent disappointment in the supply, which will be unavoidable if great quantities be required at the latest moment.

Mr CROCKFORD has also just published the SIXTH EDITION of the LAW and PRACTICE of ELECTIONS and of REGISTRATION, by EDWARD W. COX, Esq Barrister-at-Law, containing all the Statutes and Cases decided down to Michaelmas Term, 1851, and a COMPLETE GUIDE to AGENTS for the MANAGEMENT of an ELECTION, and of REGISTRATION, with Precedents of all the Forms and Books required, Plan of Polling-booth, &c. MOORE and BUCKLEY'S PATENT CONCENTRATED MILK

"Supplies Fresh Milk at all times" -Times, September 16 1850

"It was almost (if not quite) equal in flavour and quality to Milk fresh from the Cow" Captain H T Austin Commander of the Arctic Expedition H M S Resolute, 1st October, 1851

"The Milk is most admirable, none should go to sea without it"—Captain Ommaney, H M.S Assistance, Arctic Expedition, 25th October, 1851

"The greatest comfort and blessing we had on board our ships in the Arctic Expedition" Medical Officer's Report to the Lords of the Admiralty November 1851

Preserved in hermetically sealed tins, each tin producing seven times the quantity of pure milk

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S COCOA and MILK, and CHOCOLATE and MILK, are combinations of the Concentrated Milk with the finest Trinidad Cocoa and the choicest French Chocolate, in hermetically sealed tins These delicious preparations are wholly free from the admixtures so common in the packet Cocoas, and considering their quality are equally expensive, for example, a breakfast cup of Pure Cocoa, combined with milk and sugar, can be had at the cost of a penny, by merely adding boiling water

THE PRIZE MEDAL at the GREAT EXHIBITION was awarded to these preparations for their Novelty, Utility, and Economy, and they were constantly used in the Refreshment Rooms of the Exhibition giving universal satisfaction

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S INFANT'S FOOD, is a combination of the Concentrated Milk with pure Farina, and will be found a light and nourishing diet for Invalids as well as Infants, requiring only boiling water for its instant preparation.

The whole of the above are prepared under the immediate inspection of Mr Moore, the Patentee, who was for many years the ordinary medical attendant of the Royal Family in London

The Finest FRENCH CHOCOLATES in every variety made expressly for the subscribers by one of the first Paris manufacturers These Chocolates, it may be observed, are REALLY FRENCH, and are greatly superior to those commonly sold as French, but which are in fact generally speaking, of English manufacture

MOORE and BUCKLEY, Ranton Abbey Farm and Works Staffordshire; and 5, Upper East Smithfield, London; and sold retail by all respectable Grocers and Chemists, &c in town and country

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—The BEDFORD PANTECHNICON and STORE ROOMS late Messrs Collard and Collard's Pianoforte Manufactory, 195, Tottenham-court-road, for the WAREHOUSING of FURNITURE, PIANOS, PAINTINGS, and every description of valuable property, are fitted up into separate and well-ventilated compartments so that each depositor can have his own lock and key, and from the great extent of the premises the Proprietor is enabled to charge much less than similar establishments. Estimates including packing removing &c free of expense

For terms and prospectus apply on the premises; or of the Proprietor, Mr W TINGEY, Polytechnic silver-arch Establishment 112, Regent-street. Advances made, if required, on very moderate terms.

"For the apparel oft proclaims the man" Hamlet

EVERY WELL DRESSED MAN KNOWS how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its requirements with a well-cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently doomed to appear in clothes, however costly, that never can become adapted to their forms To remedy so manifest a deformity in costume FREDERICK FOX adopts this means of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years, always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of the individual wearer, and the purposes it is intended to serve thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that regard for economy which the spirit of the age dictates —F FOX Practical Tailor 73, Cornhill, same side of the way as the Royal Exchange.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon-Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer, they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence.
"Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-taming arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. [illegible], or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with [illegible]

[illegible] tion, Class 22, No. 642, are removed to their London Depôt, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (ad[d]ing the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Sample safes, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire-resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.— On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into ; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars. This Society is established to apply the principle of Assurance to PROPERTY as well as to Life ; and its business consists of –
The Assurance of DEFECTIVE and UNMARKETABLE TITLES, rendering them absolute and perfect.
The Assurance of COPYHOLDS, LIFEHOLDS, and LEASEHOLDS, thereby making them equal, or even better than FREEHOLDS, for all purposes of sale or mortgage.
The redemption of LOANS and MORTGAGES, and guaranteeing their absolute repayment within a given period
Increased and Immediate ANNUITIES granted upon HEALTHY as well as DISEASED LIVES
The FIDELITY of Clerks, Servants, and others GUARANTEED upon the payment of a small annual premium, and a reduction of nearly one-half is made when a Life Assurance is combined with the Fidelity Guarantee Policy.
LIFE ASSURANCES effected for the whole term of life, or for a term of years, and the premiums can be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly
ENDOWMENT and EDUCATION ASSURANCES and ANNUITIES granted , the premiums can be paid upon the returnable or non-returnable system, in case of death before attaining the age agreed upon
IMMEDIATE A[N]NUITIES or Increased incomes granted in exchange for REVERSIONARY INTERESTS.
Whole W[or]ld Policies granted, and all Policies issued by this Society are INDISPUTA[BLE].
Every information furnished free of expense, by applying to
WILLIAM NEISON, Esq. Actuary and Secretary, 30, Essex-street, Strand, London.

IMPERIAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,
1, Old Broad street, London
Thomas [illegible] Hunt, esq Chairman.
John Horsley Palm[er], esq. Deputy-Chairman.
[A] SCALE OF PREMI[UMS o]n Insurances for the whole term of life has recently been adopted, by which a material reduction has been made at all ages below 50 years.
FOUR-FIFTHS, or 80 per cent of the Profits, are assigned to Policies every fifth year, and may be applied to increase the sum insured, to an immediate payment in Cash, or to the reduction and ultimate extinction of future premiums
ONE-THIRD of the Premium on Insurances of 500*l.* and upwards, for the whole term of life, may remain as a debt upon the policy, to be paid off at convenience, by which means 1,500*l.* may be insured for the present outlay otherwise required for 1,000*l.*
LOANS. The [Direct]ors will lend sums of 50*l.* and upwards on the security of Policies effected with this Company for the whole term of life, when they have acquired an adequate value.
SECURITY Those who effect Insurances with this Company are protected by its large [subsc]ribed Capital from the risk incurred by Members of Mutual Societies
INSURANCES without participation in Profits may be effected at reduced rates. SAMUEL INGALL, Actuary.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.
Pe[rsons o]f all ages, and in every station, may assure with this Society, and the assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

FIFTH DIVISION OF PROFITS.
The FIFTH BONUS was declared in January last, and the amount varied with the different ages, from 24½ to 55 per cent. on the premiums paid, during the last five years ; or from 1*l.* to 2*l.* 10s. per cent per annum on the sums assured.
The small share of profit divisible in future among the shareholders being now provided for, without intrenching on the amount made by the regular business, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability, secured by means of an ample Proprietary Capital thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.
A copy of the last report, setting forth full particulars, with a prospectus, can now be obtained of any of the Society's agents, or by addressing a line to GEO H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

IN CHANCERY.—Perry and Another v. Beauclerk and Others—Sussex. The St. Leonard's Forest Estate, near Horsham, a remarkably fine Freehold Domain of nearly 2,000 acres, with a capital stone-built Mansion, extensive Park, beautifully undulated Woods, Plantations, 80 acres of productive Orchard, and several capital Farms.

MESSRS. DRIVER have been instructed, pursuant to an order of the High Court of Chancery, made in the above cause, to offer to public COMPETITION, at the AUCTION MART, on TUESDAY, the 29th of JUNE at Twelve o'clock, in the first instance in one lot, but should it not then be sold it will be immediately afterwards offered in four lots, the above important and highly valuable FREEHOLD LANDED PROPERTY, lying within a ring fence, most eligibly situate in the parishes of Lower Beeding and Slaugham, in the preferable part of the county of Sussex, and only about three miles from the capital market town of Horsham, where there is a station on the London and Brighton Railway. The estate is situate in a fine sporting country, within a short distance of the kennel of the Crawley and Horsham fox-hounds. It is surrounded with excellent roads, abounds with game, and adjoins the properties of Sir Charles Burrell, Robt. Aldridge, Esq and other large landed proprietors. It comprises a stone built mansion suitable for the residence of a family of the highest respectability, situate upon an eminence commanding most delightful views of its own picturesque woods and plantations and the surrounding varied scenery, with extensive park beautifully undulated and studded with fine stately timber, with a highly ornamental lake affording abundant fishing, in view of the mansion and from which it is a prominent feature, together with the following farms, viz. Park Farm, containing about 600 acres, Eastland's Farm, 186 acres, and Freechase Farm, 181 acres, with suitable homesteads to each and all necessary agricultural buildings, and about 700 acres of wood and thriving plantations and other lands, making, in the whole, nearly 2,000 acres of productive arable, pasture, meadow, and wood lands, including about 80 acres of orchards, producing rents of the estimated annual value of 1500l. The estate being principally in hand, immediate possession may be had. It is admirably adapted either for occupation or investment, and abounds with stone quarries.—To be viewed on application to Mr. Kay, the Bailiff, residing on the estate. Printed particulars, with plans, may be had at the King's Head, Horsham; Star, Lewes; Old Ship, Brighton; White Hart, Guildford; of Messrs. Fletcher, Johnson, and Master, Solicitors, 22, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square; Messrs. Robinson and Haynes, Solicitors, 17, Orchard-street, Portman-square; Messrs. Norris, Allen, and Simpson, Solicitors, Bedford-row; Messrs. Bell, Steward, and Lloyd, 59, Lincoln's-inn-fields; at the Auction Mart, and of Messrs. Driver, Surveyors and Land Agents, 5, Whitehall.

DORSETSHIRE. Valuable Freehold Estate, called the Upton and East Ringstead Farms, comprising upwards of 492 acres of productive arable, pasture, and meadow lands, most eligibly situate, in the parish of Osmington, about five miles from Weymouth and seven from Dorchester, both capital market towns.

MESSRS. DRIVER have been favoured with instructions to offer to PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the AUCTION MART, on TUESDAY, JUNE 29th, at Twelve in one lot, a very valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, exonerated from land tax, well adapted for investment, most eligibly situate in the parish of, and within about a mile of the picturesque and rural village of Osmington, in the county of Dorset, about seven miles from Dorchester, thirteen from Wareham, and abutting south on the Ringstead Bay of the English Channel, opposite the delightful watering place of Weymouth, from which it is distant about five miles, comprising Upton and East Ringstead Farms, lying very compact, and containing together upwards of 492 acres of highly productive arable, pasture, and meadow lands, with farm house, homestead, and all necessary agricultural buildings, and sundry cottages dispersed [illegible] estate, in the occupation of Mr. Richard Andrews, a highly respectable tenant, on lease, which will expire at Michaelmas next, at the net annual rent of 400l., when possession may be had. The property is situate within a few miles of three stations on the [illegible] hampton and Dorchester branch of the South-Western Railway, being only seven miles from the Dorchester station, eight from Wool, and four and a half from Moreton. Printed specifications, with plans annexed, may be had, after the 31st of May, [illegible] Luce's Hotel, Weymouth; King's Arms, Dorchester; Red Lion, Wareham; Radley's Hotel, Southampton; of Messrs. Bray, Warren, and Harding, Solicitors, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury; at the Auction Mart; and of Messrs. Driver, Surveyors and Land Agents, 5, Whitehall, London.

ALTERATION IN DAY OF SALE.

ORLEANS HOUSE, TWICKENHAM. A noble and distinguished Freehold Mansion, Park, and extensive Pleasure-[illegible] on the banks of the Thames, c[illegible] [illegible]irty Acres.

MESSRS. DRIVER have been favoured with instructions to offer to PUBLIC COMPETITION, at the AUCTION MART, near the Bank of England, on FRIDAY, JULY 16, instead of Tuesday, June 29, as previously advertised, at Twelve (unless an acceptable offer should in the mean time be made by private contract), with immediate possession on the completion of the purchase, the above highly valuable and very distinguished FREEHOLD PROPERTY, most beautifully and delightfully situate on the banks of the Thames, and less than ten minutes' walk from the Twickenham Railway Station, and only one mile from that at Richmond, comprising a noble and elegant mansion, in most perfect order and repair, both ornamental and substantial, and replete with every accommodation for any family of distinction; containing fifteen bed-rooms and dressing-rooms, also all requisite reception-rooms en suite, comprising dining and drawing rooms, library, boudoir, breakfast-room, bath room, spacious halls, two staircases; likewise a magnificent conservatory in two compartments, a statuary room and picture-gallery. In the basement are all requisite domestic offices, and capital cellaring. The mansion is delightfully seated on a beautiful lawn, and no expense has been spared to render it as complete as possible, at the same time combining substantial durability and convenience with embellishment of a most pure and classic style. The pleasure grounds are very extensive, laid out with acknowledged taste and judgment, ornamented with all kinds of luxuriant American and flowering shrubs, gravel and shaded walks, parterres, ornamental waters, fully stocked with gold-fish, and fountains, temples, and summer-houses. The park is encircled with gravel walks and belt plantations, and studded with stately elms and other timber. The carriage drive is through the centre of the park, and the house is approached under a handsome stone portico. The property is held for ever, and let to highly responsible tenants.—Printed particulars may be had fourteen days preceding the sale, and any information obtained of Thomas M. Vickery, Esq. Solicitor, No. 25, Lincoln's Inn Fields; at the Mart; and at 13, George-street, Hanover square, all in London.

BEDFORDSHIRE.—Important and valuable Freehold Estate, known as Sandy-place, comprising a substantial brick built Mansion, with Park, Pleasure-grounds, and Offices, capital Water Corn-mill, with Residence, several Farms and Homesteads, numerous Houses and Cottages in the village of Sandy, eligible and beautiful Building Sites, and valuable Garden and Accommodation Lands; the whole including about 1,300 acres of most fertile land, in a fine sporting country.

MR. BEADEL has been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, LONDON, on TUESDAY, JUNE 29, in forty lots, the highly important FREEHOLD and MANORIAL ESTATE of SANDY PLACE, situate at Sandy, in the county of Bedford, where there is a station on the Great Northern Railway, within eight miles of the town of Bedford, three of Biggleswade, fourteen of Huntingdon, and little more than one hour's ride from the metropolis. This property includes a fine old family Mansion, with offices, pleasure-grounds, and gardens, most delightfully placed in a park studded with noble trees, close to the church and village of Sandy, but completely inclosed and screened by belts of plantations, and partially bounded by a branch of the river Ivel; also a valuable Corn-mill, with excellent head of water, stone-built residence and offices, comprising altogether about 85 acres. Several farms, with homesteads and agricultural buildings, extensive covers, ornamental plantations, and woods, containing about 1,000 acres, and forming a first-rate landed investment. Detached fields and accommodation lands surrounding the village, several houses and cottages, the Stone Axe Inn, and various plots of eligible building ground. The whole is freehold, and all tithe free, excepting about 418 acres, which are subject to a corn rent.

This estate offers unusual attractions to any gentleman fond of field sports, being in the immediate neighbourhood of the Oakley hounds, within three miles of the Cambridgeshire kennel, and a like distance of Mr. Rose's celebrated pack of harriers. The covers and plantations on the estate afford first-rate partridge and pheasant shooting, and the game has been carefully preserved. The private stream, which partly bounds the park, and the river Ivel, both well stocked with fish, afford ample opportunity for boating, fishing, and other aquatic sports. On part of the estate are quarries, the stone obtained from which is suited for building purposes, and has been used in erecting churches and bridges in the neighbourhood. The quality of the soil is superior, a large portion being garden ground, which has long been celebrated for supplying the metropolis and manufacturing districts with cucumbers and every description of vegetable produce, for the transit of which the railway offers great facilities.—Particulars may be obtained of Messrs. J. C. and H. Freshfield, New Bank-buildings, Lothbury; of Messrs. Wordsworth and Dunn, 32, Threadneedle-street; of Messrs. Cole, Adelphi-terrace, London; of Messrs. Blood and Douglas, Witham, Essex; of Mr. Tilcock, at Sandy; and of Mr. Beadel, 25, Gresham-street, London, where alone cards to view may be had.

SANDY, BEDFORDSHIRE.—A desirable Property, Freehold, and great-tithe free, situate in this favourite locality, being only eight miles from the county town of Bedford, fourteen from Huntingdon, and, by the Great Northern Railway, little more than an hour's ride from London.

MR. BEADEL is directed to SELL BY AUCTION, at the MART, LONDON, on TUESDAY, JUNE 29, at Twelve, in three lots, an eligible FREEHOLD PROPERTY, including a residence, with shop, in the village of Sandy, occupied as the post-office, together with a capital small farmery in the rear; also, Bunting's-field, now intersected by the Great Northern Railway, containing 21a. 2r. 38p. of very productive land in a high state of cultivation: the whole let to Mr. Wm. Tilcock, a yearly tenant, at 67l. per annum. Particulars may be obtained of Messrs. J. C. and H. Freshfield, New Bank-buildings, Lothbury; of Messrs. Wordsworth and Dunn, 32, Threadneedle-street; of Messrs. Cole, Adelphi-terrace, London; of Messrs. Blood and Douglas, Witham, Essex; of Mr. Tilcock, at Sandy; and of Mr. Beadel, 25, Gresham-street, London, where alone cards to view may be had.

SCHWEPPE'S SODA, POTASS, and MAGNESIA WATERS and AERATED LEMONADE continue to be manufactured upon the largest scale at their several Establishments in London, Liverpool, Bristol, and Derby. The celebrity of these well-known waters, and the preference they universally command, are evidences that their original superior quality over all others is well sustained. Every bottle is protected by a label with the name of their firm, without which none is genuine, and it may be had of nearly all respectable chemists throughout the kingdom. Importers of the German Selters Water, direct from the springs, as for the last twenty years.—51, Berners street, London.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.—On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into, the thieves picked the locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars. MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence. "Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire, the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire turning arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. Water, Steam or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water in which Books, Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating the best non conductors, constitute Milner's Fire-resisting Chambers. See certificates of hundreds of tests and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22, No. 612, are removed to their London Depot, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (showing the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Samples to be, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire-resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

A SUBSTITUTE for PAINT, and to PROMOTE CLEANLINESS, which at all times is necessary, conducive to HEALTH, and this, as well as economy, is greatly promoted by substituting, for the noxious process of painting with oil and white lead, STEPHENS'S ORIGINAL STAINS and DYES for WOOD, to resemble Oak, Mahogany, Satin and Rose-wood. Every original invention, when known and established, attracts a host of imitators ready to seize on and profit by another's ingenuity. So in the case of these Stains and Dyes, several imitators have sprung up, but the original inventor begs to assure the public that the time he has bestowed upon these articles to render them perfect ensures against disappointment in their use; his well-known experience in the preparation of colours enabling him to effect the most perfect imitations of the various ornamental woods, reflecting all the beauty of the natural grain. They are prepared and sold by HENRY STEPHENS, No. 54, Stamford-street, Blackfriars road, London, in bottles at 6d. and 1s. each, and at 8s per gallon. They may be obtained in powder at 8s. per lb. which dissolves in water to form the liquid, and one pound will make one gallon of stain, and cover about 120 square yards.

N B The trade supplied, and a discount allowed. Where also may be obtained STEPHENS'S well known WRITING FLUIDS.

PROTECTION from the RAIN, WITHOUT DETRIMENT to HEALTH. BERDOE'S well known LIGHT OVERCOAT, the Waterproof Pallium, resists any amount of rain, without obstructing free ventilation (the fatal objection to all other waterproofs), and from its lightness and respectability is adapted for general use at all times, equally as for rainy weather, and has long been reputed one of the most convenient, economical, and valuable garments ever invented. Price 45s and 50s.—A very large stock for selection, also, of Capes, Shooting Jackets, Leggings, &c.; Cloaks, Mantles, Habits, &c. for Ladies.

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one-half, by applying to the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S offices, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently inflicts twofold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 10l. 10s. A first-rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for 30 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 4l.; tradesmen's, 6l., 8l. and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 1l. 11s. 6d.; single horse, 1l. 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1l. 1s. each.—City road, next Bunhill-fields Burial ground. Originated in 1843.

"For the apparel oft proclaims the man." —Hamlet.

EVERY WELL-DRESSED MAN KNOWS how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its requirements with a well cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured. Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently doomed to appear in clothes, however costly, that never can become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a deformity in costume, FREDERICK FOX adopts this means of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years, always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of its individual wearer, and the purposes it is intended to serve, thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that regard for economy which the spirit of the age dictates. FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are, beyond doubt, the most scientific and really useful improvement in the art of shirt-making. Their superiority does not rest solely upon their being entirely different from all others but upon the combination of perfect novelty of design with sound practical use, resulting from a study of scientific principles, making them, in fact, the solid and rigidly sensible alteration from the old shapes worth of notice.

There are two qualities, in both of which the principle is strictly carried out, viz: first quality for 40s., second quality, six for 30s.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S PATENT CONCENTRATED MILK.

"Supplies Fresh Milk at all times." Times, September 16, 1850.

"It ... almost (if not quite) equal in flavour and quality to Milk fresh from the Cow." Captain H. T. Austin, Commander of the Arctic Expedition, H M S. Resolute, 1st October, 1851.

"The Milk is most ... invaluable, none should go to sea without ..." H M S. Assistance, Arctic Expedition, 24th October, 1851.

"The greatest comfort and blessing we had on board our ships in the Arctic Expedition." Medical Officer's Report to the Lords of the Admiralty, November 1851.

Preserved in hermetically sealed tins, each tin producing seven times the quantity of pure milk.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S COCOA and MILK, and CHOCOLATE and MILK, are combinations of the Concentrated Milk with the finest Trinidad Cocoa and the choicest French Chocolate, in hermetically sealed tins. These delicious preparations are wholly free from the adulterations so common in the packet Cocoas, and considering their quality are equally cheap; for example, a breakfast cup of Pure Cocoa combined with milk and sugar, can be had at the cost of a penny, by merely adding boiling water.

THE PRIZE MEDAL at the GREAT EXHIBITION was awarded to these preparations for their Novelty, Utility, and Economy, and they were constantly used in the Refreshment Rooms of the Exhibition giving universal satisfaction.

MOORE and BUCKLEY'S INFANT'S FOOD, is a combination of the Concentrated Milk with pure Farina and will be found a light and nourishing diet for Invalids as well as Infants, requiring only boiling water for its instant preparation.

The whole of the above are prepared under the immediate inspection of Mr Moore, the Patentee, who was for many years ordinary medical attendant of the Royal Family in London.

The Finest FRENCH CHOCOLATES in every variety, made expressly for the subscribers by one of the first Paris manufacturers. Valuable Estates in Cumberland for Sale.

THE Trustees of the late Col. Lacy will offer for SALE in PUBLIC AUCTION, at the GEORGE INN, in PENRITH, on FRIDAY, the 23rd day of JULY, 1852, precisely at Three o'clock in the Afternoon, in the following or such other lots as may be arranged at the time of sale, the several valuable ESTATES, situate in the several parishes of Addingham and Great Salkeld, in the county of Cumberland, all lying (with a trifling exception) contiguous to each other, and consisting of—Lot 1. A Freehold Estate, called Longmeg, in the said parish of Addingham, in the occupation of Joseph and Thomas Holliday, as farmers thereof; comprising a farmhouse, with homestead and farm buildings, and several inclosures of land, containing together by admeasurement 307a. 2r. 28p. of which 70a. 1r. 19p. of excellent soil are covered with growing timber, principally of oak, larch, elm, and ash, of large dimensions, between forty and sixty years' growth. The plantations were carefully thinned and attended to in the course of their growth by the late owner, whose great knowledge in the rearing of timber wood was universally known, and now form an acreage of the most thriving and valuable timber in the county. This estate is bounded on the south-west for upwards of a mile by the beautiful windings of the river Eden, which abounds with trout, and affords excellent diversion to the lovers of angling. It is situated 6¼ miles from the town of Penrith, and being all of first-rate quality, is admirably adapted to either corn or grazing. It lies compactly together in a ring fence, and is tithe free, the tithe having been commuted for an allotment of land on the enclosure of Little Salkeld Common. This estate is situate in one of the most admired parts of Cumberland, and possesses the most perfect remains of a Druids' Temple to be found in England. These remains form a circle of not less 350 feet in diameter, and have long been the wonder and admiration of the curious in antiquity.

Lot 2. An estate called MAUGHANBY, situate in the said parish of Addingham, in the occupation of Thomas Glenton, as farmer thereof, comprising a Farmhouse, Homestead, and Farm-buildings, and several Inclosures of Land, containing together 208a. 2r. 29p. more or less, of which about 10a. 2r. 2p. are thriving plantation. This estate lies together in a ring fence, and pays a yearly tithe-rent charge of 28l. 18s. 9d. in lieu of tithes. It is entitled to right of common on the valuable and extensive wastes called Glassonby Fell, which are well adapted to the breeding and rearing of sheep; and on the common called Viol Moor, and is situate between Long Meg Estate and the next Lot, No. 3. Certain small parcels of this estate are customary, held under Sir George Musgrave, bart. as parcel of his manor of Glassonby, and under the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, as parcel of their manor of Little Salkeld, and the remainder, being the great bulk of the estate, is freehold.

Lot 3. An estate, called GLASSONBY FARM, situate at GLASSONBY, in the said parish of Addingham, consisting of a Dwelling-house, homestead, and Farm-buildings, and several Inclosures of Land, containing together 156a. 0r. 37p. more or less, in the occupation of Joseph Hetherington, as farmer thereof (except a field called Raines, in the occupation of Thomas Glenton), and of a Cottage, Garth, and Outbuildings, at Glassonby, in the occupation of the said Joseph Hetherington or his undertenants, and of several Inclosures of Land, situate in the townfields of Glassonby, aforesaid, containing together about 40a. 0r. 6p. more or less, in the occupation of William Kidd, as farmer thereof. This estate is situate about eight miles from the town of Penrith. The tithes have been commuted for a tithe-rent charge of 26l. 15s. 4d. It is also entitled to a right of common on Glassonby Fell and Viol Moor. Certain small parcels of this lot are also of customary tenure, held under the said manors of Glassonby and Little Salkeld, and the remainder is freehold, being the greatest portion of the estate, is freehold. Those three lots, which comprise an acreage of 707a. 2r. 17p. and lie contiguous together, are situate in a fine sporting country, in the midst of game preserves strictly attended to, and, from the wood, water, and shelter in which they are bound, are admirably adapted for the breeding of game.

Lot 4. All that Close, called High Close and Wood, in Glassonby aforesaid, adjoining Viol Moor, containing 4a. 0r. 29p. more or less, in the occupation of the said Joseph Hetherington.

Lot 5. All that piece of Freehold Land, containing 31 perches, adjoining the Church-yard of Addingham, in the occupation of Thomas Glenton.

Lot 6. All that compact Estate, called EDEN LACY, situate in the parish of Great Salkeld, in the said county, consisting of a new built Dwelling house, and Farm Buildings of the best description, and several Inclosures, all of the first-rate quality, lying in a ring-fence, containing together 76a. 0r. 21p. more or less, now in the occupation of Mrs. Sanderson. About 11a. 0r. 20p. of this estate comprise plantations of fine growing useful and ornamental oak, larch, and timber wood, all laid out in the most tasteful manner. It is of copyhold tenure, held under the Manor of Great Salkeld, member of the honour of Penrith, by payment of several small copyhold rents, and subject only to a fine on change of lord or tenant by death or alienation, of the same amount as the copyhold rent, and is situate about five and a half miles from Penrith. The tithes of this estate are commuted for a tithe rent charge of 10l. 2s. 10½d.

Lot 7. A Freehold Estate, called WOLFA, situate in the said Parish of Great Salkeld, consisting of a Dwelling-house and Farm-buildings and several Inclosures of Land, containing together 79a. 0r. 31p. more or less, in the occupation of John Heidford, as farmer thereof, of which about 22 acres are wood. The tithe rent-charge on this estate is 7l. 7s. 11½d. and it is situated about four miles from Penrith.

Lot 8. All that Copyhold Dwelling-house, with a Garden and piece of Land adjoining, situate in the Village of Great Salkeld, now in the occupation of the Rev. George Chapman, as farmer thereof. This lot is held under the Manor of Great Salkeld by payment of the yearly copyhold rent of 1d.

Lot 9. A Freehold Close, called Farlands, situate in the Townfields of Glassonby, containing 2a. 0r. 30p. more or less, in the occupation of Thomas Glenton, as farmer.

Lot 10. A Freehold Close, called High Moor, situate in the Townfields of Yanwath, in the County of Westmorland, containing 2a. 1r. 10p. more or less, in the occupation of James Lewin, of Penrith. The Wood on the estates will be sold to be taken at a valuation by the purchaser.

The estates may be viewed on application to the several tenants; and all further information, plans, and printed particulars may be obtained on application to Mr. SYLVANUS MILLER, Land Surveyor, Penrith; Messrs. RUTTER and TROTTER, Solicitors, 4, Ely-place, Holborn, London; and Mr. JAMESON, Solicitor, Penrith.

Freehold Grass Farm.

MESSRS. NASH beg to announce that the FREEHOLD GRASS FARM, called New House, with Residence, Four Cottages and Thirty Acres of Land, at Hookwood, in the parishes of Horley and Charlwood, Surrey, advertised to be Sold by Auction, at Garraway's, on Thursday, July 29, is SOLD by Private Contract.—Reigate, June 21.

SURREY, on the south side of Leith-hill, in the parish of Abinger, a well known picturesque and beautiful part of the country.

MESSRS. NASH are instructed by the Proprietor to SELL BY AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on THURSDAY, JULY 29, at Twelve in One Lot, a very improveable small FREEHOLD ESTATE, called Little Burchetts, consisting of a Cottage, with large Garden, capital close of Meadow Land, with beautiful stream of water running through, containing together about four acres, and let to Mr. Mace, a yearly tenant, at the very low rent of 12l. per annum. The timber in the meadow, ... This property adjoins the high road from Forest green to Abinger, distant from the latter three miles, the same from the Gomshall Station; about eight miles from Dorking and Guildford; and thirty from London.—Printed particulars are preparing, and may be had fourteen days previously to the sale at the principal inns at Dorking, Shere, Gomshall, Guildford, Ockley, and Horsham; at Garraway's; of Messrs. ELLIS, PHILLIPS, and SALVADERSON, Solicitors, 12, Clement's-lane, London; and of Messrs. JOSEPH and JOHN NASH, Land Agents, Surveyors, Auctioneers, &c. Reigate, Surrey.

CHARLWOOD, SURREY.—By

MESSRS. NASH, at GARRAWAY'S on THURSDAY, JULY 29, at Twelve, in one lot, by direction of the Devisees in Trust, under the will of William Ellis, esq. a very desirable FREEHOLD FARM (with a small part copyhold), called Great and Little Greeves, consisting of a good Farm House, requisite agricultural buildings, and 110 acres of arable, meadow, pasture, and wood land, in convenient enclosures, remarkably well timbered, rendering the property a eligible investment, situate on a commanding eminence, having fine views of Leith and Box Hills, about one mile from the village of Charlwood, six from Reigate, the same distance from Dorking and Horsham, and twenty-seven from London. The farm being in hand, immediate possession may be had. The timber to be taken by valuation, as well as the usual tenant's right pertaining to the land, in every respect according to the custom of the country. Mr. Shove, at the adjoining farm, will shew the property.—Particulars are preparing, and may be had fourteen days previously to the sale at the principal Inns at Charlwood, Crawley, Horsham, Dorking, Guildford, Epsom, Sutton, Croydon, Old Ship, Brighton; Sussex Express Office, Lewes, and Duke-street, London-bridge; Garraway's, of WM. SANGER, esq. Solicitor, 4, Essex-court, Temple; Messrs. JOSEPH and JOHN NASH, Land Agents, Surveyors, Auctioneers, &c. Reigate, Surrey, at whose offices a plan of the estate may be seen.

SURREY—in the parishes of Leigh and Betchworth.—By

MESSRS. NASH, at GARRAWAY'S, on THURSDAY, JULY 29, at Twelve, by direction of the Devisees in trust under the will of William Ellis, esq.—Lot 1. A small COPYHOLD FARM (timber free), at Westwood, in the parish of Leigh, in the county of Surrey, in the occupation of Mr. James Beaman, a yearly tenant, at the rent of 15l. consisting of a brick and tile cottage, with garden, orchard, barn, yard, &c. and thirteen acres of arable, meadow, and pasture land, in convenient inclosures, bounded by lands of his Grace the Duke of Norfolk and Thomas Hope, esq. Lot 2. (A short distance from Lot 1), in the parish of Betchworth, a small Close of FREEHOLD ARABLE LAND, containing 2a. 3r 6p. in the occupation of Mr. W. Harman, a yearly tenant at the rent of 3l. It adjoins the high road from Leigh and Brockham to the Holmwood-common, and is suitable for the erection of a cottage residence. The above described properties are beautifully situate, about four miles from Dorking and Reigate, two from the rural villages of Brockham and Leigh, and twenty five from London. The purchaser of each lot will have to take the timber by valuation, and also to pay the respective tenants whenever they may quit, such valuation as they may be entitled to under their holdings. The tenants will shew the property.—Particulars are preparing, and may be had fourteen days previously to the sale at the principal inns at Dorking, Guildford, Epsom, Sutton, Croydon; Old Ship, Brighton; Sussex Express Office, Lewes, and Duke-street, London-bridge; Garraway's; of WM. SANGER, Esq. Solicitor, 4, Essex-court, Temple; Messrs. JOSEPH and JOHN NASH, Land Agents, Surveyors, Auctioneers, &c. Reigate, Surrey, at whose offices plans of the estates may be seen.

KNOCKWOOD-PARK, KENT.—A Freehold Estate of 150 acres, in a ring-fence.

MESSRS. QUALLETT and LEWIS have been favoured with positive instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, LONDON, early in AUGUST (unless previously disposed of by private contract), the very compact and valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, called Knockwood-park, in the parish of Tenterden, and within a quarter of a mile of the market town. It consists of about 150 acres of land of excellent quality, thoroughly drained, and disposed in equal quantities of park-like pasture and superior arable, embellished by handsome timber and thriving underwood. A gentleman's farm-house, with suitable buildings, and two cottages, render complete this truly eligible property, which for healthy and picturesque position, accessibility, and capability, is not surpassed within its distance of town. It is within an easy drive of a station on the Dover line, and possesses further advantages, which will be detailed in the particulars now in preparation, and may shortly be had at the Offices of Messrs. QUALLETT and LEWIS, 10, New Bond street.

WYFORD BURY.—An elegant suburban Villa and Grounds, in St. John's-wood park.

MESSRS. QUALLETT and LEWIS (late Hedger and Co.) have been favoured with instructions from the Proprietor, who is removing, to SELL by public AUCTION (unless previously disposed of by private treaty), at the MART, on THURSDAY, JULY 22nd, a very charming VILLA RESIDENCE, seated in its own grounds, and in one of the most delightful districts near town, being within an easy walk of Hampstead and its beautiful picturesque scenery, yet within a short drive of the palace, parks, and operas. A handsome carriage sweep conducts through the lawn to the residence, which is of pleasing elevation, and comprises an entrance hall, on the right of which is an elegant drawing-room, decorated with considerable taste, and opening into a conservatory; on the right is an excellent dining room, from which steps descend to the pleasure grounds, which are usefully as well as ornamentally disposed, and are of some considerable extent. There is also a morning-room and the chamber, bath, and culinary departments are arranged equally in accordance with comfort and convenience. A double coach house, stable, and enclosed yard complete the property, which may be fairly characterised as one of the most elegant and commodious villas in the vicinity. Full particulars may shortly be had of THOMAS EDEN, esq. Solicitor, 3, Salisbury-street Strand; and of Messrs. QUALLETT and LEWIS, Land Agents, &c. 10, New Bond-street, opposite the Clarendon, who are fully authorised to treat for the sale by private contract.

A delightful retreat, with Seven Acres of Land, at Ealing, within eight miles of town.

MESSRS. QUALLETT and LEWIS (late Hedger and Co.) will SELL by AUCTION, by order of the proprietor, at the MART, early in AUGUST, a very pretty COTTAGE, known as "Rose Villa" Hanger-hill, Ealing, with Seven Acres of capital Grass Land. The position is truly enchanting, being within view of Harrow and the rich panoramic scenery around. The house is in complete order, with sufficient accommodation for a moderate-sized family, with good flower and kitchen gardens, ornamental water, conservatory, aviary, melon-pits, ice-house, capital stabling for eleven horses, double coach-house, harness-room, and every suitable outbuilding, forming a miniature farm yard, with every suitable appendage. It is very easy of access, both by coach and railway, and may be purchased with the new furniture, stock, &c. and immediate possession obtained.—Particulars are in preparation, and may shortly be had at the Mart, and at the offices of Messrs. QUALLETT and LEWIS, Land agents, &c. 10, New Bond-street, opposite the Clarendon.

NOTTING-HILL, close to Lord Holland's beautiful Park.

MESSRS. QUALLETT and LEWIS (late Hedger and Co.) are directed by the Proprietor to SELL by AUCTION (unless previously sold by private treaty), at the MART, on THURSDAY, JULY 22, Nos. 1 and 3, Clifton-terrace, Notting-hill, TWO very superior LEASEHOLD RESIDENCES, held for Seventy-two years, at trifling ground-rents, most delightfully situate, close to Lord Holland's beautiful park, facing the main road, though at a sufficient distance therefrom to obviate the slightest annoyance. They are admirably arranged as to comfort and convenience, both with gardens, and one having stabling in the rear.—Particulars may be had at the Mart; the Mitre, Notting-hill; of Mr. SMITH, Solicitor, 35, Walbrook, City; and of Messrs. QUALLETT and LEWIS, 10, New Bond-street, opposite the Clarendon.

PERIODICAL SALE (appointed to take place the first Thursday in each month) of Reversions, Life Interests, Annuities, Policies of Assurance, Advowsons, Next Presentations, Rent-charges in Lieu of Tithes, Post Obit Bonds, Tontines, Debentures, Improved Rents, Shares in Docks, Canals, Mines, Railways, Insurance Companies, and other public undertakings for the year 1852.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that his PERIODICAL SALES (established in 1843), for the disposal of every description of the above-mentioned property, will take place on the first Thursday in each month throughout the present year, as under:—

Thursday, August 5.	Thursday, Nov. 4.
Thursday, Sept. 2.	Thursday, Dec. 2.
Thursday, Oct. 7.

Mr. MARSH has been induced to hold these sales from his experience of the heavy drawback and great difficulty to which this description of property has been exposed in the ordinary course of sale, and the above plan has proved equally advantageous to venders and purchasers. Notices of sale intended to be effected by the above means should be forwarded to Mr. MARSH at least a fortnight antecedent to the above dates. Mr. MARSH requests all persons desirous of being furnished monthly with the particulars of the above sales, to forward their address to his Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house, where every information as to the disposal and purchase of this description of property may be obtained.—The particulars and conditions of the sales for the present year may be obtained, seven days prior to each day of sale, at Mr. MARSH'S Offices, 2, Charlotte row, Mansion house.

IN CHANCERY.—Radford v. Radford, and Radford v. Brown.—WINDSOR.—Desirable Freehold Investment.

MR. PRICE will SELL by AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on TUESDAY, JULY 27, at Twelve for One, in four lots, with the approbation of Nassau Wm. Senior, esq. the Master to whom these causes stand referred, THREE remarkably well-built FREEHOLD HOUSES, delightfully situate, being Nos. 5, 6, and 7, Adelaide-square, King's-road, Windsor, Berks, together with a small parcel of rich meadow land, with fine growing timber thereon, and Two Cottages, at Clewer-green, in the parish of Clewer, near Windsor, situate a short remove from the high road near to the Prince Albert Inn, and has a good building frontage. The whole is let at very low rentals, amounting to 66*l*. 1s. per annum. The property may be viewed till the sale, and particulars had, ten days prior at the said Master's Office, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane; of Mr. ANDREW, Solicitor, 44, Lincoln's-Inn-fields; Mr. THOMAS BRACE, Solicitor, 9, Chandos-street, Cavendish-square; Messrs. MORRIS, STONE, and TOWNSON, Solicitors, Moorgate-street Chambers; Mr. RABT. GEO. SMITH, Solicitor, 5, New inn; at the Castle Inn, Windsor; at the various Inns in the neighbourhood; at Garraway's; and at Mr. PRICE'S Offices, 48, Chancery-lane.

MARYLEBONE.—Highly important Leasehold Investment.—Fifteen original Ground Leases, held under his Grace the Duke of Portland, most of them at nominal Rents, rendering them nearly equal to Freehold for the term, and yielding a Rental of 9,0—l. per annum.

MR. PRICE has been favoured with instructions to SELL BY AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on TUESDAY, JULY 27, at Twelve for One, in Lots, FIFTEEN substantial brick-built MESSUAGES, being Nos. 49, 53, 54, 55, 57, and 58, Great Titchfield street, Nos. 8, 10, and 11, Clipstone-street, Nos. 11, 16, and 19, Charlton-street, and Nos. 42, 43, and 44, Upper Marylebone-street, comprising nearly the whole of that valuable pile of buildings bounded by the four streets above mentioned. Many of the houses have good ornamental shop fronts, particularly the four corner houses, which have extensive double return fronted shops, and are very commanding in appearance. The whole are well let, principally on lease, to tenants of great respectability. The property is situate in a good and substantial business neighbourhood, where the rentals may be relied upon with certainty; and Mr. PRICE feels great pleasure in recommending this investment to his friends generally, but more especially to those seeking to increase their present incomes, the remainder of the terms being about twenty one years. The premises may be viewed by permission of the tenants, and particulars had ten days prior to the sale of T. D. KNIGHT, Esq. Solicitor, 73, Basinghall-street; at Garraway's; and at Mr. PRICE'S Offices, 48, Chancery lane.

IN CHANCERY.—Forsyth v. Chard.—Leasehold Ground-rents and Reversionary Interest in the same Premises, arising from property situate in Goswell-street-road, Brewer-street, Alfred-buildings, Rawstone-street, and Bridge-place, respectively, in the County of Middlesex.

MR. W. F. BRAY is instructed to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, facing the Bank of England, on TUESDAY, the 20th day of JULY, at Twelve o'Clock at noon, with the approbation of Nassau William Senior, esq. one of the Masters of the Court of Chancery, in pursuance of an Order of the said Court, made in a cause intituled Forsyth v. Chard, in Three Lots LEASEHOLD GROUND RENTS of 110*l*. 8s. per annum, and of the REVERSIONARY INTEREST, amounting to 1,436*l*. per annum, in the same premises, after the determination of the leases under which the ground rents are reserved, and of the interest, amounting to 5—l. per annum, in other premises in — aforesaid. Particulars may be had at the Chambers of the said Master in Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane; of Mr. LEIGH, Solicitor, No. 16, George-street, Mansion-house; of Messrs. SMITH, HENNING, and CROFT, No. 3, Basinghall-street, Solicitors; Mr. HENRY THOMAS, No. 15, Lincoln's-inn fields, Solicitor; Mr. SAMUEL SHUTTLEWORTH, No. 3, South-square, Gray's-inn, Solicitor; Messrs. LEGARD, BANNATYNE, and GAMMON, No. 9, Cook-lane, City, Solicitors; of the Auctioneer, No. 259, High Holborn; and at the Mart.
SAMUEL SHUTTLEWORTH, Solicitor, Gray's-inn.
July 3, 1852.

Freehold.—Fort-street, Bishopsgate.

MR. BRAY, Jun. will SELL, at the MART, facing the Bank of England, on TUESDAY, 20th JULY, at Twelve o'clock, by order of the Mortgagee, and with concurrence of the Mortgagor, a FREEHOLD DWELLING, No. 7, Fort-street, near Union-street, Bishopsgate; redeemed; partly let, and estimated to produce 50*l*. per annum. May be viewed, and particulars and conditions of sale had on the Premises, of D. A. RIVOLTA, Esq. Solicitor, 10, Hart-street, Bloomsbury; at the Mart; and of the Auctioneer, 259, High Holborn.

MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence.

"Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-taming arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conductors only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. Water, Steam, or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books Documents, [illegible] Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating th[illegible] resisting Chamber" See certificates of hundreds of tests and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22, No. 642, are removed to their London Depôt, where [illegible] resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

Milner's London Depôt, 47A, Moorgate-street, City, near the Bank of England. Milner's Safe Works (the most extensive in the world), Liverpool.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.— On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr. Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars.—CHUBB and SON, 57 St. Paul's-churchyard, London; 28, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street, Manchester; and Horseley-fields, Wolverhampton.

CHEAP TEA and CHEAP COFFEE.— Although we sell Black Tea at 3s. per lb. and good Black Tea at 3s. 4d.; Strong Coffee at 10d. and Fine Coffee at 1s. per lb. we still say to all who study economy, that "The Best is the Cheapest," particularly when the best can be obtained from us at the following prices:—

The Best Congou Tea	3s. 8d.	per lb
The Best Souchong Tea	4s. 4d.	"
The Best Gunpowder Tea	5s. 8d.	"

THE PRIZE MEDAL, with "Honourable Mention," has been awarded for the GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, by the Jurors of the Exhibition of all Nations, and is now used in the Royal Laundry. Being thus doubly noticed for its "General Superiority" (a mark of distinction conferred on no other) by the Royal Commissioners and Jury, from amongst thirty or forty exhibitors, sets it far above every other of its competitors. The ladies are, therefore, respectfully requested to make a trial of the Glenfield Patent Double-refined Powder Starch, which, for domestic use, now stands unrivalled. "For the apparel oft proclaims the man."—Hamlet.

EVERY WELL-DRESSED MAN KNOWS how difficult it is to find a tailor who thoroughly understands the peculiarities of each figure, and can suit its requirements with a well-cut gentlemanly fitting garment, in which ease and taste, being equally regarded, the eye of the observer is pleased with its graceful effect, while the comfort of the wearer is secured. Hence it is that so few feel "at home" during the first day's wear of any new garment, and so many are apparently doomed to appear in clothes, however costly, that never can become adapted to their forms. To remedy so manifest a deformity in costume, FREDERICK FOX adopts this means of making known that he has practically studied both form and fashion in their most comprehensive meaning, and in the course of an extensive private connection has clothed every conceivable development during the past thirteen years, always adapting the garment, whether coat, waistcoat, or trousers, to the exigencies of its individual wearer, and the purposes it is intended to serve, thus invariably attaining elegance of fit with that regard for economy which the spirit of the age dictates.—F. FOX, Practical Tailor, 73, Cornhill, same side of the way as the Royal Exchange.

TO FAMILIES REMOVING.—The BEDFORD PANTECHNICON and STORE-ROOMS (late Messrs. Collard and Collard's Pianoforte Manufactory), 194, Tottenham-court-road, for the WAREHOUSING of FURNITURE, PIANOS, PAINTINGS, and every description of valuable property, are fitted up into separate and well-ventilated compartments, so that each depositor can have his own lock and key, and from the great extent of the premises the Proprietor is enabled to charge much less than similar establishments. Estimates, including packing, removing, &c. free of expense.

For terms and prospectus apply on the premises; or of the Proprietor, Mr. W. TINGEY, Polytechnic Silversmith Establishment, 312, Regent-street. Advances made, if required, on very moderate terms.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are, beyond doubt, the most scientific and really useful improvement in the art of shirt-making. Their superiority does not rest solely upon their being entirely different from all others, but upon the combination of perfect novelty of design with sound practical use, resulting from a study of scientific principles, making them, in fact, the only solid and thoroughly sensible alteration from the old shapes worth of notice.

There are two qualities, in both of which the principle is strictly carried out, viz. six for 40s.; second quality, six for 30s.

RICHARD FORD, 38, POULTRY, LONDON. (Late 185, Strand.)

THE SANS-PLI SHIRT, as shown in the Great Exhibition, Class 20, No. 23, is a garment made entirely without gathers. These auxiliaries to the shirt have hitherto been considered indispensable, but, like everything else where the ingenious mind is directed to getting rid of complication, simplicity is proved to be the attribute of perfection. It may be confidently eulogised for its nicety of fit and great ease and comfort.—From the Morning Herald.—At WILLIAM REID'S, 51, Conduit-street, Regent-street. Printed flannels for dressing-gowns, cravats, and hosiery in every variety.

IMPORTANT to FAMILIES FURNISHING who study Elegance with Economy.—BROMPTON HOUSE, 22 and 23, QUEEN'S-BUILDINGS, KNIGHTSBRIDGE.—JAMES COOK'S three guinea French-polished Mahogany Arabian Bedstead, Bedding, Cabinet, Carpet, Looking-glass, and Upholstery Warehouse. Estimates given, and a list of prices sent post-free.

CARRIAGES, NEW and SECOND-HAND, of the BEST DESCRIPTION.

Messrs. ROBSON and CO. 56, South Audley street, corner of Mount street, Grosvenor-square, have for immediate use, Step-piece Barouches, with and without Cee and Under Springs; elegant and stylish George the Fourth Cabriolette and Driving Phaetons, and Queen's Pattern Sociables; Single and Double-bodied Broughams and Clarences, for One and Two Horses. Can be had on hire, with liberty to purchase.

All Carriages sold warranted for Twelve Months.

Several Second-hand Light Broughams, from Fifty-six to Sixty-seven Guineas.

A NEW DISCOVERY.—MR. HOWARD, Surgeon Dentist, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely NEW DESCRIPTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural Teeth as not to be distinguished from the original by the closest observer; they will NEVER CHANGE COLOUR, or DECAY, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will give support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication; and that Mr. Howard's improvements may be within the reach of the most economical, he has fixed his charges at the lowest scale possible. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication.

52, Fleet street. At home from Ten till Five.

SURREY, on the south side of Leith-hill, in the parish of Abinger, a well known picturesque and beautiful part of the country.

MESSRS. NASH are instructed by the Pro-prietor to SELL BY AUCTION, at GARRAWAY'S, on THURSDAY, JULY 29, at Twelve, in One Lot, a very improveable small FREEHOLD ESTATE, called Little Burchetts, consisting of a Cottage, with large Garden, capital close of Meadow Land, with beautiful stream of water running through, containing together about four acres, and let to Mr. Mace, a yearly tenant, at the very low rent of 12*l.* per annum. The timber in the meadow, which is very handsome and growing, will be sold with the estate. This property adjoins the high road from Forest-green to Abinger, distant from the latter three miles; the same from the Gomshall Station; about eight miles from Dorking and Guildford, and thirty from London.—Printed particulars are preparing, and may be had fourteen days previously to the sale, at the principal inns at Dorking, Shere, Gomshall, Guildford, Ockley, and Horsham; at Garraway's; of Messrs. ELLIS, PHILLIPS, and SALAMONSON, Solicitors, 12, Clement's-lane, London; and of Messrs. JOSEPH and JOHN NASH, Land Agents, Surveyors, Auctioneers, &c. Reigate, Surrey.

CHARLWOOD, SURREY.—By

MESSRS. NASH, at GARRAWAY'S on THURSDAY, JULY 29, at Twelve, in one lot, by direction of the Devisees in Trust, under the will of William Ellis, esq.; a very desirable FREEHOLD FARM (with a small part copyhold), called Great and Little Greenings, consisting of a good Farm House, requisite agricultural buildings, and 140 acres of arable, meadow, pasture, and wood land, in convenient enclosures, remarkably well timbered, rendering the property an eligible investment, situate on a commanding eminence, having fine views of Leith and Box Hills, about one mile from the village of Charlwood, six from Reigate, the same distance from Dorking and Horsham, and twenty-seven from London. The farm being in hand, immediate possession may be had. The timber to be taken by valuation, as well as the usual tenant's property in and relating to the land, in every respect according to the custom of the country. Mr. Shove, at the adjoining farm, will shew the property.—Particulars are preparing, and may be had fourteen days previously to the sale at the principal Inns at Charlwood, Crawley, Horsham, Dorking, Guildford, Epsom, Sutton, Croydon; Old Ship, Brighton; Sussex Express Office, Lewes, and Duke-street, London-bridge; Garraway's; of WM. SANGER, esq. Solicitor, 4, Essex-court, Temple; Messrs. JOSEPH and JOHN NASH, Land Agents, Surveyors, Auctioneers, &c. Reigate, Surrey, at whose offices a plan of the estate may be seen.

SURREY.—in the parishes of Leigh and Betchworth.—By

MESSRS. NASH, at GARRAWAY'S, on THURSDAY, JULY 29, at Twelve, by direction of the Devisees in trust under the will of William Ellis, esq.—Lot 1. A small COPYHOLD FARM (timber free), at Westwood, in the parish of Leigh, in the county of Surrey, in the occupation of Mr. James Beaman, a yearly tenant, at the rent of 15*l.* consisting of a brick and tile cottage, with garden, orchard, barn, yard, &c. and thirteen acres of arable, meadow, and pasture land, in convenient inclosures, bounded by lands of his Grace the Duke of Norfolk and Thomas Hope, esq. Lot 2. (A short distance from Lot 1), in the parish of Betchworth, a small Close of FREEHOLD ARABLE LAND, containing 2a. 3r. 6p. in the occupation of Mr. W. Harman, a yearly tenant, at the rent of 2*l.* It adjoins the high road from Leigh and Brockham to the Holmwood-common, and is suitable for the erection of a cottage residence. The above described properties are beautifully situate, about four miles from Dorking and Reigate, two from the rural villages of Brockham and Leigh, and twenty-five from London. The purchaser of each lot will have to take the timber by valuation, and also to pay the respective tenants whenever they may quit, such valuation as they may be entitled to under their holdings. The tenants will shew the property.—Particulars are preparing, and may be had fourteen days previously to the sale at the principal inns at Dorking, Guildford, Epsom, Sutton, Croydon; Old Ship, Brighton; Sussex Express Office, Lewes, and Duke-street, London-bridge; Garraway's; of WM. Valuable Estates in Cumberland for Sale

THE Trustees of the late Col. Lacy will offer for SALE in PUBLIC AUCTION, at the GEORGE INN, in PENRITH, on FRIDAY, the 23rd day of JULY, 1852, precisely at Three o'clock in the Afternoon, in the following or such other lots as may be arranged at the time of sale, the several valuable ESTATES, situate in the several parishes of Addingham and Great Salkeld, in the county of Cumberland, all lying (with a trifling exception) contiguous to each other, and consisting of:-

Lot 1 A Freehold Estate, called Longmeg, in the said parish of Addingham, in the occupation of Joseph and Thomas Holliday, as farmers thereof; comprising a farmhouse, with homestead and farm buildings, and several Inclosures of land, containing together by admeasurement 307a. 2r. 26p. of which 70a. 1r. 17p. of excellent soil are covered with growing timber, principally of oak, larch, elm, and ash, of large dimensions, between forty and sixty years' growth. The plantations were carefully thinned and attended to in the course of their growth by the late owner, whose great knowledge in the rearing of timber wood was universally known, and now form an acreage of the most thriving and valuable timber in the county. This estate is bounded on the south-west for upwards of a mile by the beautiful windings of the river Eden, which abounds with trout, and affords excellent diversion to the lovers of angling. It is situated 6½ miles from the town of Penrith, and being all of first-rate quality, is admirably adapted to either corn or grazing. It lies compactly together in a ring fence, and is tithe free: the tithes having been commuted for an allotment of land on the enclosure of Little Salkeld Common. This estate is situate in one of the most admired parts of Cumberland, and possesses the most perfect remains of a Druids' Temple to be found in England. These remains form a circle of not less 350 feet in diameter, and have long been the wonder and admiration of the curious in antiquity.

Lot 2 An estate called MAUGHANBY, situate in the said parish of Addingham, in the occupation of Thomas Glenton, as farmer thereof, comprising a Farmhouse, Homestead, and Farm-buildings, and several Inclosures of Land, containing together 203a. 2r. 2p. more or less, of which about 10a. 3r. 2p. are thriving plantations. This estate lies together in a ring fence, and pays a yearly tithe rent charge of 25l. 18s. 9d. in lieu of tithes. It is entitled to right of common on the valuable and extensive estates called Glassonby Fell, which are well adapted to the breeding and rearing of sheep, and on the common called Viol Moor, and is situate between Long Meg Estate and the next Lot, No. 3. Certain small parcels of this estate are customary, held under Sir George Musgrave, bart. as parcel of his manor of Glassonby, and under the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle, as parcel of their manor of Little Salkeld; and the remainder, being the great bulk of the estate, is freehold.

Lot 3 An estate, called GLASSONBY FARM, situate at GLASSONBY, in the said parish of Addingham, consisting of a Dwelling-house, homestead, and Farm-buildings, and several Inclosures of Land, containing together 135a. 0r. 37p. more or less, in the occupation of Joseph Hetherington, as farmer thereof (except a field called Ranes, in the occupation of Thomas Glenton), and of a Cottage, Garth, and Outbuildings, at Glassonby, in the occupation of the said Joseph Hetherington or his undertenant; and of several Inclosures of Land, situate in the townfields of Glassonby, aforesaid, containing together about 40a. 0r. 0p. more or less, in the occupation of William Kidd, as farmer thereof. This estate is situate about eight miles from the town of Penrith. The tithes have been commuted for a tithe rent charge of 20l. 1s. 4d. It is also entitled to a right of common on Glassonby Fell and Viol Moor. Certain small parcels of this lot are also of customary tenure, held under the said manors of Glassonby and Little Salkeld, and the remainder thereof, being the greatest portion of the estate, is freehold. Those three lots, which comprise an acreage of 707a. 2r. 17p. and lie contiguous together, are situate in a fine sporting country, in the midst of game preserves strictly attended to, and, from the wood, water, and shelter in which they are bound, are admirably adapted for the breeding of game.

Lot 4 All that Close, called High Close and W[illegible]od, in Glassonby aforesaid, adjoining Viol Moor, containing [illegible] or [illegible] more [illegible] in the occupation of the said Joseph Hetherington.

Lot 5 All that piece of Freehold Land, containing 33 perches, adjoining the Church yard of Addingham, in the occupation of Thomas Glenton.

Lot 6 All that compact Estate, called EDEN LACY, situate in the parish of Great Salkeld, in the said county, consisting of a new-built Dwelling house, and Farm Buildings of the best description and several Inclosures, all of the first rate quality, lying in a ring fence, containing together 76a. 0r. 21p. [illegible] in th[e occup]ation of Mrs Sander[illegible] About 14a. 0r. 29p. of this estat[e com]prise plantations of fin[e gr]owing useful and ornamental oak, larch, and timber wood, all lai[d ou]t in the most tasteful manner. It is of copyhold te[nure], held u[n]der the Manor of Great Salkeld, member of the honour of Penrith, by payment of several small copyhold rents, and subject only to a fine on change of lord or tenant by death or alienation, of the same amount as the copyhold rent, and is situate about five and a half miles from Penrith. The tithes of this estate are commuted for a tithe rent-charge of 10l. 2s. 10d.

Lot 7 A Freehold Estate, called WOLFA, situate in the said Parish of Great Salkeld, consisting of a Dwelling-house and Farm-buildings and several Inclosures of Land, containing together 93a. 0r. 31p. more or less, in the occupation of John Redford, as farmer thereof of which about 22 acres are wood. The tithe rent-charge on this estate is 5l. 7s. 11d. and it is situated about four miles from Penrith.

Lot 8 All that Copyhold Dwelling house, with a Garden and piece of Land adjoining, situate in the Village of Great Salkeld, now in the occupation of the Rev George Chapman as farmer thereof. This lot is held under the Ma[nor] of Great Salkeld by payment of the yearly copyhold rent of 1d.

Lot 9 A Freehold Close, called Farlands, situate in the Town fields of Glassonby, containing 2a. 0r. 29p. more or less, in the occupation of Thomas Glenton, as farmer.

Lot 10 A Freehold Close, called High Moor, situate in the Townfields of Yanwath, in the County of Westmorland, containing 2a. 3r. 10p. more or less, in the occupation of James Irwin, of Penrith. The Wood on the estates will be sold to be taken at a valuation by the purchaser.

The estates may be viewed on application to the several tenants; and all further information, plans, and printed particulars may be obtained on application to Mr Sylvanus Miller, Land Surveyor, Penrith; Messrs Rutter and Thornton, Solicitors, 4, Ely-place, Holborn, London; and Mr Jameson, Solicitor, Penrith.

CALVERT YARTY, Auctioneer.

VERE LODGE, OLD BROMPTON.—For peremptory Sale.

MR. C. FURBER has been favoured with instructions to submit to AUCTION, on the PREMISES, on THURSDAY, JULY 15, at Twelve for One, the charming suburban retreat well known as VERE LODGE, Brompton, a short remove from the High Fulham-road. The villa has been built in the most substantial manner, is in an excellent state of repair, and, as the residence of a man of fashion, the domestic arrangements are of the first class. The reception-rooms, dining-saloon, morning-room, and library are all well-proportioned and noble apartments, and the spacious entrance-hall, leading to an elegantly-designed and spiral staircase, give a distingué air to the whole. The extensive pleasure-grounds are arranged with much taste, and shaded by ample foliage. The buildings consist of a large green-house, two newly-built loose boxes, and adjoining, but sufficiently removed from the house, is an excellent four-stall stable and coach-house, with groom's rooms. The villa stands within its own grounds, and is excluded from observation by a substantial brick wall which skirts the Old Brompton-road. It is held for an unexpired term, at a rent which may be denominated a ground-rent.—The premises may be viewed daily, where particulars and conditions of sale may be obtained, as also of Messrs. Harrison and Donner, Solicitors, 20, Hart-street, Bloomsbury; of S. B. Abrahams, Esq. Solicitors, 70, St. Martin's lane; and at the Auction Offices, Warwick-court, Gray's-inn.

PEREMPTORY SALE.—HAYES, MIDDLESEX.—Three Votes for the County.—By order of the Executors of the late Charles King, esq. deceased.

MR. CHARLES FURBER will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, the 29th of JULY, at Twelve for One, THREE FREEHOLD COTTAGES, with nearly an acre of land, situate and being on BOTWELL COMMON, in the parish of HAYES, in the county of MIDDLESEX, of the annual value of 5l. each. This property affords [an] eligible opportunity to gentlemen desirous of possessing a freehold qualification at a small cost.—May be viewed, and particulars, with conditions of sale, obtained of Mr. Towsey, Solicitor, Quality-court, Chancery-lane; at the principal Inns at Hayes and the neighbouring towns; at the Mart; and at the Auction Offices, in Warwick-court, Gray's-inn.

Important Investment.—Fulham, Middlesex.

MR. CHARLES FURBER begs to announce that he has been favoured by the instructions of the Executors of the late Charles King, esq. in consequence of the decease of his widow, who possessed a life interest in the estate, to submit to public AUCTION, at the MART, on THURSDAY, JULY 29, at Twelve for One, precise time, the much-admired gentlemanly RESIDENCE or COTTAGE ORNEE, known as Craven Cottage, immediately adjoining the Bishop of London's palace at Fulham, in the county of Middlesex. The property is let for seventy years to Sir Ralph Howard, bart. at 200l. per annum up to the 15th July, 1860, from thence at 225l. a-year, and is held upon lives renewable for ever. The princely liberality of the present lessee has rendered this villa the resort of the fashionable world, and no expense has been spared to render it most attractive, both in the internal accommodation and decoration, as also in the tasteful arrangement of the grounds of about four acres, in which it stands, and which are skirted by ornamental timber. The grounds are disposed in lawn, terrace, and other walks, parterres, and beautiful slopes to the bank of the river, and an extensive conservatory has recently been added, now forming one wing of the river frontage. It is by universal consent pronounced the most charming villa on the Thames. There is an excellent kitchen garden, with hothouse and forcing-pit, good stabling, gardener's cottage, out buildings, &c.—Particulars, with conditions of sale, may be obtained at the principal Inns in the neighbourhood; of Mr Towsey, Solicitor, Quality-court, Chancery-lane; at the Mart; and at the Auction Offices, in Warwick court, Gray's-inn.

[Freehol]d and Copyhold Property, within ten miles of London, and [near a] station on the Great Western Railway, comprising a gen[teel fami]ly villa residence, a small farm adjoining, some eligible bu[ild]ing land, cottages, &c. the whole comprising about 118 acres.

MESSRS. WINSTANLEY have received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, in the month of JULY, in several lots, the valuable FREEHOLD and COPYHOLD PROPERTY of the late John Robins, esq. delightfully situate at Norwood green, between Brentford and Southall, in the county of Middlesex, consisting of the residence, occupied for many years by the deceased, and built by him in a most substantial manner, with the pleasure and kitchen gardens, and about sixteen acres of park-like meadow land, an orchard and other land fronting the green, suitable for building purposes; a farm, with convenient farm buildings bounded by the road to Hanwell; several out-lying parcels of land, sundry cottages, &c. The day of sale will shortly be advertised, and particulars can then be obtained twenty-one days previously, at the inns in the neighbourhood; of Messrs. Blake, Tyler, and Tyler, Essex street, Strand; at the Mart; and [of Messrs] Winstanley, Paternoster-row.

ABBEY FARM LODGE, ST. JOHN'S-WOOD.

MESSRS. WINSTANLEY have received instructions from the Executors to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on TUESDAY, JULY 13, ABBEY FARM LODGE, the distinguished Elizabethan residence of the late Charles Woodcock, esq. which is approached by a carriage-drive, and encircled in its own tastefully-disposed pleasure grounds, with gravelled terrace-walk, belted by shrubberies and plantations. It is delightfully situate in the New Finchley road, about a mile from the Regent's-park, and at the corner of the road leading to Hampstead, and was erected about six years since of red brick, in the most substantial manner, and finished with stone quoins, mullions &c. and contains twelve principal and secondary bed-chambers, two dressing-rooms, two water-closets, linen and bath rooms; on the ground-floor, a lofty drawing room, 25 feet by 20, a dining room, 22 feet 6 by 16 feet 6, library and billiard-room, water-closet, &c.; a turretted tower, which communicates both with the house and grounds, and commanding a splendid panoramic view. The domestic offices are well arranged, and supplied with water. There is stabling for three horses, two coach houses, men's rooms, gardener's cottage, kitchen-garden, &c. the whole comprising about 1a. 35p. and held for ninety-three years, at a ground-rent.—May be viewed by tickets only, which, with particulars, may be obtained of Messrs. Bennett and Field, solicitors, 2, New-square, Lincoln's-inn; and of Messrs. Winstanley, Paternoster row; particulars also at the Mart, and the Eyre Arms, St. John's-wood.

Important Estates in the County of Hants, comprising a mansion-house and park, several [illegible] [alto]gether about 3,500 acres.

MESSRS. WINSTANLEY will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, in the month of JULY, in lots, pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery, made in a cause of "Rodney v. Rodney," with the approbation of James William Farrer, Esq. one of the Masters of the Court, the extensive and valuable ESTATES of George Lord Rodney, deceased, situate at Alresford and elsewhere, in the county of Hants. The property consists of the mansion at Alresford, various farms, and some woodlands, containing altogether about 3,500 acres, partly freehold and copyhold tenure, and the remainder held under leases for two lives from the Bishop of Winchester. Also the reversion in fee expectant on the decease without issue of a person aged 61, and a bachelor, to about 730 acres of freehold and copyhold land, in the parishes of Long Sutton and Ropley, in the county of Hants. The farms are let to most respectable tenants, and the woodlands are in hand.—Particulars and conditions of sale are in course of preparation, and may shortly be had (gratis) at the Master's office, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane; of Messrs. PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT TO ANNUAL MEETING OF JULY 6TH, 1852.

YOUR Committee beg to report that during the past year thirty-eight meetings of the society have been held, at which twenty-four legal and nine jurisprudential questions were discussed.

In point of number, these questions shew a considerable decrease upon those of former years, particularly as regards jurisprudential subjects. To some extent this is to be attributed to the fact that many questions of the latter class have, in consequence of the great interest taken therein by members, occupied two evenings in discussion; but it is in a much greater degree owing to some very important alterations which, since the last annual meeting, have been made in the rules of the society. By one of these alterations it was determined that only one question should in future be placed in the paper for discussion on each evening, instead of two as heretofore; and by another alteration a preference is given to strictly legal subjects, by providing that two questions of that class should be discussed for every jurisprudential question. These alterations have necessarily occasioned a decrease in the number of subjects brought under the consideration of the society, but your committee are of opinion that what has been lost in that respect has been more than regained in the extension and improvement of the debates consequent on the alterations.

It is an evil inseparable from the nature of the society that a great proportion of its members can remain such for a limited time only; and your committee have accordingly to regret that during the past year thirty-four members have resigned, chiefly in consequence of leaving London. It is nevertheless gratifying to find that the society has increased in number, no less than forty new members having been elected during the year. The number of members at the present time is sixty; a short time since it amounted to sixty-five.

The attendance at the weekly meetings has increased during the year, and now averages upwards of thirty; and at no previous period of its history was the society so flourishing in point of numbers and attendance.

Whilst congratulating their fellow members on the satisfactory progress of the society, your committee desire to urge on each individual the duty of maintaining the position and extending the usefulness of the society by a regular attendance at the debates, and by obtaining a constant succession of new members. The great changes which have been accomplished and are in progress in the administration of the law render the objects for which this society is formed of increased importance to the members of that branch of the Legal Profession to which it is confined.

The treasurer's account has been received from the auditors, and shews a balance in his hands of 45*l.*

LIFE INSURANCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—In common with my other professional brethren, I have constant applications from assurance offices, setting forth in inviting terms the benefits of their respective regulations; but there is one point connected with them in which I believe the Profession generally think improvement might be introduced. So long as the life lasts, and premiums are paid, all is well, but when it drops, and the sum assured is demanded, the matter assumes a different aspect. In the simple case of a person insuring his own life, and his executors requiring payment, the following are the require[ments] [o]f the most eminent offices:—

Certificate of baptism of the assured.

Certificate of his burial.

Certificate from medical man who attended him in his last illness as to cause of death.

Probate of his will.

If a baptismal certificate be required, it should be at the outset, and the burial certificate may well be dispensed with, the remaining evidence being amply sufficient for all ordinary cases, and particularly after the notice usually required, which gives abundant time for the office to make inquiries in cases of suspicion.

But when, as frequently happens, the policy has been transferred, the trouble and expense generally necessary to complete the chain of evidence required to establish the title of the claimant, to the satisfaction of the office, though familiar to your readers, is beyond the power of description. Here I have not time to do more than draw attention to the subject; and I would on no account depreciate the inestimable advantage of life assurance, but the more money assured is assimilated to ready money at the death of an insured person, and the less trouble and expense there is in obtaining it, the greater such advantage becomes; and the offices, no less than the public, would find their account in attending to the suggestion.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Cambridge, July 14. CLEMENT FRANCIS.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

The General Highway Act and other Statutes affecting the Law in connection with the Highways in England and Wales; with Practical and Explanatory Notes, Forms, References to Statutes and Cases, and a copious Index. By WM. FOOTE, Esq. Attorney-at-Law. London: Crockford.

MR. FOOTE, the author of this treatise, is an active and intelligent locum tenens of a magistrates' clerk in Wiltshire, and he has made the laws relating to highways his peculiar study, having taken an active part in the preparation of the various reforms that have recently been made and proposed, being in constant communication upon the subject with those who had undertaken in the Legislature the difficult task of putting the law upon a more rational basis. In the course of these various inquiries and discussions, and the necessity which they imposed upon him of looking carefully into the laws regulating highways, for the purpose of mastering them, Mr. FOOTE found that there was no book that gave him the information he sought; that the law was scattered and confused; and he bethought him that it might not be an unwelcome service to magistrates, magistrates' clerks, surveyors, parish officers, attorneys concerned for parishes, and the many other persons who are engaged about highways, if he were to avail himself of his extensive experience to compile a practical treatise upon the subject, such as he had himself found the want of. Accordingly, the compact volume before us was prepared expressly with that view, and experienced men inform us that he has succeeded in his purpose, insomuch that in some parishes copies have been ordered to be supplied to the parish officers for their guidance in the execution of their duties.

The general Act is given in full, with very copious notes of the cases decided upon it; a complete collection of the forms required and practical instructions to officers and persons engaged in its administration. Then follow the subsequent statutes by which it has been modified, including the Parochial Assessment Act; and an index of no less than thirty-six closely printed pages affords the readiest access to any portion of the work that may be sought. The value of so complete an index will be recognised by the practitioner. How carefully and laboriously the work has been compiled, will appear from the fact, that upwards of eight hundred cases are cited in it.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE ATTORNEYS' TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—In the Times of this day, there is, in a sharply written article upon Lord Robert Grosvenor, the following passage:—"That most just and reasonable tax, the duty on attorneys' certificates." Now, Sir, when it is notorious that the late Government did not defend the tax, but pleaded that it could not be spared at present, it really is necessary that the Profession should not let the matter slumber in the next Session of Parliament, as they may see that the "Thunderer" will be against them. As the origin and present injustice of the impost have been so often explained, and admitted by men of all parties, it is monstrous for any writer in the Times to call the tax just and reasonable!!

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

This Society is established to apply the principle of Assurance to PROPERTY as well as to Life; and its business consists of—

The Assurance of DEFECTIVE and UNMARKETABLE TITLES, rendering them absolute and perfect.

The Assurance of COPYHOLDS, LIFEHOLDS, and LEASEHOLDS, thereby making them equal, or even better than FREEHOLDS, for all purposes of sale or mortgage.

The redemption of LOANS and MORTGAGES, and guaranteeing their absolute repayment within a given period.

Increased and Immediate ANNUITIES granted upon HEALTHY as well as DISEASED LIVES.

The FIDELITY of Clerks, Servants, and others GUARANTEED upon the payment of a small annual premium, and a reduction of nearly one-half is made when a Life Assurance is combined with the Fidelity Guarantee Policy.

LIFE ASSURANCES effected for the whole term of life, or for a term of years, and the premiums can be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly.

ENDOWMENT and EDUCATION ASSURANCES and ANNUITIES granted; the premiums can be paid upon the returnable or non-returnable system, in case of death before attaining the age agreed upon.

IMMEDIATE ANNUITIES or increased incomes granted in exchange for REVERSIONARY INTERESTS.

Whole World Policies granted, and all Policies issued by this Society are INDISPUTABLE.

Every information furnished, free of expense, by applying to Agents wanted.

EQUITY and LAW LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.
No. 26, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

Policies in this Office are Indisputable, except for fraud.

"Free Policies" are issued, at a small increased rate of Premium, which entitle the Life assured to go to any Part of the World.

The Tables are especially favourable to young and middle-aged Lives, and the Limits allowed to the Assured, without extra charge, are unusually extensive.

At the first Division of Profits, to the end of 1849, the addition to the amount assured average above 50 per cent. on the Premiums paid.

WESTERN LIFE ASSURANCE and ANNUITY SOCIETY, 3, Parliament-street, London.

TEMPORARY LOANS are granted in sums varying from 50*l.* upwards, on available security, in connection with Life Assurance or Annuity Policies, for which the payments can be made by such arrangements as may be most convenient.

Applications for Agencies &c. to be made at 3, Parliament-street, London, to ARTHUR SCRATCHLEY, M.A. Actuary, author of a Treatise (with Rules and Tables) on Benefit Building Societies, &c.

PROFESSOR LIEBIG on ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE.

Baron Liebig to Mr. Allsopp.

"The specimens of your Pale Ale sent to me afforded me another opportunity of confirming its valuable qualities. I am myself an admirer of this beverage, and my own experience enables me to recommend it in accordance with the opinion of the most eminent English physicians, as a very agreeable and efficient tonic, and as a general beverage both for the invalid and the robust.

"Giessen, May 6. "JUSTUS LIEBIG."

ALLSOPP'S PALE or BITTER ALE may be obtained in Casks of all sizes from the Brewery, Burton-on-Trent; and from the under-mentioned Branch Establishments:—

LONDON—at 61, King William-street, City.
LIVERPOOL—at Cook-street.
MANCHESTER—at Ducie-place.
DUDLEY—at the Royal Brewery.
GLASGOW—at 115, St. Vincent-street.
DUBLIN—at Ulster Chambers, Dame-street.
BIRMINGHAM—at Market Hall.

At either of which places a list of respectable parties who supply the Beer in Bottles (and also in Casks at the same prices as from the Brewery) may at any time be seen.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION.—Valuable newly-invented very small powerful WAISTCOAT POCKET GLASS, the size of a walnut, to discern minute objects at a distance of from four to five miles, which is found to be invaluable to SPORTSMEN, GENTLEMEN, and GAMEKEEPERS. Price 1*l.* 10s. sent free.

TELESCOPES.—A new and most important INVENTION in TELESCOPES, possessing such extraordinary powers, that some 3½ inches, with an extra eye-piece, will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double Stars. PERIODICAL SALE (appointed to take place the first Thursday each month) of Reversions, Life Interests, Annuities, Policies, &c., Advowsons, Next Presentations, Rent-charges in lieu of Tithes, Post Obit Bonds, Tontines, Debentures, Improved Shares in Docks, Canals, Mines, Railways, Insurance Companies, and other public undertakings for the year 1852.

MR. MARSH begs to announce that his PERIODICAL SALES (established in 1843), for the disposal of every description of the above-mentioned property, will take place on the first Thursday in each month throughout the present year, as under:—

Thursday next, August 5.	Thursday, Nov 4.
Thursday, Oct 7.

Mr. MARSH has been induced to hold these sales from his experience of the heavy drawback and great difficulty to which this description of property has been exposed in the ordinary course of sale, and the above plan has proved equally advantageous to vendors and purchasers. Notices of sale intended to be effected by the above means should be forwarded to Mr. MARSH at least a fortnight antecedent to the above dates. Mr. MARSH requests all persons desirous of being furnished monthly with the particulars of the above sales, to forward their address to his Offices, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house, where every information as to the disposal and purchase of this description of property may be obtained.—The next sale will take place on Thursday, August 5.—2, Charlotte-row, Mansion house.

FEN DRAYTON, CAMBRIDGESHIRE.—Valuable Freehold Landed Estates, in a fine agricultural district, particularly adapted to trustees, capitalists, and others, or for occupation if desired.

MR. MARSH has been favoured with instructions to announce an absolute SALE by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, on THURSDAY next, AUGUST 5th at Twelve o'clock, in four lots (unless previously disposed of by private contract, of which due notice will be given), TWO exceedingly valuable FREEHOLD FARMS. Lot 1 comprises 41 acres of very rich arable and pasture land, in a ring fence, situate in the parish of Fen Drayton, a portion of which abuts on the river Ouse. Lot 2 comprises 68 acres of sound, useful arable land, presenting a most compact property, lying in a ring fence, and bounded by good roads, situate in the parish of Fen Drayton, on the high road from St. Ives and Huntingdon to Cambridge, distant three miles from St Ives, six from Huntingdon, and nine from Cambridge. Lot 3 comprises a comfortable Farm House and all requisite agricultural buildings, garden, and four closes of meadow and arable land, situate in the parish of Fen Drayton, within a few minutes' walk of the church, containing about 11 acres. Lot 4, Two Cottages, situate in the parish of Fen Drayton, within a short distance of the church; let to Ding and Buckwood, at [illegible]l per annum.

The Farms and Agricultural Buildings are in the occupation of Messrs. Smith and Johnson, at rentals amounting to 352l. per annum. The Farm-house, Garden, &c. is in the occupation of the proprietor. The land is in the highest possible state of cultivation, and of a most productive nature; a beautiful Close of Meadow Land, comprising a portion of Lot 3, containing about 10 acres, is appropriately situate as a site for the erection of a superior farm or villa residence, as it abuts on the road from St. Ives to Fen Drayton, and is within a few minutes' walk of the church and village.—May be viewed on application, and particulars, with conditions of sale and plans, obtained at the Golden Lion, St. Ives; Rutland Arms, Newmarket; George Hotel, Huntingdon; George Hotel, Chatteris; Lion Hotel, Cambridge; Messrs. ALLPRESS and LAWRENCE, Solicitors, St. Ives; E. A. LAWRENCE, Esq. [illegible], Bridge-street, Cambridge; or of Mr. MARSH, Auctioneer, Surveyor, and Estate Agent, 2, Charlotte row, Mansion house.

BANK.

Messrs. Masterman and Co. Nicholas lane (for the Proprietary Capital)
Messrs. Spooner, Atwood, and Co. Gracechurch-street (for the Mutual Investment Capital)
Sir Samuel Scott, bart. and Co. 1, Cavendish-square.

Offices (pro tem.)—33, Bucklersbury, City.

The objects of this company are threefold:—first, to promote emigration to Australia and elsewhere; secondly, to facilitate colonisation and the disposal of land; and, thirdly, to serve as a medium of securing and increasing, by safe investment in the mother country, the profits and savings of the emigrants.

The proprietary capital to provide for the purchase of vessels, the expenses of organisation, management, and superintendence, both at home and abroad, and to be invested in the purchase of land, in assisting emigrants and in such other manner as the directors may deem for the benefit of the shareholders.

The mutual capital will be raised by payment of fixed sums, or weekly or monthly subscriptions from the intending emigrants, and so soon as a sufficient sum is raised, a proportionate number will be forthwith provided with cabin, intermediate, and steerage [illegible]nts, according to the class to which they [illegible] [illegible], the priority to be decided by purchase, ballot, or rotation, in the same manner as in a building society.

In order to secure the repayment of the sums advanced to emigrants out of the proprietary capital, they will be required to give approved personal or other security in Great Britain.

Each holder of twenty shares will be entitled to nominate a steerage passenger, who will also be entitled to an outfit; each holder of thirty shares, an intermediate passenger and outfit; and of fifty shares a cabin passenger and outfit.

For the better security of both the proprietary and mutual capitals in case of accident or death, every emigrant will be insured to the full extent of all moneys advanced on his account, until the same be fully paid.

As a bonâ fide investment this company will prove one of the safest and most lucrative ever offered to the public, for, astonishing as it may appear, it is well known that an emigrant ship in a single voyage pays upwards of 50 per cent. and, as the company intend using their own vessels, a very large profit will be realized from this source alone, added to which the profits to be derived from the purchase, sale, and letting of land, the interest from the sums advanced to emigrants out of the proprietary capital, together with the profits from the mutual capital, warrant the directors in holding out to shareholders the certainty of a clear profit of at least 30 per cent. per annum, after allowing for all the working expenses of the company.

Form of Application for Shares.

To the Directors of the Port Philip and General Emigration, Colonization, and Investment Company.

Gentlemen, I request you to allot me shares in the above Company, and I hereby undertake to accept the same, or any less number that may be allotted to me, and to pay the sum of 1l. per share thereon, and execute the deed of settlement of the Company when required so to do.

ATTORNEYS IN THE COUNTY COURTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The Legal Profession would read with considerable astonishment the announcement in your columns, a few weeks ago, to the effect that an attorney, according to the recent County Courts Act, is not to be allowed to appear in court unless instructed directly by the party, and not by any other attorney.

That the clause in question was smuggled into the recent Act there cannot be a doubt, for otherwise, how comes it that a provision of this nature, affecting the whole of the attorneys in the kingdom, was utterly unknown to the Profession until the intelligence first appeared in your journal, under the intimation that you had only just discovered it on reading the Act of Parliament as it had passed into law?

Now, Sir, I should like to know, as one of the people of this country, and having a voice in making the laws by which we are to be governed, if there is no method of ascertaining how and by whom the clause in question was inserted?

If there be nothing but that which will bear the daylight with regard to the insertion of the clause, will the author favour the public with an explanation how it came to be inserted in the statute unknown to the Profession, and to be passed into law without at least affording a fair opportunity of shewing cause against the impropriety of such a provision?

The parties who make these laws should know that they are not merely legislating for London, where there are abundance of barristers, but also for the provinces, where, as a general rule, there are very few.

What is the state of affairs as the law now stands? We will suppose a portion of a county in which these are perhaps a dozen courts held. In the centre of these dozen courts, perhaps, there may or may not be as many as two barristers resident, and even these perhaps at a distance of eighteen or twenty miles from most of the courts, whilst there are at least half a score of attorneys residing in the vicinity of every one of the courts, as fully competent to appear in the County Court, as their distant neighbours, the barristers. We will suppose further, an attorney has a case in one of these courts, which, from pressure of business, or for any reason, he may wish some other party to conduct. Whether does it seem most reasonable that he should run about the country, to see whether he can get a barrister at a great expense, to come down and attend to the matter, or that he should transfer it without any trouble, and at little cost, to some other attorney on the spot, who after all may be in every way as fully qualified as the barrister to undertake the matter?

It is said that one of the judges has expressed an opinion to the effect that it was illegal for one attorney to act as an advocate for another attorney. With every respect to the high authority by whom this opinion is said to have been pronounced, I will beg to say that from time immemorial in the old County Court (which, by the way, could try questions without limit as to the amount in dispute), hundreds upon hundreds of cases were tried every year in which attorneys appeared as advocates, instructed by other attorneys, without the slightest objection from the barristers, who generally officiated as assessors, or any demur being made by the barrister-opponent of the attorney-advocate. Should this be questioned, I can refer to proofs.

If it be illegal for one attorney to act as an advocate for another attorney, will any one condescend to tell us why, on the same principle, it is not equally applicable to cases before magistrates in Petty Sessions and in arbitrations; and scarcely a week elapses in any Petty Sessions Court in the kingdom where attorneys do not appear as advocates, instructed by other attorneys, and this to the entire satisfaction of magistrates, clients, and all concerned. But, according to the principle acted upon in the new statute, this must be a most intolerable state of things, and the next thing we shall hear of will be that this is also forbidden, unless the attorneys take steps to regain the rights, of which they have so unfairly, and by such indefeasible means, been deprived in the passing of the recent County Courts Act.

I am, Sir, yours, &c. EXAMINER.

THE PROFESSION AND THE COUNTY COURTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—How are the Profession henceforth to conduct the business of the County Courts? Whilst the alterations effected in the present session were under consideration, no small degree of sensitiveness was displayed by controversial Barristers and Attorneys, in anticipation of the proposed changes.

The County Courts, which were originally designed for the speedy recovery of small debts, have gradually been converted into tribunals of first instance for the adjudication of the great bulk of the business of Westminster Hall. The cramped machinery applicable to the originally narrow province of these courts, has, however, hitherto continued in full operation over their now more extended field; the Bench filled by men liable to be distracted by the daily duties, cares, and jealousies of Lawyers in actual practice, or anxious to get briefs. The regular attendance of a competent Bar virtually prohibited, and the suitor strictly precluded from recovering, in the majority of cases, the fair expenses of professional assistance, which he has been put to.

To remedy these inconveniences the new Act secures to the business of the County Courts the undivided attention of the judges; and the Profession will have little reason to regret that these gentlemen will henceforth neither figure on Circuit nor in Westminster Hall. The new Act also introduces a system of allowance of costs of the suitor, including the legitimate expenses to which he may have been put in the prosecution or defence of his case by the retainer of Counsel and Attorney, the production of witnesses, &c. and lastly, the Bar are restored to the same position in these courts as they enjoyed at Common Law, viz. they are legally authorised, and compellable to afford their services to any suitor who may demand them.

Now the two first of these County Court reforms being obviously to the general advantage of the profession, as well as the public, cannot the last also be made equally conducive to the general good, if the two branches of the profession will only meet each other in an honourable spirit?

It must always be borne in mind, that by the new Act, Barristers and Attorneys are simply restored to the same legal position in the County Courts as they already stand in at Quarter Sessions.

There is no more positive right on the part of Barristers to have exclusive audience in one court than in another, nor is there any positive right in either instance for the Attorneys to prevent Barristers acting without their intervention, but with a spirit worthy of a liberal profession, the general interest was allowed, in the older tribunals, to take precedence of individual claims, and etiquette established what the law did not enforce. Barristers and Attorneys were, by a voluntary regime, confined within their more immediate and peculiar sphere, and the pre-audience of the Bar was hailed by both branches of the profession, less as an invidious distinction conferred on a wig and gown, than as a salutary substitute for the system of Attorney-Advocates and Barrister-Attorneys. Let this same good understanding be encouraged in the County Courts, and the interest both of the profession and the public will be secured.

I address myself to the junior branch of the profession, as really more interested in this matter than the Bar. The habitual attendance of the Bar in the County Courts would obviously be conducive to the cause of justice, by aiding the presiding judge in accurately applying the law, and preventing those unseemly irregularities and improprieties, which are ever apt to arise in courts free from such a salutary control; but are not the general body of the Attorneys and Solicitors immediately benefited by the Bar maintaining intact both their old privileges and their old etiquette? for the privilege and the etiquette must go hand in hand, and will evidently stand or fall together.

The present unsettled system in the County Courts has, no doubt, called into existence many individual practitioners, who, with the legal qualification of Attorneys, seek to make a livelihood by advocacy, and the absence of a regular Bar to enforce the wholesome rules of professional etiquette has, no doubt, in these Courts, as in the Court of Bankruptcy, tended to foster a happily small batch of members of the long robe, who are content to wriggle into practice per fas et per nefas. The opinions and the feelings of these various practitioners may be well anticipated. Their arguments must be viewed with suspicion. The contrabandists have ever been the most zealous opponents of wholesome reforms.

But more worthy men have been compelled to [illegible]umb to [illegible] mania—cedunt privata publicis,—and let the whole body of legitimate practitioners on the rolls of Attorneys judge whether it is to their advantage to adopt the alternative of gradually surrendering the practice of the County Courts to this spurious race, or submitting to the inconvenience of attending on every occasion, and performing the double functions of Attorney and advocate in person, forcing the junior bar, in self-defence, to avail themselves of their legal right of imitating this inconvenient practice, and acting without the intervention of the other branch of the profession.

Occasionally it happens, no doubt, that a solicitor of honourable standing is to be found, who avails himself con amore of his legal right of acting as advocate; but let any unprejudiced member of the profession attend for a few hours in any of the Metropolitan County Courts, and he will be able at once to judge for what manner of practitioners the boon of Attorney advocacy, hitherto so vigorously contended for by the Law Societies, is really conferred.

The Profession now have the opportunity of amicably and prudently setting this matter at rest. In a short time we shall see the junior bar, no doubt, attending the County Courts, as they do at present at the Quarter Sessions. If the Attorney advocates are suffered to combine to keep them out of practice there, the Barristers will be compelled to counteract the combination: but if the higher class of solicitors will, as it is their obvious interest to do, interfere before it is too late, the evil may yet be averted by a timely understanding that the Barrister and Attorney shall, as in better times, strictly confine themselves to their own legitimate and honourable vocations.

The very first act of a bar mess would be to repress any breach of an honourable understanding as to professional practice among their members. Why, then, cannot the Law societies endeavour to repress the irregular practices of the Attorneys who practice in the County Courts.

My good intentions must be my apology for this long letter. Acting in unison, the Bar and the Attorneys may make the practice of the County Courts respectable: opposed to one another, the lowest only of each branch of the Profession will probably follow the vocation.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Temple, July 7, 1852. NISI PRIUS.

THE PROFESSION IN THE COUNTY COURTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The 10th section of the County Courts Improvement Act, I presume, cannot apply to an attorney's correspondent in another district appearing in court for such attorney. As, for instance, where one attorney instructs another in a different district wherein a defendant dwells, to apply for an order for the commitment of such defendant, judgment having been obtained in the home court.

If it does apply, and there happen to be no bar in the foreign court, I suppose it would be necessary for the attorney "acting generally in the action" to travel thither for the purpose.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

July 25, 1852. ONE, &c.

[This is one of the inconveniences we have stated as resulting from the provision so hastily introduced. —ED. L. T.]

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

THE Lord Chancellor has appointed William Winterbotham, of Cheltenham, in the county of Gloucester, gent. to be a Master Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

It is reported that Alexander Gordon, esq. who has been sheriff-substitute of Sutherland for the last sixteen years, will demit his office on the retiring allowance on account of bad health, and that Edward Fraser, esq. advocate, admitted to the bar in 1843, is to be his successor.—Witness.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE EXCISE LAWS.—By an Act now in force, informations for penalties, &c. under the Excise laws may be heard before the Inland Commissioners or by the metropolitan magistrates.

THE NEW METROPOLITAN BURIAL ACT.—This Act, which became operative on the 1st instant, when it received the Royal assent, contains 54 clauses. It is entitled "An Act to amend the Laws concerning the Burial of the Dead in the Metropolis," and was passed in consequence of the failure of "the Metropolitan Interments Act, 1850," which it repeals. It is now provided that on the representation of the Secretary of State her Majesty in Council may order the discontinuance of burials in any part of the metropolis, which order is not to extend to the burial-grounds of Quakers or Jews, unless expressly included. After such an order in Council for discontinuance of burials it is to be deemed a misdemeanour to bury therein. There is a saving of certain rights to bury in vaults, &c. and also as to cemeteries mentioned in the schedule annexed to the Act, and in new burial-grounds or cemeteries hereafter to be provided with the approbation of the Secretary of State. There is an exception as to St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey. No new burial-ground or cemetery (parochial or non-parochial) is to be provided and used in the metropolis, or within two miles of any part thereof, without the previous approval of the Secretary of State. In any parish in the metropolis, on the requisition of ten or more ratepayers, that the place of burial is "insufficient or dangerous to health," a vestry may be called to determine whether a burial-ground shall be provided under this Act, and, if agreed upon, then a "burial board" is to be formed to carry out this Act, and to act in the manner prescribed by the several clauses for the benefit of the public concerning the burial of the dead.

THE LAW RELATING TO MASTER AND SERVANT, comprising Domestic and Menial Servants and Clerks, Husbandmen, and Persons employed in the different Manufactures, and the principal Statutes relating to Workmen, the Settlement of Disputes, Tickets of Work, Limitation of Labour, Payment of Wages, School Attendance of Children, &c. including the NEW FACTORY ACT (13 & 14 Vict. c. 54), with General Observations, all the Cases up to the present time, and a copious Index. By CHARLES J. B. HERTSLET, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s. 6d. boards; 8s. cloth; 9s. 6d. half-calf; 10s. 6d. calf

"A little work on the Law relating to Master and Servant, by Mr. C J B Hertslet, has just been issued, which will prove valuable to all classes, and is calculated to prevent wrongs and inconveniences which are often inflicted or submitted to on each side through ignorance of the actual nature of the responsibilities which exist. The various decisions in connection with the subject appear to have been digested with much care; and the author has collected those statutes which contain general regulations in reference to the contract between the employer and the employed, as well as those relating to particular occupations. By persons engaged in trade and manufactures, with large numbers of clerks and workmen, as well as ordinary servants, such a volume has long been wanted" Ti[illegible].

In the press,

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SESSION of 1852 Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at Law. Price [illegible] 6d cloth

NOTE.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850 price 7s 6d. and 1851, price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.
Municipal Corporations Acts Amendment Act
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term).

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.— On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr. Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London; 28, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street, Manchester; and Horseley-fields, Wolverhampton.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

The Militia Law. Comprising all the Statutes in force relating to the Militia, with explanatory Notes and a copious Index. By T. W. SAUNDERS, Esq. Barrister at-Law, Author of "The Duties of Magistrates," &c. &c.

THE Act of last Session was only the skeleton of an Act. Throughout, it refers to and embodies previous statutes, so that to learn what is the law relating to the Militia, which is now about to be embodied, the inquirer has to hunt through many large volumes of statutes, and when he has found all the different Acts that belong to the subject, he experiences the utmost perplexity in comparing them and incorporating them one with another. In this predicament, Mr. SAUNDERS's little book will be found of great value and utility, for he has here brought together all the statutes, and parts of statutes now in force relating to the Militia, and which forms, in fact, the code under which it is to be raised and governed, including the New Militia Pay Act. These he has arranged in the order of date, and made intelligible by notes, that shew the references backward and forward, and how one enactment is affected by the other. So singularly vague and imperfect is the law, that there will be some difficulty in working it, but that difficulty will be materially relieved by the volume that thus brings the law together within a small compass, where it can be found in a moment. It is accompanied with a very copious index, and that is the most important matter in a compilation such as this.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

Assizes.

NORTHERN CIRCUIT.

LANCASTER, Aug. 9.—Lord Chief Justice Campbell and Mr. Justice Wightman arrived here on Saturday. The calendar contains the names of 16 prisoners, 2 of whom are charged with murder, 2 with manslaughter, 3 with rape, 1 with stabbing, the rest with minor offences. The cause list contains an entry of nine cases.

APPLEBY, Aug. 6.—The commission was opened here late last night. Lord Chief Justice Campbell arrived alone to take the business of the assizes. The calendar contained the names of fifteen prisoners and nine charges, two of them concealment of birth, two burglaries, the rest larcenies. The cause list contained an entry of two causes.

NORTH WALES CIRCUIT.

CHESTER, Aug. 9.—The commission was opened on Saturday, before Mr. Justice Talfourd. The cause list presents a meagre shew of business. It numbers six entries, of which one only (understood to be an action of libel, brought by a clergyman against the proprietor of a newspaper) is a special jury cause. The calendar contains 65 prisoners for trial. Of these, the educational returns shew that 16 can neither read nor write, 17 read and write imperfectly, 19 read imperfectly, 4 read and write well, and 1 is returned as having had a superior education. The offences comprise 2 charges of arson, 4 prisoners are charged with bigamy, 10 with burglary, 4 with concealing the births of children, 3 with uttering and being in possession of counterfeit coin, 5 with cutting and maiming, 3 with horse-stealing, 3 with housebreaking, 3 with murder (amongst these is the man who murdered and buried his mother at Prenton), 1 with perjury, 3 with rape, 19 with riot (these are the Stockport rioters), 2 with unnatural crimes, 1 with administering savin with intent to procure abortion, 1 with throwing a stone against a carriage upon a railway, and 1 with stealing coals.

WESTERN CIRCUIT.

BRISTOL, Aug. 4.—The commission was opened here yesterday afternoon by Baron Platt. For the first time the clerk of assize and associate, regularly belonging to the Western Circuit, have taken their proper seats in this Court, the local associates having been removed. This augurs well, and we may hope yet to see Bristol placed in its proper position, having the assizes twice a year, and a gaol delivery before the judges of assize on the Western Circuit. There are nineteen causes for trial, four of which are marked for special juries. The bad ventilation and inconvenience of the court still continue.

WELLS, Aug. 5.—The commission was opened in this city yesterday. This morning the business of the assize commenced, Baron Platt presiding in the Crown Court, and Baron Martin at Nisi Prius. There is a fair amount of civil business, there being twelve causes entered for trial, of which five are marked for special juries. The calendar presents a list of sixty-two prisoners for trial, and the great majority of the cases are of a very serious character. On analysing the calendar we find them to be,—murder, 4; manslaughter, 2; maliciously wounding, 2; arson, 2; robbery, 1; burglary, 4; rape, 3; unnatural, 2; perjury, 2; uttering a forged cheque, 1; horsestealing, 1; housebreaking, 2; concealment of birth, 1; false pretences, 1; riot, 9; larceny, 6; misdemeanor, 3.

This Society is established to apply the principle of Assurance to PROPERTY as well as to Life; and its business consists of—

The Assurance of DEFECTIVE and UNMARKETABLE TITLES, rendering them absolute and perfect.

The Assurance of COPYHOLDS, LIFEHOLDS, and LEASEHOLDS, thereby making them equal to, or even better than FREEHOLDS, for all purposes of sale or mortgage.

The redemption of LOANS and MORTGAGES, and guaranteeing their absolute repayment within a given period.

Increased and Immediate ANNUITIES granted upon HEALTHY as well as DISEASED LIVES.

The FIDELITY of Clerks, Servants, and others GUARANTEED upon the payment of a small annual premium, and a reduction of nearly one-half is made when a Life Assurance is combined with the Fidelity Guarantee Policy.

LIFE ASSURANCES effected for the whole term of life, or for a term of years, and the premiums can be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly.

ENDOWMENT and EDUCATION ASSURANCES and ANNUITIES granted; the premiums can be paid upon the returnable or non-returnable system, in case of death before attaining the age agreed upon.

IMMEDIATE ANNUITIES or increased incomes granted in exchange for REVERSIONARY INTERESTS.

Whole World Policies granted, and all Policies issued by this Society are INDISPUTABLE, except in cases of fraud.

This Society is established for the Purchase of Reversionary Property, Life Interests (absolute or contingent), Life Annuities (immediate or deferred), Life Policies of Assurance, and every other description of property, in possession or expectancy, depending upon the duration of human life.

The great increase of Life Assurances, and of family arrangements under wills and marriage settlements, seems to require the further extension of Reversionary Interest Societies, in order that something like a defined and equitable value may be attached to such property. While no such institutions existed the value depended entirely upon the views of the casual buyers, and in consequence of the difficulty of disposing of such property, large amounts were daily sacrificed at arbitrary and incommensurate prices, to the enormous profit of those who invested their money in such securities.

That deposit upon the shares is fixed by Parliament at 5s. per share; the remainder of the first instalment of 2*l.* 10s. per share will be payable as soon as the Society is completely registered; and further calls not exceeding 2*l.* 10s. per share, and at intervals not less than three months, will be made as opportunities occur for profitable investment.

Applications for Shares to be addressed to the Solicitors, Messrs. CAPRON, BRABANT, CAPRON, and DART, Savile-place, New Burlington-street; or to the Directors, at the Offices of the Society, 5, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London, where prospectuses may be obtained. An early allotment of the shares will be made.

WESTERN LIFE ASSURANCE and ANNUITY SOCIETY,

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS are, beyond doubt, the most scientific and really useful improvement in the art of shirt-making. Their superiority does not rest solely upon their being entirely different from all others but upon the combination of perfect novelty of design with sound practical use, resulting from a study of scientific principles, making them, in fact, the only solid and thoroughly sensible alteration from the old shapes worth of notice.

There are two qualities, in both of which the principle is strictly carried out, viz. six for 40s.; second quality, six for 30s.

BARON LIEBIG'S OPINION OF "PALE ALE."

The prominence given to the name of Baron Liebig in placards and advertisements will have excited the impression that he coveted a celebrity inconsistent with the dignity of his station in the scientific world. Having learned that he had obtained such undesirable notoriety, Baron Liebig has requested the publication of the following letter, with the view of informing the public of the motives which dictated his communication to Mr. Allsopp:—

"The question of adulteration by strychnine, which has been taken up seriously in England, seemed to me of great importance, and I thought to do some good by aiding to demonstrate the error. If I wished to associate with any individual brewery my remarks on the alleged adulteration of bitter beer with strychnine, it would have been natural to have mentioned another brewery in which alone, and not in Mr. Allsopp's, I was engaged in investigating the Burton mode of brewing; and it was also in that other brewery the Bavarian brewers acquired all the instruction they obtained at Burton. The admiration I expressed of this beverage in my letter to Mr. Allsopp is advertised in such a manner as to lead to the inference that my praise was exclusively confined to Mr. Allsopp's beer; this was not the case; my remarks referred to that class of beer.

"JUSTUS LIEBIG."

"Giessen, July 24, 1852.

PROFESSOR MUSPRATT to MR. ALLSOPP.

"I have carefully analysed samples of your Ales, and find they do not contain a particle of any injurious substance. I and my family have used your Ales for years, and with perfect confidence in their purity. I know the Pale Ale, prepared, as in your Brewery, under scientific surveillance, contains a large quantity of nutritious matter; and the hop, by its tonic properties, gives a healthy tone to the Stomach."

THE EXPENSES of FUNERALS, so much

complained of as extortionate and unnecessary, can be reduced to a moderate scale, and obvious saving of one-half, by applying in the first instance to SHILLIBEER'S office, instead of employing the nearest undertaker, who generally has to hire all the requirements, and consequently inflicts twofold profits. SHILLIBEER'S charge for a respectable hearse and coach funeral, two horses to each, coffin, pall, and every necessary article, is only 10*l.* 10s. A first-rate funeral, fit for a nobleman, with lead coffin, case, hearse and four, two coaches and pairs, and all needful fittings, complete for 30 guineas. Artisans' funerals from 4*l.*; tradesmen's, 6*l.*, 8*l.* and upwards. No extra charge within ten miles of London. Patent funeral carriage, to convey deceased and six mourners to any cemetery, with two horses, 1*l.* 11s. 6d.; single horse, 1*l.* 1s.; hearse or mourning coaches, pairs, 1*l.* 1s. each.—City-road, next Bunhill-fields Burial-ground. Originated in 1842.

MILNER'S SAFES.—The strongest Safeguards in the World against Fire, Robbery, and Violence.

"Holdfasts," by main strength and scientific adaptation of material (strong wrought iron and steel) and construction, and fire-resisting by the mutual reaction of non-conduction and evaporation, within the chambers, when exposed to fire,—the only effective resisting medium that can be interposed between red heat outside, and the contents of a safe. A fire-taming arrangement exclusively secured by Milner's patents, and solely worked by the Patentees. All other safes being chambered with dry non-conducters only, soon acquire a temperature throughout, when fire surrounds them, which destroys their contents. Water, Steam, or Moisture, unconfined, cannot be made hotter than boiling water, in which Books, Documents, or Bank Notes, cannot be burnt, and combined with and permeating the best non-conductors, constitute Milner's Fire-resisting Chambers. See certificates of hundreds of tests and proofs. The magnificent Group of Milner's Safes from the Great Exhibition, Class 22, No. 642, are removed to their London Depôt, where they will be kept on view as a record of 1851 (adding the improvements of the day as they arise), and as Sample Safes, suitable for all classes, together with all sizes of Milner's lighter and cheaper Fire-resisting Safes, Chests, and Boxes.

BURGLARIES.—CHUBB'S LOCKS.—

On the night of the 31st of January a desperate attempt was made upon the Dundee Bank by a set of accomplished thieves. An iron door, secured by CHUBB'S PATENT LOCK, was the principal object of attack, and the burglars, having exhausted their skill in trying to pick this lock, endeavoured ineffectually to destroy it by drilling. After some hours' work they were alarmed, and made a precipitate retreat, leaving all their instruments behind them. On the previous evening, the warehouse of Mr. Clarke, Cross-street, Manchester, was broken into; the thieves picked eight locks of the ordinary kind, and then having unsuccessfully endeavoured to pick the Detector Lock on a Chubb's Fireproof Safe, they tried to force it open, but without avail. This is the second time this safe has resisted the attacks of burglars.—CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London; 28, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street, Manchester; and Horseley-fields, Wolverhampton.

Hertslet and Scott, Solicitors, 31, Norfolk-street, Strand; at Garraway's; and at the Office of Messrs. Farebrother, Clark, and Lye, Lancaster-place, Strand.

LINCOLNSHIRE, three miles from the Railway Station at Brigg, and three from Scawby.—Very valuable and extensive Freehold and Tithe-free Estates lying within a ring fence, with Shooting-box and newly-erected Farm-houses and Agricultural Buildings, and nearly 1,000 Acres of Land, let, independent of the woods in hand, at 1,075*l.* per annum, with wharf on the navigable river Ancholme.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and LYE are instructed to SELL, at GARRAWAY'S, on WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, at Twelve (unless an acceptable offer is previously made by private contract) the BROUGHTON capital FREEHOLD and TITHE-FREE ESTATE, which is situate about three miles from the capital market towns of Brigg and Scawby, where there are railway stations, fifteen from Hull, and twenty three from Lincoln, and consists of three excellent farms, with newly-erected stone and slated superior farm residence, with complete agricultural buildings—the whole amply supplied with water. A wharf, with wharf-house and buildings, on the river Ancholme, which runs through the estate, communicating with the Humber at Ferriby. Also a shooting-box, called the Lodge, commanding beautiful views. The estate consists altogether of 974 acres, of which nearly 300 are of the richest description, having been originally flooded by the Humber, but now perfectly drained. Also about eighty acres of grass land, near to Broughton village, some water meadow, and the remainder very productive light land, clayed at a considerable expense, and there is capital building and lime stone on the estate. The woods comprise 270 acres, are noted for their beauty, and afford excellent covert for game. A small lake in front of the woods is stored with fish, and there are several newly-erected cottages, with good gardens. The present rental, independent of the woods, paid by a most respectable and intelligent tenantry, who hold on leases, is 1,075*l.* per annum.—The estate may be viewed, and descriptive particulars, with plans, may be had at the Lodge; at the Inns at Scawby and Brigg; at the White Hart, Market Rasen; Royal Hotel, Hull; of John Moore, Esq. Solicitor, Lincoln; of Messrs. Scott and Tahourdin, Solicitors, Lincoln's Inn-fields; at Garraway's; and at the Offices of Messrs. Farebrother, Clark, and Lye, Lancaster-place, Strand.

STAFFORDSHIRE, on the borders of Worcestershire and Shropshire, within easy distance of the borough and market-towns of Bewdley, Kidderminster, and Bridgnorth.—The Arley Castle Estate, late the property of the Right Hon. George Earl of Mountnorris, deceased, consisting of the Manor of Arley, with the noble Castle, extensive Pleasure-grounds, Park, Woods, and Lands, embracing Two Thousand Six Hundred and Forty Acres on each side, and adjoining the river Severn, with the beautiful Cottage and Grounds, in the occupation of the Viscountess Valentia.

MESSRS. FAREBROTHER, CLARK, and LYE have received instructions to SELL, at GARRAWAY'S, on THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, at Twelve, in pursuance of an order of the High Court of Chancery, made in the cause of "Slaughter v Foster," and with the approbation of William Henry Tinney, esq. one of the Masters of the said Court, the ARLEY ESTATE, situate on each side of the river Severn, in the parish of Arley, county of Stafford, bounded by the counties of Worcester and Shropshire, in which are very small portions of the estate, giving votes for these counties; presents a finely undulated and picturesque surface, the banks of the river, as well as a considerable portion of the estate, being clothed with timber and plantation, amidst which rises the old hall, erected by the Lyttletons in 1630, an ancient Elizabethan structure, of picturesque character, with gabled attic windows; to this is attached the edifice raised by the late Earl Mountnorris, and styled by that nobleman Arley Castle, castellated, of the Norman period, with rich decorations of rather a later date, situate on high ground, commanding extensive views of the surrounding beautiful country. The Castle is of noble design, and the character of the Norman architecture, its aspect and rich effect completely obtained, and that with a hand unsparing of expense. The grand front, called the Lancaster Tower, or Keep, has four angle towers, heavy machicolated battlements and surmounting the whole an octangular flag tower, of considerable height and beauty; beyond this four hexangular towers, with an archway between them, provided with oak doors and portcullis. A fine terrace, of about 80 feet in width, extends the whole length of the building; at one end is the barbican, projecting from the main building, of the most extraordinary picturesque character, constructed entirely of stone, with machicolated battlements, and four square bartizans rising at each angle. The entrance to the Castle is on the east side (nearly opposite the village church, which, as with nearly all old English dwellings, stands approximate), by a noble octangular tower, through an early English archway, opening to the corridors, which lead to the great dining room in the Lancaster Tower, the ceiling of which is formed of massive arched ribs in the full character of the Norman period, four richly decorated Gothic windows, and the whole of the most elegant design, and the arrangement skilful and scientific. Numerous other reception rooms, sleeping apartments, and all the requisite offices. The kitchen gardens are walled, and a handsome Norman structure, with machicolated wall and towers in character with the castle, form the entrance; the pleasure grounds surrounding the castle comprise about 26 acres, disposed in verdant lawns, with noble forest and other trees of the rarest kind and of almost every clime, and the walks, considerable in extent, are shaded by luxuriant shrubs of great beauty. On the west of the Castle a path leads from the barbican to an enclosed pleasure ground, called Naboth's Vineyard, in which are extensive ponds arranged for effect, with waterfalls and fountains, also a building, the principal room of which is lined with Elizabethan wood carvings of the first character, the exact representation of an ancient English dining-room. Near the grounds is the quarry which furnished the greater portion of the stone for the completion of the Castle. The lands, plantations, woods, &c. in hand, comprise together about 762 acres. Near to the Castle stands the very picturesque residence distinguished as Arley Cottage, with its tasteful pleasure-grounds, in the occupation of the Dowager Viscountess Valentia. The manor of Arley, with its chief rents, heriots, &c. eighteen compact farms, with all necessary dwellings and agricultural buildings, several quarries, mines, the greater portion of the village, and parcels of accommodation and orchard land. The whole estate of the estimated annual value of upwards of 3,000*l.* and extending to 2,640 acres, the principal part of which is freehold, and the remainder copyhold of the inheritance of the manor of Arley, watered by the river Severn, and situate four miles from Bewdley, six from Kidderminster, and nine from Bridgnorth (all market and borough towns), and rail accessible within six miles. Also, rent charges payable out of adjoining estates in the parish of Arley. It is impossible within the limits of an advertisement to do ample justice to this magnificent estate; the public are therefore referred to the illustrated particulars, which, with plans, may be had (gratis) at the Master's Offices, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane; of Mr. Slaughter, Solicitor, 5, Duchess street, Portland place; of Mr. J. H. Benbow, Solicitor, Stone-buildings, Lincoln's inn; of Mr. J. P. Cooke, Solicitor, Rolls chambers, Chancery lane; of Messrs. Bischoff and Coxe, Solicitors, 19, Coleman-street, City; at Garraway's; and at the offices of Messrs. Farebrother, Clark, and Lye, Lancaster-place, Strand. Particulars and plans may also be had in the country, of Messrs. J. Cooke and Sons, Solicitors, Bristol; of Messrs. NECROLOGY

OF LEGISLATORS, MAGISTRATES, AND LAWYERS.

VICE-CHANCELLOR SIR JAMES PARKER.

Intelligence reached town at a late hour on Saturday evening of the death of Vice-Chancellor Sir James Parker, who suddenly dropped down dead on Temple, Loughborough, Leicestershire. The learned gentleman had been for some time labouring under an internal disease, and for the last few days of remaining in town he had at intervals expectorated blood, but such a sudden bereavement was not anticipated by his large circle of relatives and friends. It appears he was out with a party enjoying the sport of angling so late as Thursday last, and up to a very brief period of his decease he betrayed no symptoms to create alarm among those friends who were immediately associated with him. His age was scarcely forty-nine, and he had only enjoyed his preferment to the Chancery bench ten months. Sir James was the son of the late Mr. Charles Stuart Parker, of Blockairn, near Glasgow, and was born at Glasgow in 1803, and married in 1829 the daughter of the late Mr. Thomas Babington, of Rothley Temple. He was educated at the Grammar School and College of Glasgow, and graduated M.A. at Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1823; he became the seventh wrangler in 1825, and was called to the Bar by the Hon. Society of Lincoln's-inn in February, 1829. In July 1844 he obtained a silk gown, and in the month of October last was appointed one of the Vice-Chancellors of England, upon the extensive alterations which then took place in the Chancery Courts; he received the order of Knight Bachelor on the occasion of his promotion to the judicial seat. Besides being one of the benchers of Lincoln's-inn, he was in the commission of the peace for Leicestershire. His town residence was 21, Chester-terrace, Regent's-park, and many who have shared his friendship will be deeply pained at this sad announcement of his loss.

Sir James Parker contested the borough of Leicester in the Tory interest in 1847, when he was elected by a very considerable majority. He was a consistent Tory, and owed his elevation in no respect whatever to political influence. Indeed, it was highly to the credit of Lord John Russell's Government, that upon the vacancies on the Chancery bench occurring much about the same time, no less than three of the promotions were conferred upon political opponents of the Administration, professional fitness being considered more than political partisanship. Sir Knight Bruce was promoted to be one of the Lords Justices in the Court of Appeal; Sir James Parker was created one of the Vice-Chancellors, and Sir George Turner, the Conservative M.P. for Coventry, another. Sir R. Kindersley, promoted from being a Master in Chancery, is the third.

The deceased Vice-Chancellor was a member of one of the principal of a group of families who, in Glasgow, and more recently and to a smaller extent in Liverpool, exercised no small influence over both the commercial and social local worlds. Dr. Chalmers was an early friend of the household, and its principal member at the time of the disruption of the Scotch Church contributed largely to the Free Establishment. Sir James was from a boy strongly attached to all manly exercises, particularly angling and boating, and when a young man was a frequent wanderer in the wildest and most desolate portions of the Highlands. In those days he was renowned for his anecdotical and conversational powers, and for his narration of odd reminiscences of northern character and adventure, which he used to tell with infinite drollery and mimetic power—so much so, that there is a story, which his melancholy death will revive in many a Highland circle, of a Sutherlandshire minister being absolutely obliged to rise abruptly from table, and make for the stable-yard to order his gig, in consequence of his dread of fatal consequences from the paroxysms of laughter to which the stories of the young Parker excited him. Once fairly embarked, however, in legal studies, the Highland trips were given up, and the collection of Highland traits and stories was not indeed forgotten but not increased. James Parker became a devoted lawyer—given up body and soul to Themis; a strong and earnest intellect, and a peculiarly clear and shrewd manner of stripping off extraneous circumstances, and grappling with the pith and kernel of a case, were valuable gifts which he possessed to a very great degree. He was also laborious and painstaking in the extreme. He never attained to the reputation of a brilliant lawyer, but he was a very sound and trustworthy one, and his decisions and opinions generally commanded the respect and admiration of the Bar. It is true that his judicial career was of the shortest, but he never had a decision reversed; and in the most important issue which he tried—the Wagner case—his judgment was unanimously pronounced to be able, strictly impartial, and setting forth in the clearest light the state of the law and the facts.

It may be worth while to mention that Lady Parker is the cousin of Mr. Macaulay, the historian, and that the late Vice-Chancellor was the brother-in-law of Mr. Cardwell.—Morning Chronicle.

JEFFERY HART BENT, Chief Justice of British Guiana, died on the 29th June, at the age of seventy-two. The Royal Gazette speaks of him as "a good man, and an upright, well-beloved judge." Mr. Arrindale has been appointed in his place.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

THE following places have been duly licensed for the solemnisation of marriages therein:—
Kingsland Chapel, Hackney.
Christ Church, Woodbury, Devonshire.

THE RECORDERSHIP OF HULL.—We have much pleasure in announcing that Mr. Samuel Warren, Q.C. has been appointed to the recordership of Hull, an office successively filled by Mr. Justice Cresswell, the Right Hon. M. T. Baines, and the late T. C. Granger, M.P. for Durham. The appointment of Mr. Warren has given great satisfaction on the Northern Circuit.—Globe.

On Tuesday week Mr. W. H. Dennett, of Worthing, was appointed clerk to the Board of Health of that town.

SIR JAMES PARKER.—The friends of the late Vice-Chancellor Sir J. Parker will be glad to learn that Mr. J. Bailey, the sculptor, of Conduit-place, Paddington, has taken a mask, and is now modelling a bust of him, which promises to be an excellent likeness.

ALL THE DIFFERENCE.—Mr. Pollock.—Speak up, sir. Witness.—Oi thinks oi speaks up enough. Baron Alderson.—You don't speak so loud as the learned counsel. Witness.—Noa, it's not loikoly; oi's not used to it; it's his trade. (Laughter.)

Sales by Auction and Private Contract.

HERTFORDSHIRE.—The Pishobury Estate and Mansion, a compact and truly valuable Freehold Property, bounded by the beautiful River Stort, with the Home Farm and Lodge, comprising altogether about 290 acres; situate near Sawbridgeworth and Bishops Stortford—a highly picturesque and favourite sporting part of the county, and only 23 miles from London.

MESSRS. HOGGART, NORTON, and TRIST have received instructions to offer for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, on FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, at Twelve o'clock (unless previously sold by private contract), the important and singularly compact FREEHOLD ESTATE of Pishobury, situate on the high Cambridge-road, near Bishops Stortford, twelve miles from the town of Hertford, and within one hour's journey, by railway, of the metropolis; comprising a capital and substantial mansion of handsome elevation, arranged with every regard to comfort, in a perfect state of repair, and adapted in all respects for the immediate occupation of a gentleman's establishment, without requiring any extraordinary expense for its perfect enjoyment and maintenance. It commands a beautiful view over the rich and finely timbered park, with its ornamental woods and plantations, skirted by the picturesque River Stort, broad winding streams intersecting the pleasure grounds, and affording excellent fishing and amusement, with extensive gardens and pleasure-grounds, laid out with much taste and embellished with the choicest shrubs and evergreens, broad gravelled walks leading to the water, an ornamental bridge, elegant conservatory, hot and forcing houses, grapery, &c.; ice-house, fish store, stabling, coach-house, and offices of every description; together with the home farm, called Rowney-lodge, with bailiff's cottage, garden, yards, and very complete Farm Buildings, and about 280 acres of most productive arable, wood, and rich meadow and pasture land, the whole, with the exception of about twelve acres, being land-tax redeemed. The property is bounded for a considerable distance by the high London road and is screened by belts of plantations and on the western side is a handsome and newly erected Elizabethan lodge with a grand approach to the mansion through an avenue of stately timber by a splendid drive. The land is in an excellent state of cultivation and produces abundant crops; the woods are filled with thriving timber, and abound with game; the farm buildings are of a superior description, the fences and roads excellent, and the estate altogether, from its beauty, intrinsic value, and local advantages, deservedly ranks as one of the most desirable for investment in the county, and, as a residence, offers attractions rarely to be met with. The whole of the elegant and appropriate furniture may be purchased with the estate, and the valuable timber and fixtures will be included in the purchase, if preferred. —May be viewed fourteen days prior to the sale (or at any time by special order), and particulars had at the hotels at Bishops Stortford, Ware, Hoddesden and Hertford; of Messrs Smith and Alliston, Solicitors, 4, Warnford-court, Throgmorton-street; at the Mart; and of Messrs Hoggart, Norton, and Trist, 62, Old Broad-street, Royal Exchange.

CHISELHURST-COMMON, KENT.—Valuable Freehold Estates, comprising a delightful Residence, with Offices, Pleasure Grounds and Meadow Land (with possession), the Crown Public-house, and Five Cottages adjoining.

MESSRS. HOGGART, NORTON, and TRIST have received instructions to offer for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, on FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, (instead of the 13th, as previously advertised), at Twelve, the following valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, viz:—Lot 1. A very compact gentleman's Residence, known as Meyrick's, on Chiselhurst-common near Bromley, Kent, commanding extensive and picturesque views of the surrounding lovely country, in a perfect state of repair, and containing two servants' bed rooms and a man's room, with secondary staircase, five other sleeping apartments, two dressing rooms, elegant drawing and dining rooms, breakfast-parlour, morning-room, spacious entrance-hall and landing, water closet, very complete domestic offices, and every accommodation for a moderate establishment with carriage yard, double coach house, four stall stable, harness-room, loft, &c. and an abundance of pure spring water. The pleasure-grounds (in which is a conservatory) are beautifully laid out in lawn and flower gardens filled with choice plants, and adorned with beautiful American and other flowering shrubs, and some fine timber, two walled productive kitchen-gardens, small yard, piggeries, cow-house, ice house, and other offices, and a very valuable enclosure of rich meadow land, the whole containing about five acres; also a cottage and garden adjoining, now let off at 8l. per annum. Lot 2. The valuable Freehold Public-house, known as the Crown, at Chiselhurst common, with yard, stabling, gardens, &c. let to Messrs Nichol and Co. upon lease at a net rent of 50l. per annum. Lot 3. A Freehold Property, adjoining lot 2, comprising four cottages, with yards and gardens, in the occupation of yearly tenants, at rents amounting together to 22l. per annum.—May be viewed, and particulars with cards, had at the White Hart, Bromley; at the Mart; of Messrs. J. H. and G. Lake, Solicitors, 10, New-square, Lincoln's-inn; and of Messrs. Hoggart, Norton, and Trist, 62, Old Broad-street, Royal Exchange.

HIGHGATE-HILL.—Winchester hall, with its beautiful pleasure grounds, productive gardens, and rich meadow land.

MESSRS. HOGGART, NORTON, and TRIST have received instructions to offer for SALE by AUCTION at the MART, on FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, at Twelve (unless an acceptable offer should be previously made by private contract), a very valuable PROPERTY, nearly equal in value to freehold, known as Winchester hall, delightfully situate on Highgate hill, commanding views of great extent and beauty, and about five miles from the metropolis. It comprises a capital and substantial mansion, placed in its own grounds, approached by a carriage drive, and entirely secluded from the high-road. It contains five principal bed chambers, dressing room, and water-closet, six secondary bed-chambers, and convenient closets, handsome entrance hall, 31 feet by 25 feet; dining-room, 29 feet by 16 feet, and drawing room, 25 feet 6 by 21 feet each, with bay-windows opening to the lawn; library, and store-room; the domestic offices include kitchen, butler's and footman's pantries, scullery, excellent laundry, larder, cool dairy, and capital wine, beer, and coal cellars, the whole amply supplied with fine spring water; detached double coach house, stabling for three horses, and loose box, with three servants' rooms and lofts over, cart shed, wood house, drying-ground, piggeries, tool-house, and a variety of useful out-buildings, a productive kitchen-garden, enclosed by lofty walls, and hot house, extensive pleasure grounds, tastefully laid out in lawn, ornamented with cedars, American shrubs, and luxuriant evergreens, terrace walk, ornamental summer house, greenhouse, two cottages, and an enclosure of park like meadow, the whole containing about six acres, and forming a most complete and desirable property. Held of the manor of Hornsey, and subject to a small fine certain of only a few shillings.—May be viewed by cards, and particulars had of Messrs. Rutter and Thorn..n, Solicitors, 4, Ely place, Holborn; at the Mart; and of Messrs. Hoggart, Norton, and Trist, 62, Old Broad street, Royal Exchange.

HAMPSHIRE.—Valuable Freehold Farm, in the parish of Hawkley, together with a Rent Charge in lieu of tithes.

MESSRS. HOGGART, NORTON, and TRIST have received instructions from the Devisees in Trust under the will of the late Wm. Postlethwaite, esq. to offer for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, on FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER the 10th (instead of August 27th, as previously advertised), at Twelve o'clock, a valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, called Standfast Farm, situate in the parish of Hawkley, two miles from the romantic village of Selbourne, seven from Petersfield, five from the Alton and nineteen from the Farnborough Railway Stations, on the South-Western Railway, in the county of Hants, comprising 67 acres of useful arable, meadow, hop, and wood land, with a double cottage and garden, barn, hop, oast, stabling, yard, and other buildings; also a rent charge in lieu of tithes, arising from about 25 acres of land, in the parish of Hawkley.—May be viewed, and particulars, with plans had of J. J. Tourle, Esq. Solicitor, 12, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane; at the Mart; and of Messrs Hoggart, Norton, and Trist, 62, Old Broad-street, Royal Exchange.

SUSSEX.—A valuable Freehold Rent-charge, in lieu of tithes commuted at 30l. 10s. per annum, the Lay Rectory of Barnham, and several Enclosures of valuable Freehold Land.

MESSRS. HOGGART, NORTON, and TRIST have received instructions to offer for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, on FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 10 (instead of August 13th, as previously advertised), at Twelve o'clock, in Fifteen Lots (unless an acceptable offer should be previously made for the whole by private contract), the very valuable FREEHOLD ESTATE, distinguished as Foley House, for many years the residence of the late Mrs Tyssen, delightfully situate about a mile from the flourishing town of Maidstone, on the roads to Boxley, Debtly, and Sittingbourne, and eight miles from Rochester, the most healthful and beautiful part of the county of Kent; comprising a capital and substantial family residence, of uniform elevation, containing numerous bed chambers of good proportions, and dressing-rooms, handsome drawing and dining rooms, each 23 feet by 19 feet, and 12 feet high, library, entrance-hall, water closets, servants' hall, and all requisite domestic offices, with laundry, washhouse, dairy, stabling for six horses, loose box, double coach-house, and detached offices of every description; the whole abundantly supplied with pure spring water. The residence stands on a rising ground, facing the south, in the midst of the beautifully undulated and highly picturesque park like land, ornamented with stately timber, and commanding splendid views of Lord Romney's park, the distant hills, and the surrounding lovely country, the plantations and shrubberies adjoining forming secluded groves, intersected with dry pleasure walks, and embracing at all points, views of great variety and extent. Also pleasure garden, conservatory, hot and forcing houses, large and highly productive kitchen gardens, orchard, and well-arranged farm buildings at the rear, together with several enclosures of very productive arable, ... woodland ... a cottage residence and gardens; two fine orchards filled with thriving fruit trees, and four cottages ... in different parts of the estate, the whole property comprising about ... acres, by far the greater portion of which is now available for building purposes, there being frontages to the various roads of many thousand feet in extent, and presenting singularly valuable and very important sites for the erection of villas, the soil being perfectly dry, and the water excellent. The residence and most beautiful part of the park and land, with the pleasure grounds, plantations, &c. to the extent of about sixty acres and four cottages, will form the first lot; and the remainder of the property, with the cottages thereon, will be subdivided into lots varying in extent from two to five acres. May be viewed and particulars had of Chester Cruston, Esq. Solicitor, 1, Winchester buildings, Great Winchester street, City; of Messrs Ashurst and Whi... Maidstone, at the hotels at Maidstone, Roch... ...gbourne; at the Mart, and of Messrs Hoggart, N... Trist, 62, Old Broad street, Royal Exchange.

KENT.—The Lossen... Estate, with a very comfortable Residence, Offices, Gar... and 211 acres of first-rate Land, of the value of about 450l.

MESSRS. HOGGART, NORTON, and TRIST have received instructions to offer for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, ...ly ... SEPTEMBER, the LOSSENHAM ESTATE, a very valuable freehold property, land-tax redeemed, situate in the parish of Newenden, five miles from Tenterden, ten from Rye, and fo... ...en from Staplehurst, in a fine district of the county of Kent, comprising a desirable family residence, placed on an elevated spot and commanding a rich view of the surrounding country. It is approached by an entrance-lodge, through an avenue of trees, and contains four principal bed-rooms, three servants rooms, and water-closet, entrance-hall, dining, drawing, and breakfast rooms, attached and detached offices well supplied with water, coach house, stabling, walled gardens, and suitable agricultural buildings, together with several enclosures of land lying well together, of which ... acres are in rich pasture, and 52 acres in arable. To any gentleman desirous of combining occupation with investment this estate p... ...opportunity rarely to be met with. —May be viewed, and particulars shortly had of John Sen..., Esq. Solicitor, Tenterden; of Messrs. Willis and Neve, Solicitors, Cranbrook; at the George, Rye; at the Auction Mart; and of Messrs. Hoggart, Norton, and Trist, 62, Old Broad-street, Royal Exchange.

COTTENHAM PARK ESTATE, comprising a Mansion and 250 ... Building Land at Wimbledon, Surrey.

MESSRS. HOGGART, NORTON, and TRIST have received instructions to offer for SALE by AUCTION, in lots, at the MART, on FRIDAY, OCTOBER 8 at Twelve (unless previously disposed of by private contract), COTTENHAM PARK, a singularly compact and important Freehold Estate, tithe free and land tax redeemed, situate close to the extensive and picturesque common of Wimbledon. It has a south aspect, the views are rich and varied in the extreme, the South Downs and the sea off Shoreham being visible from the mansion, the building frontage next to the high road extends upwards of a mile and a half, the soil is dry and healthy, and the park and grounds abound with the finest timber and shrubs. This property was the residence of the late Earl of Durham, from whom it passed to the Earl of Cottenham and is in the immediate vicinity of the estates of the Dukes of Cambridge and Somerset. Wimbledon appears to have been selected by the nobility and aristocracy as the favourite place of residence nearest London, in consequence of its extreme beauty and the great facility with which the metropolis can be reached. The west end of the town is only seven miles from the park, which is approached by two lines of railway, with water communication by steamer every half-hour to the City. More detailed advertisements will shortly appear. Plans and particulars of sale are in course of preparation, and, in the mean time, any additional information may be obtained on application to Messrs. Hoggart, Norton, and Trist, 62, Old Broad-street, Royal Exchange.

...ss Premises, for Occupation or Investment, without reserve.

MESSRS. HAMMOND and EILOART will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on FRIDAY, AUGUST 27, at Twelve, the BENEFICIAL INTEREST in the LEASE of No. 25, Paddington-street, Marylebone, held for twenty-one years, at 4l. 10s. per annum ground rent, and let to a respectable tenant for the whole term, less one quarter, at 58l. per annum. —Particulars and conditions of sale to be had of Messrs. Smith and Son, Solicitors, 16, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury; at the Mart; and Auction Offices, 28, Chancery-lane.

Secure Investments.—Tottenham-court-road, and George-street, Euston-square.

MR. T. TIMS will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, by order of the Executors, the very commodious PREMISES, with attractive shop, being No. 125, Tottenham-court-road, situate in the best part of that most important thoroughfare, held for a term whereof twenty-two years are unexpired, at a ground-rent of only 5½ guineas, and let upon lease, at 100l. per annum: the lessee may be treated with for possession. Also, in lots, THREE capital DWELLING-HOUSES and a compact Measuage, with SHOP, Nos. 53, 54, 55, 55A, George-street, Euston-square, forming a compact estate, in the valuable locality of the great railway terminus, the London University, and the Hampstead and New Roads; Nos. 53 and 54 are let to very respectable tenants, at 50l. a year each, and will be sold free of ground-rent; No. 55 is at present in hand, and, with the shop adjoining, will be subject to a ground-rent of only 1l. per annum. They are held for a term, whereof about fifty-eight years are unexpired. May be viewed by permission of the tenants.—Particulars ten days prior to the sale, at the Auction Mart; at the offices of Messrs. VAN SANDAU and CUMMING, Solicitors, 27, King-street, Cheapside; and of the Auctioneer, 63, Upper Charlotte street, Fitzroy-square.

Substantial Freehold Residences and Votes for Middlesex.—Regent square.

MR. T. TIMS will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, at Twelve, TWO very superior twelve roomed RESIDENCES, with gardens, situate and being Nos. 32 and 33, in the most desirable part of Regent-square, in the parish of St. Pancras, and county of Middlesex. They are in excellent repair. No. 32 is let to a most responsible tenant, at 75l. per annum; No. 33 is in hand, and quite fit for immediate occupation.—May be viewed by permission. Particulars on the premises; at the Auction Mart; at the offices of W. Batty, Esq. Solicitor, 26, Charles street, St. James's; and of Mr. Tims, 63, Upper Charlotte street, Fitzroy square.

Long Leasehold Investments, producing a profitable rental of more than 500l. a year.

MR. JOHN DAWSON is instructed by the Executors of the late Mrs Hodges to SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on TUESDAY, AUGUST 31, at Twelve, profitable LONG LEASEHOLD INTERESTS in residences and premises, situate respectively in Baker-street, Portman-square; Grove-place, Lisson-grove; Cumberland terrace, Regent's park; Tavistock-square; Ely place, Holborn; Canterbury-place; and the New-cut, Lambeth.—Detailed particulars may shortly be had, at the Mart; of Edward J. Kerly, Esq. 1, Guildhall-chambers, Basinghall-street; and at Mr. John Dawson's Auction and Land Offices, Marlborough-chambers, 49, Pall-mall.

TO LAND SOCIETIES, BUILDERS, &c.—An important Freehold Estate, contiguous to the Wimbledon Station on the South-Western Railway, bounded by the high road, with unusual adaptation for division into building lots.

MR. JOHN DAWSON will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on TUESDAY, AUGUST 31, at Twelve (unless a liberal offer should be made in the meantime), thirty-two acres of FREEHOLD LAND, bounded on two sides, and a considerable portion of a third side, by the public road from Wimbledon to Merton, and from Merton to London. The form of the estate invites to, and is adapted for, any extent of subdivision by intersecting roads; the immediate proximity to the railway station, twenty minutes from London, with the inducements held out by the South-Western Company to builders of moderate-sized houses, render this perhaps the most eligible and tempting opportunity for a building speculation that has been or can be offered to the public.—Plans and particulars are preparing, and may shortly be had at the Mart, and at Mr. J. Dawson's Auction and Land Offices, 49, Pall mall, and Kingston, Surrey.

Important Estates in the county of Hants, comprising a mansion-house and park, several desirable farms, and woodlands, altogether about 3,500 acres.

MESSRS. WINSTANLEY will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, London, on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, in Lots, pursuant to an order of the High Court of Chancery, made in a cause of Rodney v. Rodney, with the approbation of James William Farrer, esq. one of the Masters of the Court, the extensive and valuable ESTATES of George Lord Rodney, deceased, situate at Alresford and elsewhere, in the county of Hants. The property consists of the mansion at Alresford, various farms, and some woodlands, containing altogether about 3,500 acres, partly freehold and copyhold tenure, and the remainder held under leases for two lives from the Bishop of Winchester. Also the reversion in fee expectant on the decease without issue of a person aged sixty-three, and a bachelor, to about 730 acres of freehold and copyhold land, in the parishes of Long Sutton and Ropley, in the county of Hants. The farms are let to most respectable tenants, and the woodlands are in hand.—Particulars and conditions of sale may be obtained gratis at the Master's office, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane; of Messrs. Young and Vallings, Solicitors, St. Mildred's-court, Poultry; of Messrs. Boodle and Partington, 9, Davies-street, Berkeley-square; of J. B. Lowndes, Esq. 2, New-inn, Strand; of Messrs. Karslake, Crealock, and Karslake, 4, Regent-street; of Messrs. Dunn, Hopkins, Carter, and Blackmore, of Alresford; of Messrs. Osborn and Garrett, Surveyors, Fareham, Hants; of Messrs. Winstanley, Paternoster-row; and at the place of sale.

IN KENT.

MR. TOOTELL is favoured with instructions to submit to public COMPETITION, at the MART, near the Bank of England, London, on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25, at Twelve, in one lot, that important Freehold Property, the STANDEN-STREET ESTATE, situate in the parishes of Sandhurst and Benenden, Kent, two miles from Hemsted Park, the seat of T. L. Hodges, esq. four miles from the capital market town of Cranbrook, five miles from Tenterden, ten miles from the Staplehurst station of the Dover Railway, three miles from Hawkhurst, and about a mile on the north side of the Tonbridge and Rye turnpike-road. It comprises two excellent farms, situate amidst the beautiful scenery of this part of the county; in extent 256 acres, most conveniently divided for cultivation, ornamentally timbered, and the judicious outlay recently made is shown in the high and flourishing state of cultivation, in which the estate may now be viewed; 26 acres are thriving hop land, free from the extraordinary tithe. 30 acres meadow and marsh land (the latter abutting on the navigable river Rother), 73 acres of wood, tithe free, 114 acres of arable, and 13 of orchard and fruit land. There are two farm-houses, and very superior farm-buildings, and eleven labourers' cottages, with good gardens. The estate may be viewed at any time by applying to Mr. Harden and Mr. Drury, the present tenants, whose leases expire at Michaelmas next. Descriptive particulars, conditions, and plans may be had at the Bull Inns, at Rolvenden and Benenden; George, Rye; Woolpack, Tenterden; Railway Hotel, Staplehurst; Rose and Crown, Tunbridge; Shakspeare Hotel, Dover; Sussex Hotel, Tunbridge-wells; the Mart, London; of Messrs. Hughes, Kearsey, and Masterman, 17, Bucklersbury, London; and of Mr. Tootell, Land Agent, Maidstone.

THE LATE COLONIAL CHIEF JUSTICE BENT.

(We give a more extended notice of the late Colonial Chief Justice Bent than that of last week).

Jeffrey Hart Bent, late Chief Justice of British Guiana, for nearly forty years, occupied the judicial bench in several of our colonies, and who had the honour of holding the commission of four successive sovereigns. So great a length of service in our colonies is, we believe, without precedent, and Mr. Bent was, we understand, at the time of his death, the only judge, either at home or abroad, whose judicial career dated from the reign of George the Third. Chief Justice Bent was the eldest son of Robert Bent, esq. a descendant of a very ancient Lancashire family—who, at one period of his life, was intimately and politically connected with Mr. Fox and the leading members of the Whig party, to which party his son continued attached during his life. Chief Justice Bent took a respectable degree at Cambridge, and was called to the Bar by the Society of the Middle Temple, in 1806. His first judicial appointment was in 1814, when he was sent out to New South Wales as chief justice upon the application for assistance from his brother, Ellis Bent, esq. then judge-advocate, and the sole judicial officer in that colony. Upon these two brothers devolved the entire task of modelling the judicial system of the then infant colony; and to Mr. Ellis Bent must be attributed the credit of its first legal constitution. Mr. Ellis Bent finally sank under the labours he had to undergo, and the difficulties he had to encounter; and, upon his death, his brother, the Chief Justice, returned home. In 1819, or 1820, Mr. Bent was appointed Chief Justice of Grenada, and from that period to the time of his death, with the exception of two years' leave of absence, he continued to reside in the West Indies, in the exercise of his high legal functions. During this lengthened period of thirty-two years, he established for himself, throughout the entire of our West India colonies, the very highest reputation as a sound constitutional lawyer and an independent and upright judge. While Chief Justice of Grenada, he carried out many useful legal reforms, and acquired great and deserved popularity from the stand he made against the illegal interference of the governor and council with the liberty of the subject and the independence of the Bench. He was, in consequence, suspended by the then governor. After a lapse of three years, and a lengthened investigation before the Privy Council, the Chief Justice's conduct was fully vindicated and approved of, and the colonial authorities were directed to reinstate him, and pay the arrears of his salary, amounting to 3,000*l*.

The former part of the order was complied with—the latter was wholly disregarded, and Mr. Bent was never able to recover his salary. Mr. Bent was subsequently appointed Chief Justice of St. Lucia. He was here called upon to administer the old French law, in which he proved himself equally proficient as in the more familiar law of his own country, as practised in Grenada. During his judicature in St. Lucia, Mr. Bent introduced many useful practical reforms in the administrative portions of the law, which still remain in force in that colony. Mr. Bent next, at the special request of the then Colonial Secretary, accepted the post of first Puisne Judge of Trinidad. Here he came in contact with the Spanish law, which was in force in that island, and here he shewed himself equally at home, as he had formerly been in the French law. In 1836, he was finally appointed Chief Justice of British Guiana, where he continued till his lamented death. This colony is governed by the Roman Dutch code. The high opinion entertained of Mr. Bent in that colony, the scene of his last labours, is strongly expressed by the local papers, which speak of him both as a man and a judge in terms of the highest praise. We have here given a sketch of a judicial career, which we feel we are justified in terming one without precedent—a career which lasted nearly forty years, under four sovereigns, during which justice had to be administered under three distinct codes, and in three different languages. Had such a career been run at home, Mr. Bent would have been promoted to the highest distinction the sovereign could have bestowed—he would have secured to himself an honourable retirement in his old age, and, at his death, he would have been accompanied to his rest by the respect and deep regret of a grateful country. We here cannot but pause to ask, why was a man of this character unrewarded? why were services so eminent neglected? and still more, why were men whose services in the colonies were so far inferior to his, promoted before him? We fear we must answer these questions by stating, it is because independence of character and true uprightness of conduct are not respected in the colonies, and because the only channel to Royal favour at home is through that of the governors abroad, which can seldom be gained but by servility and a surrender of all honourable independence. In conclusion, we may state that the late Chief Justice Bent was uncle to our respected diocesan—his lordship's father, the Honourable Charles Knox, late Archdeacon of Armagh, having married the sister of the subject of this notice. Belfast Mercury.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SES- SION of 1852. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 7s 6d. cloth, 9s. half calf; 10s calf.

Note.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a single volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850, price 7s. 6d. and 1851, price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.
Municipal Corporations Acts Amendment Act.
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term).
Copyright Amendment Act.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BRIBERY AT ELECTIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—I quite agree with the view your correspondent "A. P." takes of the demoralising effects consequent on publicans having the exercise of the suffrage. For whoever has attended either electors' or non-electors' meetings, must have been struck with the artful way by which publicans elude a promise to vote until the very last moment, and thus, by their coquetting with both parties no inconsiderable amount of money is spent in convincing (lege bribing) the immaculates, hesitating and conscientious publicans and patriots.

But how is such a measure as the disfranchisement of a great number of voters, whom, though all condemn, yet none dare openly to accuse, to be brought about? It would clearly be an invidious office for an independent member to move for an inquiry into the conduct of past elections in their relation to beer-sellers, and, upon receiving the report (for who can doubt what that report would be?) bring in a scheme for disfranchising these vultures of an election. For, in case of a defeat, the unhappy and rash disturber of "old customs," would subside into "some village Hampden"—appreciated truly by the honest-hearted burgesses, but rejected on all hands through the power of the beer-sellers, with whose charter he (heu! miserabile puer!) had the temerity to interfere.

Thus are the people brutalised—ill feeling is encouraged—bribery (if called by its right name) carried on wholesale and thus are the candidates themselves mercilessly plucked.

I invite your attention, Mr. Editor, to this subject, for "purity of election" is a desideratum worthy of the attempts of all. I have had no little experience of the way in which these publicans carry on their election trade, and I feel satisfied that until the ulcer is entirely cut out, bribery Acts, election petitions, cross-examinations, and parliamentary commissions, will be of no avail to carry out the wished-for reform. At present when reflecting upon what has been done towards rooting out, or even mitigating, the corrupt practices at elections, one is led to exclaim sorrowfully, and from conviction—Cui bono?

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

NOTICES OF NEW LAW BOOKS.

The New Practice of the Court of Chancery, as regulated by the Acts for the Improvement of the Jurisdiction of Equity, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, for Abolishing the Masters' Office, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, and for Relief of the Suitors, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87: with Introduction, Notes, the Acts, Orders, and a copious Index. By JAMES O'DOWD, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. London: Butterworths.

MOST truly does the author remark at the commencement of his introduction to this useful volume, that "the changes effected in the practice and procedure of the Court of Chancery by the Acts of the closing Session of the late Parliament, exceed in magnitude and importance every antecedent endeavour to amend the administration of justice in our Courts of Equity." This very sentence is an earnest that the writer approaches his task of elucidating the new law, and tracing out the future practice, with a due sense of the importance of the duty he has undertaken. After a careful examination of his book, we can conscientiously say of it, that though the earliest in the field, its completeness is nevertheless surprising. Everywhere we find evidence that the author watched closely the passage of these Acts through Parliament, and kept himself au courant with the changes therein worked; for otherwise it would have been impossible in the interval which has since elapsed to master so completely the principles and details of these statutes. The work recommends itself by clearness, method, and comprehensiveness. A fund of useful learning is brought to bear upon the successive enactments of the new law, which, never cumbersome or loosely applied, illustrates the changes, and elucidates whatever appears doubtful or obscure in its provisions. In an introduction of some fourteen pages, the author reviews the course of Chancery Reform during the past thirty years, giving due credit to Sir SAMUEL ROMILLY, the Lord Chancellors COTTENHAM, TRURO, and ST. LEONARDS; to the Chancery Commissioners, the Solicitor-General, and the present Master of the Rolls, to the last of whom his book is dedicated. He then proceeds to treat successively of the new practice under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, under the following titles—"The Bill, the Answer, the Evidence, Parties, Abatement." He then takes up the Act for abolishing the Masters' Office, states its operation, describes the general class of business to be performed before a Judge in chambers, and the routine of practice. Lastly, he reviews the statute for the relief of suitors in Chancery, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 87. This is followed by the Acts themselves. A copious index, of ready reference, gives additional value to a work which is not a mere reprint of the Acts, with a few meagre notes, but a well-digested, comprehensive, and luminous treatise on these important statutes. As the book is one calculated to be of great practical service to the Profession, we cordially wish it the success it well deserves, and will, no doubt command.

NECROLOGY OF LEGISLATORS, MAGISTRATES, AND LAWYERS.

THE EARL OF FALMOUTH.—We regret to announce the demise of the Earl of Falmouth, who expired at a quarter past nine, a.m. on Tuesday last, at his residence in St. James's-square, after a painful illness of more than six months' duration. The deceased George Boscawen, Earl of Falmouth, Viscount Falmouth and Baron of Boscawen Rose, in the county of Cornwall, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, was only son of Edward (the first earl), and was born 8th of July, 1811. The late peer was for a short time in the House of Commons, being returned for the eastern division of the county of Cornwall in July, 1841, but his father dying in December the same year he succeeded to the earldom. The deceased peer is succeeded as Viscount Falmouth, by his uncle, the Hon. and Rev. John Evelyn Boscawen, prebendary of Canterbury, who will inherit the large family estates in Cornwall. The noble and reverend peer was second son of the third viscount, and was born 11th of April, 1790, and married 4th of May, 1814, Catherine Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Mr. Arthur Annesley (the late Viscount Vallentin), by whom his lordship has a numerous family. The late earl was nephew of the Right. Hon. Geo. Bankes, and cousin of Baroness Le Despencer, who, with several other families of rank, are placed in mourning.

MR. O'DOWD'S NEW CHANCERY PRACTICE, as regulated by the Statutes and Orders of 1852, and including the Orders of August, is now ready for delivery, price 5s. 6d. boards.

—"The work recommends itself by clearness, method, and comprehensiveness. A fund of useful learning is brought to bear upon the successive enactments of the new law, which, never cumbrous or loosely applied, illustrates the changes, and elucidates whatever appears doubtful or obscure in its provisions. An index of ready reference gives additional value to a work, not merely a reprint of the Acts, with a few meagre notes, but a well digested, comprehensive, and luminous treatise on these important statutes."—The Law Times.

DEVONSHIRE, near SOUTH MOLTON.—Valuable Freehold Estate.

MR. W. H. HEWITT will SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, London, on THURSDAY, OCTOBER the 14th 1852, at Twelve o'clock, in one lot, all that highly desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE, and celebrated Grazing, Dairy and Sheep Farm, called Kitcott Barton, situate in the parish of Romansleigh, near South Molton, in the county of Devon, consisting of a convenient farm-house, with a most complete range of outbuildings and farm appendages, all in thorough repair, and about [illegible] acres of valuable water meadow, and rich pasture arable and orchard land, all within a ring fence. This estate is distant about sixteen miles from Tiverton; five miles from South Molton, on the new turnpike road; and about the same distance from the Copplestone Station, on the North Devon Railway. It is in the midst of a fine sporting country and beautiful scenery, and is approached in every direction by good roads. The attention of capitalists is directed to this property, which presents a rare opportunity either for occupation or investment, and is also well adapted for the erection of a country seat. Full printed particulars with lithographic plans, may be had twenty one days before the day of sale, at the Fortescue Arms, Barnstaple; the Three Cup Hotel, Tiverton; the George Hotel, at South Molton; at the Auction Mart; also of the Auctioneer, at his Offices, 12, Hart-street, Bloomsbury square, London; at Rutter's Reading-room Shaftesbury; and at the Office of J. Farley Rutter, Solicitor, Shaftesbury.

Particulars may be had at the Auction Mart, London; of Messrs. Bower and Son, Solicitors, 46, Chancery lane (the Vendor's Solicitors); of Mr. A. Russell, Solicitor, Dartford; of Isaac Nicholson, Esq. Basinghall-street, London; of Mr. G. Colquhoun, Solicitor, Woolwich; and of the Auctioneer, Brewer-street, Woolwich.

PROCEEDINGS OF LAW SOCIETIES.

LAW ASSOCIATION FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE WIDOWS AND FAMILIES OF PROFESSIONAL MEN.

"Report of the Board of Directors to the Annual General Court, Tuesday, May 11, 1852. J. O. Jones, Esq. in the Chair.

"The Directors have the satisfaction, on the present occasion, to announce to the members at large a continuance of the prosperity of the Association.

"During the year the Three per Cent. Reduced Annuities belonging to the Association have been transposed into Three and a quarter per Cents. thus placing the whole funded property in that stock. The Directors have been enabled to make a further purchase of 301*l*. 18s. 6d. during the year, and thereby the amount has reached the sum of 21,188*l*. 2s. 6d. Three and a quarter per Cents. yielding an income of 688*l*. besides annual subscriptions amounting to 501*l*. 18s.

"In addition to this annual income the directors are much gratified at having to report the following donations, namely:—100*l*. from Sir Charles Ogle and H. Denton, esq. the executors of the late Mrs. Anna Maria Ogle, in the benevolent exercise of a discretion which that lady had confided to them; 21*l*. from Sir C. M. Clarke, bart.; and 5*l*. 5s. from Mr. Charles Sweeting.

Of the handsome donation spontaneously bestowed by Sir Charles Clarke, the society has peculiar reason to be proud, as a substantial proof that its proceedings are sanctioned by distinguished approval beyond the limits of the Legal Profession.

"The sum of 21*l*. 7s. has been received from the estate of the late Mr. Joseph Roberts, of Queen-square, in part payment of a reversionary legacy of 100*l*. left by him to the Association many years since.

"The directors have to report that no new case of the primary class has come before them during the year; and that it is now three years since any application of that description was made.

"In one instance during the year, the widow of a member has received an additional grant of 50*l*. to assist her in releasing her furniture from the claims of her late husband's creditors, some of them agreeing to give up their share of the valuation. And in another case the Board have felt it to be their duty, as stewards of the funds placed at their disposal, to reduce the allowance, in consequence of the widow's means from other sources being improved.

"The outlay in this branch of relief has been 845*l*.

"The sum voted at the last annual meeting for the benefit of non-members' widows and families was 200*l*. the whole of which has been applied in cases of that description; and the directors venture to recommend that a similar grant be made on the present occasion.

"The directors have had under their consideration the subject of the annual subscriptions, and on the report of a committee appointed to inquire into the usual mode of collection, some new regulations are now submitted to the general meeting for approval, having for their object a more convenient system of collection, and the more equal distribution of the income of the Association over the financial year.

"Since the last general meeting, eleven new members have been elected; and the directors trust that every member will use his best endeavours to promote the success of the charity, by inducing his professional friends to manifest a similar concern for its welfare to that which has been found even out of the Profession.

By order of the Board,
"John Murray, Secretary."

NECROLOGY

G. R. PORTER, ESQ.

We regret to have to record the death of Mr. G. R. Porter, Secretary to the Board of Trade. The deceased gentleman entered the office as chief of the Statistical Department at a salary of 1,000*l*. a year. To this was added, under the presidency of the Marquis Dalhousie, the railway department of the office, with an increase of salary of 200*l*. a year. On the election of Mr Macgregor as a member of the House of Commons, and the resignation of his office in the Board of Trade, Mr. Porter was appointed one of the joint secretaries, in his room, at a salary of 1,500*l*. a year. The deceased gentleman died at Tonbridge Wells. His disease was brought on by not taking sufficient exercise, or allowing himself sufficient relaxation from the duties of his office. His loss will be sensibly and widely felt. The integrity of the deceased, his elegant and varied accomplishments, and his amiable disposition, conspired to render him a cherished ornament of a wide social circle. His "Progress of the Nation," and other contributions in statistical literature, had elevated him to the rank of an authority in discussions on most social and economical questions; and his indefatigable industry, combined with his amenity, intelligence, and knowledge, made him a public servant of the very first class. It is literally true that Mr. Porter worked himself to death. A colleague used playfully to allege that Porter pretended to avail himself of the holidays allowed in the office, but that, if strict search were made, he would doubtless be found hid in some obscure nook, working away as usual. In no circumstances would it be easy to fill up the vacancy occasioned by the loss of such a man.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS

ADJUDICATION STAMPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

Sir,—A letter signed "J. B." appeared in your paper of the 24th July last, censuring the decision of the Commissioners of Stamps on a case stated by your correspondent.

You likewise published on the 7th of August a reply to "J. B.'s" letter, signed "W. J." doubting the correctness of the Commissioners' decision.

I have not observed that any further notice has been taken of the case by any of your correspondents. It is, no doubt, a very hard case, particularly as the property appears to be of small value; but thinking the Commissioners are right in their adjudication, for [illegible] following reasons, perhaps you will afford [illegible] mall space in your next number.

The Court of Q. B. in Reg. v. Eton College, 8 Q.B. Rep. 526, decided that in a case where five owners of copyhold, as tenants in common, agreed to sell to a purchaser at an entire price for the whole property, one stamp only was payable upon the surrender, but that the purchaser must take admission to each of the five estates in common separately, and that a separate stamp was payable for each admittance. Thus, on the authority of that case, independently of the Stamp Acts, the Commissioners are right in adjudicating that a separate stamp is payable for each admittance.

With respect to the admission of the two heirs in moieties, it seems to me that the Commissioners are also right in their adjudication. There are two distinct admissions: if the copies of court-roll were made out separately, each would, of course, require a stamp; and the including both admissions in one copy or memorandum would seem to make no difference, as the Stamp Acts provide that where more than one surrender or admittance, or the memorandum thereof, shall be contained on the same piece of vellum, paper, or parchment, whether upon a sale, mortgage, or other occasion, the proper duty shall be paid in respect to each surrender and each admittance.

The quotation from the recent Stamp Act, given in the letter of your correspondent "W. J." does not embrace quite enough. It is certainly accurate as far as it goes; but those words in the Act refer only to instruments relating to admissions upon the sale [illegible] mortgage of estates.

Any admittance not upon a sale or mortgage is still liable to a 1*l*. stamp where the yearly value of the estate shall exceed 20s. (I presume the case in question was not a sale. In "J. B.'s" letter a consideration of 5*l*. is stated to have been paid to one of the heirs; but I imagine this to be a misprint for 5s. a merely nominal sum, the same as paid to the other heir.)

I observe in your paper of August 14th the communication of Messrs. Sharp, Harrison, and Sharp, that the Commissioners had decided the conveyance of a house subject to a mortgage for 220*l*. in consideration of an annuity of 16s. per week was sufficiently stamped with a 35s. stamp. Your correspondents do not state whether the conveyance contains a stipulation that the purchaser shall pay off the mortgage. If so, it seems to me that the deed would have been sufficiently stamped with an ad valorem stamp of 22s. 6d.; for the 220*l*. was part of the consideration (see The Marquis of Chandos v. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue, reported in the Law Times some few months since), and the annuity of 16s. being, I presume, for life, or other uncertain period, required no ad valorem stamp. I should like the opinion of some of your correspondents on this point.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

JOURNAL OF PROPERTY.

Public Sales.

Important Sale of Freehold Estates in the Isle of Sheppy.—Messrs. Farebrother, Clark and Lye sold, at the Royal Hotel, Sheerness, on Thursday and Friday last, the following estates:—The manors of Warden and Minster, a marine residence, called Warden Court, and about 240 acres of land; the coast-guard station at Warden Point; the Smack public-house; several compact farms, with farm residences; the coast-guard station at Hensbrook; the Waterloo and Highlander public-houses in the High-street, Minster; Sheppy Court Residence, and about 96 acres of land, private residences, shops, and cottages; also, ground-rents, amounting to 130*l*. per annum, arising out of houses in the town of Sheerness. The above estates contain together about 1,800 acres, and produce a rental of nearly 2,500*l*. per annum, and were put up for public competition in seventy lots, the whole of which were sold, and realised the sum of 70,800*l*. being over twenty-eight years' purchase. There is certainly here no evidence either of any decline in the value of land, or of any abatement of the desire of capitalists to possess it.

By Messrs. Hoggart, Norton, and Trist, at the Mart, August 27.—The freehold estate of Pishobury-park, Sawbridgeworth, Herts, consisting of mansion, farm-buildings, and 278 acres of land, with possession, land-tax redeemed—18,500*l*.

Freehold and small part copyhold property, known as Winchester Hall, Highgate-hill, with two cottages and six acres of land—5,780*l*.

By Messrs. Hammond and Eiloart, at the Mart.—Freehold premises, No. 8, Took's-court, Chancery-lane, let at 38*l*. per annum—430*l*.

Two cottages, Upper Ann-street, Plumstead, Kent, producing a clear annual rent of 16*l*. 16s. for sixty eight years unexpired—325*l*.

Plot of copyhold ground, Pilgrim's-lane, Hampstead, with greenhouse, &c. let at 20*l*. per annum—255*l*.

Improved ground-rent of 19*l*. 10s. per annum, secured for twenty-five years unexpired upon the White Hart and other premises, Southampton-street, Camberwell—490*l*.

By Mr. E. E. Stone, at Garraway's.—Two houses, Nos. 8 and 9, Gloucester-place, Islington-green, let at 129*l*. 16s. per annum, held for 30 years unexpired at 25*l*.—1,215*l*.

By Mr. Gadsden, at the Mart.—Freehold farm, in the parishes of Fawkham and Horton Kirby, Kent, containing 88 acres—2,500*l*.

Church Down Wood, near preceding, containing 12 acres of freehold land—360*l*.

Freehold residence, at Sutton at-Hone, near Dartford, with 1½ acres of fruit plantation—1,640*l*.

Freehold dwelling-house, baker's shop, and three cottages, at Sutton-at-Hone, let at 20*l*. per annum—550*l*.

Freehold shop, dwelling-house, garden, &c. on the high road near the preceding, let at 20*l*. per annum, also a chapel, let at 8*l*.—635*l*.

Freehold fruit plantation of 3¼ acres, opposite the preceding—740*l*.

Freehold house, No. 7, Howick-place, Vauxhall-bridge road, let at 54*l*. per annum—750*l*.

CONCISE PRECEDENTS in MODERN CONVEYANCING,

with Practical and Explanatory Notes By WILLIAM HUGHES, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, Author of "The Practice of Sales," "Practice of Mortgages," "The New Stamp Act," &c.

CONTENTS.

86. Composition deed between a debtor and his creditors, where a fiat of bankruptcy has been issued against the former, the latter agreeing to accept a dividend of ten shillings in the pound, to be secured by bills of exchange drawn by the debtor and accepted by his surety.
87. General release to a debtor who has compounded with his creditors, and paid the full amount of the composition.
88. Form of an agreement, by a lessee consenting to an apportionment of the rents, and also agreeing to join in the conveyance to a purchaser.
89. Assignment of a leasehold dwelling-house by the original lessee to a purchaser for the residue of an absolute term of ninety-nine years; the lessor and an underlessee also concurring for the purpose of apportioning the rent to be payable in respect of the assigned premises.
90. Mutual covenants by two purchasers of leasehold property, held under one lease for the apportionment of the rents, with mutual powers of distress by way of indemnity
91. Bond of indemnity from a vendor to a purchaser against a mortgage debt which is supposed to have been paid off, but there is no proof of such payment.
92. Bond by a purchaser of leaseholds from the lessee, for indemnifying the latter from the rent and the covenants of the lease
93. Bond from two sureties for the purpose of securing merchants the amount of value of goods supplied to a tradesman, not exceeding 500l.
94. Bond with two sureties for the faithful discharge of the duties of an attorney's clerk.
95. Bond with two sureties for the faithful discharge of the duties of the chief clerk or manager of a business
96. Bond with two sureties for the faithful discharge of the duties of an assistant or shopman
97. Bond of indemnity to a tenant paying rent to his landlord, where the title to the property is disputed
98. Bond by a legatee, on receiving his legacy, to indemnify executors in case of a deficiency of assets
99. Bond by a tenant for life, who has granted a lease for fourteen years, that in case of his decease during the term, the reversioner shall, upon the lessee's request, either confirm the original lease, or grant him a new lease of the premises, to endure as long as the original term, and under the same rent and covenants
100. Bond by a purchaser to a vendor of an estate charged with a legacy of 300l payable to a minor on attaining twenty-one, to secure the due payment of such legacy
101. Bond conditioned for the repayment of the purchase-money, in case one of the vendors, an infant, on attaining twenty-one, should refuse to execute the conveyance
102. Bond from an executor to indemnify a bond debtor who pays off a bond debt due to the testator, such bond having been lost or mislaid
103. Bond with two sureties to secure the balance of a banking account
104. Bond of indemnity to trustees advancing part of trust moneys to husband and wife, which had been limited by marriage settlement, upon trust for the benefit of the husband and wife, and issue of the marriage, with an absolute limitation in favour of the husband upon failure of such issue, no issue having been born, and there being no prospect of any.
105. Form of a post obit bond
106. Defeasance of a warrant of attorney to accompany the foregoing security
107. Post obit bond in consideration of the release of a debt
108. Memorandum of the delivery of a post obit bond, sealed up in an envelope, into the custody of a depositary, to be kept so sealed up during the lifetime of the party upon whose decease it is to become payable, unless sooner redeemed
109. Covenant from bankers not to sue sureties on their bond to secure the balance of the banking account of the principal, until the latter, or his sureties, shall omit to pay the same after three calendar months' notice
110. Bond by an intended husband to the trustees of the marriage settlement, to authorise his wife to make a will of all such personal property as shall devolve upon her during the marriage
111. Bond given by a builder and two sureties for the due performance of a contract to build a dwelling-house according to a specified plan
112. Bond of resignation of a living
113. Form of assent by an executor to the bequest of a leasehold estate
114. Assent to a bequest, and assignment of leasehold property by indenture by an executor to a legatee, the legatee covenanting to indemnify the former against the rents and covenants of the lease
115. Miscellaneous forms of recitals, arranged alphabetically.

Address, "B. A." care of Mr. HEATH, 497, Oxford street, London.

LAW.—A Situation in a Country Office is wanted by the Advertiser, aged 25, who has had considerable experience in Conveyancing, and the general routine of Practice. He is also competent to take the entire management of a County Court Office, and can assist in Magisterial Matters. Salary, 100 Guineas.
Address, "O. I." (No. 494), LAW TIMES Office.

LAW.—An efficient Conveyancing Clerk, who is willing to make himself generally useful, wishes for Employment with or without the assistance of the principal.
Address, "X." 21, LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

LAW.—Wanted, by a Gentleman thoroughly conversant with his Profession, an Engagement in a Country Office of good practice, to take the charge of the Conveyancing Department. Satisfactory references as to respectability and ability afforded. Salary required, 150*l* per annum.
Address, "W. S." Mr. HADLAND'S, Law Stationer, 90, Queen-street, Cheapside.

LAW.—A Solicitor, who has been twenty-three years in practice, and has recently been unfortunate, is desirous of obtaining the Situation of Managing Clerk, in a respectable office in the country. The advertiser is married, and of the age of forty-eight years, he would prefer attending to conveyancing, but is willing to make himself generally useful.
Letters to be addressed to "H. B." care of Messrs. MOURILYAN and ROWSELL, 2, Verulam-buildings, Gray's Inn.

WANTED, in an office of extensive practice in Lancashire, where the business is for the most part conveyancing, an intelligent middle aged Clerk, of good address. He must be competent to draw drafts, undertake the general routine of office duties, and advise with clients in the absence of the principals. No one who has been articled need apply, and unexceptionable references will be required.
Application may be made by letter, addressed to "A. B." care of FRANCIS JAMES, Esq. 1, Brick-court, Temple, London.

LAW.—Wanted immediately, a Clerk, thoroughly competent to make out Bills of Costs for delivery or taxation. No one need apply who has not been similarly occupied in an office of extensive practice in the various departments of the business of a Country Office.
Address (stating age and salary required), Mr GEORGE BRADLEY, Solicitor, 8, Norfolk-street, Manchester.

LAW.—Wanted, in a Solicitor's Office, in a town near Manchester, a Clerk, of good address and steady business-like habits, who can draw and engross deeds, and, in the absence of the principal, confer with and advise clients.
Applications, stating the amount of salary required, to be addressed S. B. to the care of Messrs Meredith, Son, and Co. Law Stationers, King-street, Manchester.

Partnerships, Wanted and for Sale.

LAW PARTNERSHIP.—A Gentleman, admitted in 1848, is desirous of entering into a partnership with a firm of high standing in the country; if either in Lancashire or Cheshire it would be preferred. A premium would be given according to the advantages offered, but a large return for the capital invested is not so much an object as to secure a highly respectable connection. The Advertiser has been in practice since the time of his admission, and during that time has held, and continues to hold, public appointments.
Apply, by letter only, to "M. R." care of Messrs. WATERLOW and SONS, 24, Birchin-lane, London.

LAW.—A Gentleman may be admitted a Partner in a business established in the City upwards of twenty years. Persons applying should be possessed of 1,500*l*.
Apply, by letter, to "B." at Mr. SANDEMAN, Accountant, No. 8, Old Jewry.

ADVOWSON WANTED.—Wanted to Purchase an Advowson, with very early legal possession. Income not less than 350*l*. exclusive of house. Must be in a healthy situation and near railway communication. For such an immediate purchaser can be had by sending full particulars to Mr MURRAY, Land Agent and Surveyor, 32, Great Coram-street, Russell-square.

TO SOLICITORS, ACCOUNTANTS, and OTHERS, having Property for Sale. A Gentleman of the highest respectability, being desirous of extending his business as an Auctioneer, Surveyor, Land and Estate Agent, will give a liberal Commission to Solicitors and others, introducing business of any kind connected with such Profession.
Address "A. B." 32, Great Coram street, Russell square.

THE PRACTICAL STATUTES of the SES-SION of 1852. Edited, with explanatory Notes, copious Index, &c. by WM. PATERSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. Price 9s 6d cloth, 11s. half-calf, 12s. calf.

NOTE.—This work contains all the Statutes verbatim that can ever be required to be used by the English Lawyer, omitting the Irish, Scotch, and Colonial Statutes, so that the entire of the practical new law of the Session is comprised in a small volume, which can be easily carried in the pocket or bag. It is made of further utility to the Profession by a very copious Index.

Like volumes have already appeared containing the Practical Statutes of the Session of 1850, price 7s. 6d. and 1851, price 7s.

The volume for 1849 is in the press, and it is intended to issue the previous Statutes uniform with these, but excluding all the repealed Statutes and parts of Statutes, and adding Notes of all the Cases decided upon the construction of the Statutes contained in them, thus presenting the existing law with the judicial interpretation of it. Thus, the volume for 1849 will contain the New Bankruptcy Act, with all the Cases decided upon its construction.

The following Statutes will be given entire in the volume for 1852:—

Commons Inclosure Act.	Differential Dues Act.
Municipal Corporations Acts Amendment Act.	Property of Lunatics Act.
	Schools Sites Acts Extension Act.
Protection of Inventions Act, 1851 (Extension of Term).	Militia Act.
	Enfranchisement of Copyholds.
Copyright Amendment Act.	County Courts Improvement Act.
Poor Relief Act Continuance Act.	Trustees Act Extension Act.
Loan Societies Act Amendment.	Pharmacy Act.
Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Act.	Corrupt Practices at Elections.
Stock-in-Trade Act.	Excise Summary Proceedings.
Application of Highway Rates to Turnpike Roads Act.	Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues Act.
Property-Tax Continuance Act.	Metropolitan Sewers Act.
Act for Re-assembling Parliament.	Nisi Prius Officers Act.
	Militia Ballots Suspension Act.
Wills Act Amendment Act.	Common Law Procedure Act.
Registration of Births, Deaths, and Marriages Act.	Secretary of Bankrupts' Office Abolition Act.
Apprehension of Deserters from Foreign Ships Act.	Commons Inclosure Acts Extension Act.
Industrial and Provident Societies Act.	Masters in Chancery Abolition.
	County Rates Act.
Protestant Dissenters Act.	Patent Law Amendment Act.
Appointment of Overseers Act.	Metropolis Water Supply Act.
General Board of Health Act (No 1 and No 2).	Metropolitan Burials Act.
	Improvement of the Jurisdiction of Equity Act.

The Acts for Promoting the Public Health, 1848 to 1851. By CUTHBERT W. JOHNSON, Esq. Barrister-at-Law. London: Knight.

MR. JOHNSON has, in this volume, collected the Public Health Acts, to which he has subjoined some practical notes. An appendix contains a great deal of miscellaneous matter relating to sanitary questions, as the reports of the General Board and the evidence of various witnesses as to water and water-rates, the consumption of water, the quantities to be obtained, and the expenses of water-works; list of the districts to which the Public Health Act has been applied; and a large amount of interesting information on the agricultural value of sewage and land drainage water. It is a useful volume, and of wider interest than a mere law book.

We have received a number of pamphlets on legal topics, notice of which has been necessarily deferred until the busy season had passed away. We now briefly submit them to our readers. The Law Magazine for August contains some excellent articles, as usual, and abounds in variety. Among the most learned of them is an essay "on the Sale of Reversionary Interests;" one of the most interesting "a Chapter of Discussions on County Court Matters;" one of the most curious, a paper on "Cromwell's Statutes;" one of the most attractive that on "the Oxford University Commission;" and one of the most useful that on "The Enfranchisement of Copyholds." A ponderous pamphlet, containing the "Proceedings in the Court of Chancery, and before the House of Commons, in relation to the Norfolk Estuary Works," has been published, and a copy sent to us, but we can only announce the fact, caring nothing about the controversy. Mr. A. RIDGWAY, Notary, has published some "Remarks on Notarial Evidence," suggested mainly by evidence that was received in Dr. ACHILLI's case. It is an able collection and review of the law on this subject. Mr. W. COLLINS, Solicitor, has addressed to Lord BROUGHAM a letter "On the Law of Insolvency," in which he recommends various improvements, classified under sixteen heads: some are manifestly such; others are questionable. The same writer has addressed a letter to Lord CAMPBELL, "On the Law administered in Ecclesiastical Courts over Wills and Administrations." He repeats the objections that have been so often raised against the existing system, and suggests various alterations. But there is only one cure, the entire abolition of these anomalous Courts and their absurd jurisdiction. Lord DERBY has promised that this shall be the next great Law Reform. An Index to the Chancery Reform Acts, printed the size of the Acts themselves, so as to bind with them, has been sent to us. It seems to be carefully and laboriously constructed. A pamphlet on Scotch County Courts, full of facts and arguments, demands for that country a general reform of the local Courts, and the assimilation of them to our own County Courts. It is powerfully written, and will doubtless make a stir in the legal circles on the other side of the Tweed.

PROMOTIONS, APPOINTMENTS, ETC.

[Clerks of the Peace for Counties, Cities, and Boroughs will oblige by regularly forwarding the names and addresses of all new Magistrates who may qualify.]

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Arthur Edward Kennedy, esq. now Governor of her Majesty's Settlements in the River Gambia, to be Captain-general and Governor-in-chief in and over the colony of Sierra Leone and its dependencies.

Her Majesty has also been pleased to appoint Major Luke Smyth O'Connor to be Governor and Commander-in-chief in and over her Majesty's settlements in the River Gambia and their dependencies.

GOVERNMENT INSPECTORS OF SCHOOLS.—The Committee of Council on Education have appointed the following gentlemen to be her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools:—The Rev. R. F. Meredith, M.A. rector of East Chalborough, Somerset, and vicar of Halstock, Dorset; the Rev. Robert Louis Koe, M.A. incumbent of St. Margaret's, Yalding, Kent; the Rev. John G. C. Fussell, B.A incumbent of Chantry, near Frome; the Rev. William Berley, M.A. incumbent of Chorley, near Manchester; and the Rev. Thomas Wilkinson, M.A. vicar of Stanwix, Cumberland.

CORRESPONDENCE.

COUNTY COURTS—COSTS—CONCURRENT JURISDICTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—The case of Norman v. Marchant, reported in this month's number of the Law Journal, Rep. Ex. 256, leads me to suppose that where the cause of action arises wholly or in some material point within the jurisdiction of the County Court within which the defendant dwells or carries on his business at the time the action brought, notwithstanding the plaintiff and defendant reside more than twenty miles apart, the plaintiff is not entitled to costs in the Superior Courts, and that the Superior Courts have not concurrent jurisdiction within the meaning of the 128th section of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, and the 13th section of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61.

The 128th section seems to me to embrace three exceptions to the exclusive jurisdiction of the County Court, namely, where the plaintiff dwells more than twenty miles from the defendant—where the cause of action does not arise, &c. and where any officer of the County Court is a party on his own private account. These appear to me to be all separate and distinct exceptions, each one sufficient in itself to oust the exclusive jurisdiction of the County Court, and to make it imperative on the Court in which the action is brought, or a judge at chambers, according to the construction put upon the 13th section of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 61, to allow to the plaintiff his costs.

I fear there is something in the background in the report of this case, and by which it was decided, which does not appear, or at all events, does not occur to me; as it is stated, however, I think it calculated to mislead; I will therefore thank you or some of your kind contributors to set me right.—

I am, sir, yours, &c.

Manchester. +

A correspondent, signing "An Attorney, Birmingham," has also made a similar objection to the report in the Law Journal. We agree with our correspondents, that the case of Norman v. Marchant, as reported, is not to be relied on as an authority. The 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128, clearly gives concurrent jurisdiction to the Superior Courts, where the plaintiff dwells more than twenty miles from the defendant's, although the cause of action did arise within the jurisdiction of the County Court, wherein the defendant resides. The 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 13, as clearly gives the plaintiff his costs of proceeding in a Superior Court, where concurrent jurisdiction is thus given, and we are at a loss to discover how the Court of Ex. disposed of this argument. We may further remark, that the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, by which the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 13, is repealed, still gives the plaintiff his costs under the circumstances which are reported to have arisen in Norman v. Marchant.—ED. TRUST OF BATHS AND WASHHOUSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LAW TIMES.

SIR,—In the town of D. certain of the inhabitants have subscribed and erected baths and washhouses upon land given for that purpose by one of them. A committee was appointed for carrying out the object in view, and such committee are now desirous of having the land and buildings vested in trustees, upon trusts for carrying out the intentions of the parties, and for the benefit of the town.

Can any of your readers inform me where I can obtain a precedent for a document of the kind required? If such a plan is not feasible, what will be the best course to pursue.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

Sept. 16, 1852. A SOLICITOR.

CHAMBER BUSINESS OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY.—From the commencement of Michaelmas Term chamber business will be transacted in the Court of Chancery. This will be quite a new feature in Equity proceedings. By the 26th section of the new Act, abolishing the office of Masters (15 & 16 Vict. c. 80), it is provided that the business to be disposed of by the Master of the Rolls and Vice-Chancellors respectively, while sitting at chambers, shall consist of such of the following matters as the judge shall from time to time think may be more conveniently disposed of in chambers than in open court, viz.—applications for time to plead, answer, or demur; for leave to amend bills or claims; for enlarging publication, and also applications for the production of documents; applications relating to the conduct of suits or matters; applications as to the guardianship and maintenance of infants; matters connected with the management of property, and such other matters as each such judge may from time to time see fit, or as may from time to time be directed by any general order of the Lord Chancellor.

No successor has yet been appointed to the late Mr. Porter, in the office of Joint Secretary to the Board of Trade. Mr. M'Culloch, of the Stationery Office, has been named, among several other gentlemen, as one very likely to obtain this valuable appointment.—Observer.

BILLS IN CHANCERY.—From the 1st of November the practice of engrossing bills on parchment is to be discontinued, and a printed bill is to be filed instead in the Court of Chancery.

DEVONSHIRE, near SOUTH MOLTON.—Valuable Freehold Estate.

MR. W. H. HEWITT will SELL by AUCTION, at the AUCTION MART, London, on THURSDAY, OCTOBER the 14th, 1852, at Twelve o'clock, in one lot, all that highly desirable FREEHOLD ESTATE, and celebrated Grazing, Dairy, and Sheep Farm, called Kitcott Barton, situate in the parish of Romansleigh, near South Molton, in the county of Devon; consisting of a convenient farm-house, with a most complete range of outbuildings and farm appendages, all in thorough repair, and about 524 acres of valuable water meadow, and rich pasture, arable, and orchard land, all within a ring fence. This estate is distant about sixteen miles from Tiverton; five miles from South Molton, on the new turnpike-road: and about the same distance from the Colleton Station, on the North Devon Railway. It is in the midst of a fine sporting country and beautiful scenery, and is approached in every direction by good roads. The attention of capitalists is directed to this property, which presents a rare opportunity either for occupation or investment, and is also well adapted for the erection of a country-seat.—Full printed particulars, with lithographic plans, may be had twenty one days before the day of sale, at the Fortescue Arms, Barnstable; the Three Cups Hotel, Tiverton; the George Hotel, at South Molton; at the Auction Mart; also of the Auctioneer, at his Offices, 11, Hart-street, Bloomsbury-square, London; at Rutter's Reading-room, Shaftesbury; and at the Office of J. Farley Rutter, Solicitor, Shaftesbury.

Leasehold Investments of a superior class, for terms of nearly ninety years, at low ground rents, in a favourite western part of London, offering very eligible properties for parties desirous of increasing their incomes upon excellent sound securities.

MESSRS. DANIEL SMITH and SON will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, in lots, a very valuable LEASEHOLD PROPERTY, comprising seven well-built houses, known as Western Villas, on the bank of the Regent's-canal, and nine ditto, distinguished as Clifton Villas, pleasantly elevated; two good houses at St. Mary's-terrace and Park-place, Maida-hill: all at Paddington, principally let, and to respectable tenants, at improved rents of above 1,200l. per annum; also an improved ground rent in the same locality.—Descriptive particulars may be had at the Mart; of Messrs. R. and W. G. Roy, Solicitors, 4, Lothbury; and of Daniel Smith and Son, Waterloo-place, Pall-Mall.

Long Leasehold Houses and improved Ground-rents, most amply secured, offering very eligible and safe investments for small capitals, situate near Camberwell-grove, and at Clerkenwell and Pentonville.

MESSRS. DANIEL SMITH and SON will SELL by AUCTION, at the MART, on WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, at Twelve, in lots, several respectable LEASEHOLD HOUSES, held for long terms, viz.: Two capital Dwelling-houses, in Fountain-terrace, Camberwell-grove; Four in and near Lloyd-square, Pentonville, held for unexpired terms of sixty-nine years, at ground-rents less than one fourth of the actual rents; and a House in Brunswick-place, of which thirty-seven years are unexpired; also several improved Ground-rents, amply secured, for unexpired terms of sixty-nine and ninety-six years, upon eligible houses in Wharton-street, Clerkenwell.—Particulars may be had at the Auction Mart; of Messrs. R. and W. G. Roy, Solicitors, 4, Lothbury; and at Messrs. Daniel Smith and Son's Offices, in Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, when the houses may be viewed by permission of the tenants.

BOROUGH of DOVOR, in the COUNTY of KENT.—BIRCH, Mayor.—Notice is hereby given, that the Court of Quarter Session of the Peace, of and for the said Borough, and the Liberties of the same, will be holden before William Henry Bodkin, esquire, Recorder of the said borough, at the New Sessions House, of and in the said borough, on Thursday, the 14th day of October next, at the hour of Nine o'clock in the forenoon; at which time and place all persons bound by recognizance, or that have any other business to do at the said Session, are hereby required to attend.

The Grand Jury will be called and sworn at Ten o'clock in the morning, but appeals and any other business not requiring a jury will be called on at Nine o'clock precisely, and notice of every appeal intended to be heard must be given to the Clerk of the Peace two clear days at least before the Session.

LEDGER, Clerk of the Peace.

Dover, 11th September, 1852.

N.B. Persons having traverses to try at the said Session, are to give eight days' notice of trial, and the like notice is to be given in all cases of appeal not provided for by the 12th & 13th Victoria, chapter 45, or by any other Act of Parliament.

LANCASHIRE MICHAELMAS SESSIONS.—Notice is hereby given that the General Quarter Session of the Peace for the County Palatine of Lancaster, will be held at the Castle of Lancaster on Monday, the eighteenth day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and by adjournment at the following places and times, viz.:—

At the Court House in Preston, on Wednesday, the twentieth day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

At the New Bailey Court House in Salford, near Manchester, on Monday, the twenty-fifth day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

And at the Court House in Kirkdale, near Liverpool, on Tuesday, the second day of November next, at twelve o'clock at noon, on which day County Business alone will be transacted, and the Court will then adjourn to Wednesday morning at ten o'clock, for the transaction of the ordinary business.

And that all business relating to the assessment, application, or management of the County Stock or Rate, will commence at such Sessions respectively at twelve o'clock at noon of the first day thereof.

All Business arising within the Hundred of Lonsdale is transacted at Lancaster, within the Hundreds of Amounderness, Blackburn, and Leyland, at Preston, within the Hundred of Salford, at Salford, and within the Hundred of West Derby, at Kirkdale.

All Appeals are entered with the Clerk of the Peace, and motions made to the Court respecting them on the first morning of the Sessions at each of the above-named places,—except at Kirkdale, when such proceedings are to take place on the second morning, and the trial of such appeals takes place at Lancaster on the first day,—at Preston, not earlier than Thursday, the second day,—at Salford, on Wednesday, the third day, and at Kirkdale not earlier than Thursday, the third day.

The attorneys engaged in prosecutions at the said Sessions are requested to take notice that all instructions for indictments are required to be sent to the Clerk of the Peace's Office four days at least before the said Sessions respectively.

GORSTS and BIRCHALL, Deputy Clerks of the Peace.

Clerk of the Peace's Office, Preston, 14th Sept. 1852

BOLTON BOROUGH SESSIONS.—Notice is hereby given, that the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the Borough of Bolton, in the County Palatine of Lancaster, will be held before Robert Baynes Armstrong, Esq. M.P. Recorder of the said Borough, at the Police Office, Bowker's-row, within the said borough, on Thursday, the 7th day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place all jurors, constables, police officers, prosecutors, witnesses, persons bound by recognizances, and others having business at the said Sessions, are required to attend. JOHN GORDON, Clerk of the Peace.

Clerk of the Peace's Office, Bolton, 17th Sept. 1852.
